Soviets plan purge of rank-and-file Communist

By THORDORE SHABAD
New York Times Service

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union published Saturday the plans for a nationwide review of the Communist Party's rank and file with the aim of purging those "not worthy of the high calling of Communist."

The 14.5 million party members are viewed in this country as the model citizens who are expected to show the way to the rest of the nation's 245 million people in dedication to the political principles of communism, in expertise and diligence on the job and in an irreproachable style of personal living.

Discussing the criteria to be used in the proposed purge, an editorial in Pravda, the party daily, said examiners would be expected to ask themselves the following questions:

"How does the Communist view his duties on the job as well as his party instructions? Is he constantly raising his own ideological and professional level? How does he conduct himself in everyday life?"

The Pravda editorial made it plain that the purge was designed to transform the Soviet Communist Party into a more cohesive and dedicated political force that would insure implementation of the domestic and foreign policy objectives ordered by the Kremlin leadership.

The occasion for the cleansing of party ranks is a long overdue replacement of party cards to be carried out during 1973 and 1974. Party cards, the symbol of both political privilege and obligation in Soviet society, were last issued in 1955.

Although the party overhaul is being defined as a party-card exchange rather than a purge, the Pravda editorial said that the exchange of cards would "of course, not be simply a mechanical act of issuing new party cards in return for the present cards."

The editorial warned, however, against viewing the overhaul as an old-style party purge similar to those in the 1920's and 1930's when politically unreliable or even hostile members were eliminated from the rank and file and were often imprisoned or worse.

"Party purges of the past were designed to free the party of alien class elements," Pravda said. "Under the conditions of a class struggle within the country, this was essential to strengthen the party and raise its fighting capacity."

The focus in the forthcoming purge is expected to be on passive members who seek to benefit from the political advantages of party membership without contributing to the party's effectiveness as a coordinating and organizing force in Soviet society.

The Pravda editorial, covering half of the newspaper's front page, appeared to be a summary of a speech made Friday by Ivan V. Kapitonov, a high Kremlin official, at a closed party meeting laying plans for the purge.

As a national secretary charged with supervising party organizations and personnel, the 57-year-old Kapitonov will be the official directly responsible for the drive to weed out inactive and unreliable members.

He spoke Friday to a conference of regional party officials and political commissars of the armed forces, who, in turn, will be responsible for the purge within their party organizations. The meeting was attended by editors of leading newspapers and magazines, which will be expected to provide the proper slant in publicizing the campaign.

The plans for a nationwide cleansing of party ranks were first disclosed at the party's 24th congress in the spring of 1971, but the actual order for implementing the purge was issued only at a meeting of the Central Committee last month.

Toll grows as flood spreads havoc in East

At least 110 dead, 370,000 left homeless

United Press International

The rampaging Susquehanna River flooded half of the northeastern Pennsylvania city of Wilkes-Barre Saturday, stranding 600 persons in a 40-square mile lake along the banks of the usually peaceful stream.

In New York, where floodwaters are receding, one source said rescue workers have found dozens of new victims although the official death count stood at 11.

An unofficial source said at least 40 bodies were brought into makeshift morgues.

Widespread flooding was reported across the East Coast, mainly as a result of rains brought northward by tropical storm Agnes.

At least 110 persons have been killed — excluding the new victims in New York, scores are missing and 370,000 have been left homeless. Damage has soared past the $1 billion mark. In Wilkes-Barre, dozens of helicopters worked in relays dropping food and fresh water to 600 persons stranded in their homes by the rising Susquehanna. They were not believed in immediate danger, but the helicopter relays provided their only supplies.

PRESIDENT NIXON flew over Pennsylvania and Maryland in an Army helicopter earlier in the day. "We saw devastation everywhere," he said.

Florida, Maryland, Pennsylvania, New York and Virginia have been declared disaster areas.

New Jersey Gov. William T. Cahill called an emergency meeting of the Middle Atlantic Governor's Conference for today in Harrisburg, Pa., Cahill said the conference would discuss ways in which the states could receive all possible federal assistance and decide if existing federal programs are adequate in emergencies.

At least 47 persons have died in Pennsylvania — perhaps the hardest hit so far.

Girl, 2, dies of beating; Coast Guardsman held

By RUSS MacDONALD
and JAMES LEAVY
Staff Writers

A 2-year-old girl became the Long Beach area's seventh slaying victim in four days when she died Saturday afternoon of injuries suffered in a severe beating, police said.

Julie Ann Adams of 1140 Chestnut Ave. died at 1:40 p.m. at St. Mary's hospital. The child underwent surgery soon after she was brought to the hospital late Friday with head injuries and internal bleeding.

Officers Bill Meeks and Paul Milovich said the child's mother, Mary Louis Carey, 30, and Coast Guardman Lawrence Roy Kirk, 21, brought the child to the hospital.

They were both booked on charges of child beating. Later the woman was released and Kirk, who is stationed aboard the Coast Guard Cutter Glacier, was booked on investigation of murder.

Homicide Detectives Robert Bell and Doug Bostard said the suspects told him they beat the child because she was crying.

The wave of bloodshed and violence in Long Beach began Wednesday with the pick-ax slaying of John H. Gadow, 34, and Sandra Cole, 35.

The couple was found in a blood-spattered apartment at 1101 Cherry Ave. by neighbors Thursday morning. Ellis Charles Breland of 1151 Walnut Ave., Apt. 14, was booked on investigation of murder.

In what police described as the "bloodiest 24 hours in Long Beach area history," Michael Paul Cach of 12422 E. 221 St., Hawaiian Gardens, was stabbed and beaten to death in the parking lot of Dominguez Valley Hospital. The 61-year-old security guard was slain as he tried to prevent two youths from breaking into a parked car.

John Thomas, 18, of 2131 Bliss St., Compton, and Chickie Neal, 18, of 1218 Temple St. were arrested in connection with the murder a short time later.

NO VIET BREAK SEEN
Kissinger vague on Asia

By ROBERT B. SEMPLE JR.
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Henry A. Kissinger said Saturday that he had discussed the Vietnam War at length with Chinese leaders but reported no clear signs of a break in the present diplomatic impasse.

President Nixon's national security adviser returned to the capital Friday after nearly four days of talks with Premier Chou En-lai and other Chinese officials and gave newsmen a general review of the trip at the White House Saturday morning.

Kissinger expressed the hope that a careful rereading of the peace proposals set forth in the President's May 8 address on Vietnam, combined with sober reflection of its "failure" to achieve a military solution to the war, might in time persuade Hanoi's leadership to resume "serious" negotiations.

But he said he agreed with a judgement expressed earlier Saturday by Secretary of State William P. Rogers that there were no "clear signs" of progress. He said it seemed logical to him that the Paris talks would resume when a major policy review now under way in Hanoi is completed, but that the key question is not whether the enemy is willing to talk but what it is prepared to offer.

Kissinger seemed hopeful of progress between the two countries on such bilateral issues as trade and cultural exchanges, and said he and his delegation had been received with "extraordinary courtesy." But most of the questioning Saturday morning, and most of his comments dealt with Vietnam.

When he left Washington eight days ago, it was widely believed here that, in addition to bilateral issues, Kissinger was anxious to probe the attitude of the Chinese leadership on two related questions: Peking's willingness to nudge North Vietnam toward a settlement, and its ability to help arrange a settlement.

On the first point, Kissinger said that no useful purpose could be served by disclosing details of his private conversations on China's attitude on the war.

"Events" he said, "will be more important than what we may say."

He asserted that not only China but "all countries in the world now have an interest in bringing about a peaceful solution." But he also noted that the Chinese were "men of principle" who were not prepared and had not been asked by the United States "either to betray its principles or to sit in judgment on its allies in North Vietnam."

"We have no information about the relationship of North Vietnam to its two principal allies," Kissinger said. "We recognize that both the Soviet Union and the People's Republic of China are dedicated to their principles. These principles are not identical with ours and, of course, they have a close relationship to the Democratic Republic of Vietnam. What fluctations these relationships may undergo at any particular time we are in no position to judge."

In these and other comments, Kissinger appeared to be disclaiming any knowledge that Moscow and Peking might be prepared to ask Hanoi to soften its negotiating stance, without, however, foreclosing the possibility that this could happen.

South Viets break up new assault on Hue

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese forces drove toward Hue again Saturday but forewarned South Vietnamese troops drove them back across the northern defense line, inflicting heavy casualties, field reports said.

Waves of U. S. B52 bombers attacked the enemy ground forces today in an attempt to forestall further assaults on the old imperial capital's defenses. Some of the strikes were within 12 miles north and west of Hue.

The warning of Saturday's North Vietnamese attack came in time for artillery to be moved in.

"We anticipated the attack and moved about three dozen artillery pieces north to be within range," an allied officer told Associated Press correspondent Michael Putzel.

"When the attack hit, we opened up."

Allied air strikes and South Vietnamese tanks also helped beat back assaults at four locations south of the My Chanh River defense line, about 25 miles northwest of Hue.

Twenty-two enemy tanks were reported knocked out. The Saigon command said today at least 57 North Vietnamese troops have been

$500,000 hijacker still eluding intensified hunt

PERU, Ind. (UPI) — A hijacker who parachuted from a jetliner with more than $500,000 ransom money early Saturday was hunted by lawmen with dogs, planes and on foot in the woods and farm fields southeast of here.

By nightfall police had found no trace of the man who bailed out at about 10,000 feet into darkness from the second American Airlines 727 jet he commandeered.

THE COMMAND post at Peru said the hunt had ended for the night but would be resumed "at first light" this morning.

Police said when he jumped, the man was believed carrying the weapon, which the FBI said may have been a machine gun, with which he took control of the first plane at midafternoon Friday.

He was also believed to have jumped with a canvas mail sack containing $502,500 handed over by the airline in St. Louis, Mo., and two shovels.

James Martin, special agent in charge of the Indianapolis FBI office, said late Saturday afternoon the search was concentrating in wooded area since aerial surveillance of the open country and farm fields, where crops are just up, had not led to any clues on the hijacker's whereabouts.

The search area was widened and included a strip along the Wabash River southeast of here. The 12,830-acre Mississinewa Reservoir, five miles south of Peru, was being patrolled in boats by conservation officers but there were no dragging operations.

THE FBI WOULD not comment on possibilities that the hijacker may have been killed in his jump, that he had an accomplice on the ground and was spirited from the area before daylight, or what he might have intended to do with the shovels.

It was the first hijacking since members of the International Federation of Air Line Pilot Associations staged a one-day strike Monday to dramatize their demand for international measures to prevent hijackings.

More than 100 lawmen were involved in the search for the hijacker — described as a man about 30 with long, dark hair, a pockmarked face and wearing green trousers with a light brown or gold sport jacket.

Lone survivor may quit sea

Combined News Services

The lone survivor of a sea tragedy which apparently took the lives of 20 Japanese fishermen said Saturday he "just doesn't know" if he'll ever go to sea again."

"I didn't have any hope of being saved," said the survivor, Koyoshi Onodera, 22, as he told of his 10 days adrift in a life raft after the crew of the Kaigata Maru No. 10 abandoned ship during a raging fire.

"I was surprised when I saw a plane circling over me," he said.

Onodera, dressed in navy-blue denims and looking healthy but solemn, met with newsmen on the Coast Guard cutter Jarvis moments after it docked at Pearl Harbor.

The Jarvis had taken Onodera aboard June 19 after a plane spotted him several hundred miles south of Honolulu, alone in one of the Kaigata Maru's two liferafts.

The search for other survivors was called off Thursday.

Onodera, the Japanese fishing vessel's first mate, said all of his shipmates got off the burning vessel late June 9 before he and the captain leaped into the sea.

Onodera said the first 15 men to leave were last seen swimming for one of the ship's two liferafts. He said he was quickly separated from all of his crewmates.

The liferaft in which he was found was the same one his shipmates had pursued, but Onodera said he came across it, empty, after swimming for several hours.

Though afire, the ship did not sink. It was found by searchers. The Coast Guard said the Jarvis shelled the burned-out hulk and sank it Friday at the request of the owners because it posed a potential hazard to navigation.

Determined to continue a career which spawned 84 books, she comments in a voice which belies her age: "I'm always full of plans."

Capote sued

Author Truman Capote is the subject of a damage suit filed in Jackson County Circuit Court by a Kansas City man who alleges Capote failed to pay him for help in assembling "In Cold Blood."

Richard Parr, who filed the suit Friday, seeks payment of 10 per cent of royalties and $10,000.

Parr maintains Capote promised the $10,000 fee and 10 per cent of royalties for help with the book, based on the murders of the four members of the Herbert Clutter family in Holcomb, Kan., in 1959.

Gathering of warrior WASPs

More than 400 members of the World War II Women's Air Force Service Pilots (WASPs) — about half of the force still alive — met Saturday for their 30th convention in Sweetwater, Texas.

There were 1,074 WASPs in World War II. Thirty-seven were killed in the war. Death has reduced the total number of survivors to about 850 since the war.

The WASPs flew 60 million miles in World War II, towing targets, ferrying bombers and fighters, testing repaired planes and flying weather and courier missions.

"I'm glad to be back with my girls," WASPs comamnder Jaqueline Cochran said in a sentimental moment. "I know you're all over 50. I know because I've got records on you all."

Col. Bruce Arnold, son of wartime Army Air Corps Chief of Staff Henry "Hap" Arnold, at a Saturday dinner read the speech his father made in October 1944, closing WASP training at Avenger Field.

200 IN 'GAY PARADE'

Dallas homosexuals march

DALLAS (UPI) — About 200 homosexuals, in dress that included jeweled sandals, halter tops and hot pants for men and jeans, T-shirts and boots for women, staged the first "gay parade" in Dallas history Saturday.

They marched in a tight group through the center of the downtown business district despite objections by the City Council.

The council held a special meeting Thursday to see what could be done about the parade but was advised by the city attorney to do nothing because of federal court decisions on constitutional freedoms.

Three or four thousand spectators, some holding children by the hand, watched the 15-block parade.

"Look at that! Look at that!" some spectators exclaimed, pointing at the marchers who replied, "Ho! Ho! Homosexual!"

The marchers carried signs saying: "Mom, Dad, Surprise!", "I'm one, too," "Different Strokes for Different Folks," and one directed at the bystanders, "Some Of You Are Gay Too."

The marchers, joined by one clergyman and several floats and cars, disbanded at a church.

The parade ended without incident and Dallas police said there were no special problems.

Dying boy achieves dream, wins trike-building contest

CHICAGO (AP) — An unusual three-wheeled vehicle stands next to the bed in Jimmy Heinz' hospital room. A trophy sits nearby.

The two are symbols of triumph for the 10-year-old boy.

Jimmy is on the critical list at the University of Illinois Hospital, suffering from Hodgkin's disease, cancer of the lymph glands.

He has been in the hospital 10 times in the three years since he contracted the disease. Attendants have told his family he won't go home again.

Despite his illness, Jimmy had one great ambition — to build a tricycle to enter in the Wheel of Fortune Motorcycle Club contest in his home town of Aurora, Ill.

"In the last six months Jimmy's condition has been getting worse," his mother said Friday. "But he wanted more than anything to build this trike. He helped my father on his truck, collecting junk. He saved his money and bought parts for his project.

"Then he started working in our garage. He grew weaker, it seemed, by the day. He would sit on a chair, lean over, and put parts together.

"He spent much of his time working on the trike between treatments and hospital visits. He knew he had a severe illness, but he didn't know what it was. We didn't tell him."

Jimmy finished the tricycle Saturday. On Sunday, his creation won first prize for workmanship and distinction. On Monday, Jimmy's parents took him back to the hospital.

"After we told him he won, he wanted to go home to see his trike. He couldn't. We brought the trike to him," Mrs. Heinz said.

THE POSSIBILITY of violence was the main topic at the special council meeting. Councilmen also expressed fears that the demonstration could jeopardize a $17-million bond issue up for vote Tuesday.

"Homosexuality is hated like the seven-year itch and people's tempers get out of hand over something like this," Councilman Doug Fain said. "Someone is going to get shot out there."

Mayor Wes Wise said that his office received complaints about the parade, but that they were not as numerous as when the city refused to allow Halloween trick-or-treating last year.

Gunman shoots up bus station

Warren Gamieal Stephenson, 49, of Raleigh, was still holding a jammed 22 caliber semiautomatic rifle and carrying a box of ammunition when he was arrested by one of the officers who happened to be in the bus station when the shooting occurred.

AT LOS ALAMITOS STATION

Army pledges pollution limit

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

Few environmentally adverse operations will be permitted at Los Alamitos Naval Air Station if it is converted to an Armed Forces Reserve Center, the Sixth Army at San Francisco Presidio pledged Saturday.

A 68-page environmental-impact report outlined the operations of the proposed reserve-training center and said it would be less disturbing than the Navy's warplane flight operations had been before they closed down in March 1970.

The Sixth Army report said about $3.5 million would be spent at Los Alamitos NAS to prepare it for conversion into a reserve training center. This will include alterations and repair, plus construction of other buildings needed for the AFRC.

The environmental-impact report, which will be subject of a special meeting of the Los Alamitos City Council on July 17, also will be reviewed at an July 19 at Golden West College in Huntington Beach.

The Army recommended industrial development of the 800-acre property northeast of the station in the city of Cypress. It said that residential development on this land would be "highly undesirable" because it lies in the approach corridor.

If 750 military personnel are quartered on the station, additional schools would probably be needed. They might be plagued by noise of training helicopters, but they could be sound attenuated.

Requirements for utilities will be static, because the reserve-training center will have fewer personnel than the Navy had when it was training fighter pilots under the "weekend warrior" program.

The traffic pattern to and from Los Alamitos NAS is "excellent," the Army said. Because of easy access there will be no need for additional road work, it was estimated.

The problem of noise — perhaps the most irritating problem of all to the residents of the city of Los Alamitos and surrounding municipalities — was probed extensively by the impact study.

The Army was frank to admit that, since Los Alamitos shut down flight operations two years ago, householders have become used to the relative quiet. The report conceded that helicopters on training flights will be noisy and will arouse homeowner opposition, but it insisted that the noise problem will be less than when the Navy was operating its fighter planes.

Under the "weekend warrior" reserve-training program, the Navy had 114 fighter planes attached to various Naval and Marine squadrons. Some of them were jets equipped with after-burners and they were noisy. The Army disclosed that it plans to have 119 helicopters by the end of 1972; there will be only two small propeller-driven fixed-wing aircraft.

Air traffic density will be heaviest from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. and most of it on the weekends although there will be flight activities every day.

The Army, which intends to be the major occupant of the naval air station, pledged that the departure corridor would be over the Seal Beach Naval Weapons Station, and an approach corridor for the helicopters would also be mapped over the station. Flight operations will require all aircraft to be at least 1,000 feet above residential districts.

Elaborate tests of noise impact of fixed-wing aircraft were made for the Sixth Army, and they form the core of the environmental-impact report

For the purpose of the decibel readings the station and surrounding area were divided into 10 sites. The Army conceded that "strong community response in the form of threats of communiey action may occur" at four of the sites during peak periods of aircraft activity. Minor objections to flight patterns may result from two other sites, it was estimated.

Obviously intent on touching all bases, the Army also noted that during the time of the noise testing with helicopters in flight over the station and surrounding areas, only 62 telephone inquiries were received by Los Alamitos Naval Air Station officials. The majority of these were from Seal Beach which lies south of the station.

"Most of the individuals calling merely asked whether helicopters were being restationed at NAS Los Alamitos," the report claimed.

There will be minor interference but only occasionally — with radio and television antenna reception during flight operations, it was claimed.

Aircraft operations will produce some air pollution, but only in "minor amounts," the Army insisted. Because its craft are not as powerful as the Navy fighter jets, and will not fly as often, the air pollution is expected to be minimal. In addition to the Army helicopter training, the Marine Corps will fly up to 50,000 practice landing, takeoff and hover operations annually.

Current plans for the reserve-training operations call for 113,000 flights annually. By way of comparison there were 135,000 annual air operations when the installation handled the Naval Air Reserve training.

Lastly, the Army conceded there will be some adverse environmental effects, but insisted they cannot be avoided. The report said that the greatest adverse environemntal effect will be from the increase in noise levels which will be marked because the air station is not now conducting flight operations.

Catalina rescue study set

In the wake of yet another drowning accident on the west end of Catalina, Los Angeles county supervisors have ordered a study on rescue jurisdiction in the Twin Harbors area of the island.

Supervisor Burton W. Chace spearheaded the drive for a review by the county chief administrative officer and county counsel to determine which agency is responsible for saving swimmers, divers and sailors on the west end of the island.

Chace lost out Wednesday in his effort to add $76,561 to the county's budget that would have allowed a county rescue boat to be stationed in the Isthmus area of the island. The defeat of his motion came almost at the same time that Navy doctors were losing their battle to save the life of 29-year-old Kenneth Ausmus aboard the hospital ship Repose.

County lifeguards had taken the El Monte police dispatcher to the ship by helicopter after their efforts to revive him had failed. He was pronounced dead on arrival. Ausmus was the fourth person to drown this year in the Twin Harbors area, one of the most desirable swimming and boating spots on the Pacific coast.

In defeating Chace's motion to station a county rescue boat in the area, Supervisor Kenneth Hahn said he felt the basic problem was better use of personnel from 46 boats for emergency and rescue work now operated by various jurisdictions in the county.

"There are too many lifeguards in the administrative brass that never put on a bathing suit," Hahn complained. Meanwhile more people pour into the Twin Harbors area daily and the accident and death toll keeps climbing.

"The idea of a county rescue boat is something that we've been advocating for some time because of the tremendous loss of divers and swimmers on the west end of the island," said Doug Bombard. Bombard is manager of the Santa Catalina Camp and Cove Agency, a private company that administers the island for its owners, the P. K. Wrigley family.

"As private operators, we wind up answering a lot of distress calls, something we're not prepared or trained to do," he said.

According to Bombard, the rescue situation on the island is getting worse. He said that in 1971, his small patrol boats responded to nine calls of divers in trouble, six of whom died. There were also nine boat sinkings in the area of Twin Harbors, seven boats aground, eight Coast Guard evacuations to the mainland for heart seizures and broken bones, and 26 emergency tows for boats that were in trouble or had lost power.

If the accident and death rate so far this year is any reliable indicator, said Bombard, the situation will be even worse. His small patrol boats have so far responded to four drownings, three boat sinkings, seven Coast Guard evacuations and five emergency tows.

"I feel strongly that the county should provide one of their rescue boats for the area," Bombard continued. "I might add that in last year's drownings, several of the victims were over here on those skin-diving arrangements where they dive straight from a boat. They never come ashore and we have no way of knowing that they're even here . . . until it's too late."

Bombard said that his company does not have rescue boats and that his 18-foot patrol craft are not prepared to save lives. "The county does have these rescue boats," he said. "They're 35 feet long and manned by professional lifeguards and divers who are trained in rescue and lifesaving.

"I think it's about time that the county started doing its job," he concluded.

In making his motion Thursday that the county find out once and for all which agency has jurisdiction for rescue in the Twin Harbors region, Chace told the supervisors point-blank that, "I don't see how we can push this problem under the rug and do nothing about it.

"Let's find out whose responsibility it is."

Chace said he expects to see the jurisdictional report within 30 days. "If we don't find out who is responsible for saving lives out there," he said, "I'm going to find out why."

In arguing that present county resources could be better deployed, Hahn said Wednesday he felt that the responsibility for water safety in the Twin Harbors area rests with the private owners of the island.

Bombard and Chace don't agree. Both later stated that pleasure boat operators provide the county with a substantial amount of income and that some of it ought to go to protect an area that falls within the county's geographical jurisdiction.

"These boat owners pay a lot of taxes," said Bombard. "They ought to be getting something for their money."

Pedestrian killed; youth dies in crash

A Cypress man was struck and killed by a car as he crossed a street in Hawaiian Gardens early Saturday.

In another accident, a teen-ager died after his car went out of control in La Mirada, and smashed into a utility pole.

Herman S. Walsh, 45, of 5180 Dresden Circle, Cypress, was hit by an auto as he crossed Carson Street at Violeta Avenue in Hawaiian Gardens at 2:45 a.m.

Walsh was crossing the street to go to a doughnut shop while his wife was making a phone call, sheriff's deputies said.

The car that struck him was driven by Jimmy E. Grisson, 40, of 8151 Vista Del Rosa, Downey, who was not cited. Deputies said Walsh was jaywalking.

In the other accident, Daniel Amador, 16, of 14729 Horst St., Norwalk, was killed when his car went out of control and hit a utility pole at Imperial Highway and La Mirada Boulevard Friday at 9 p.m.

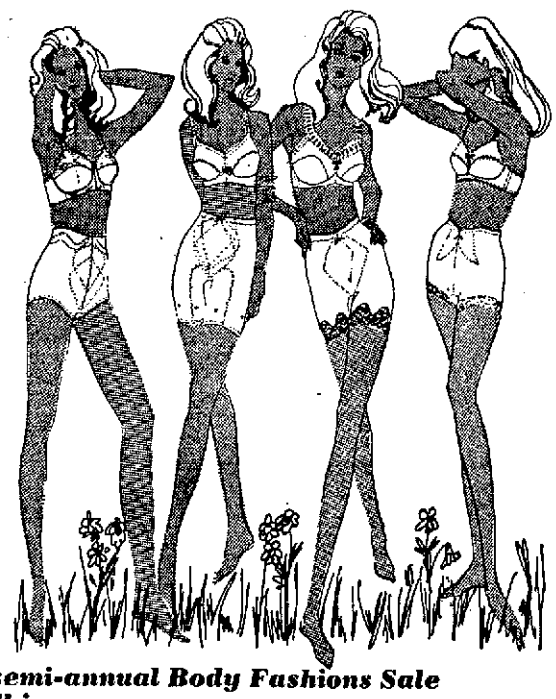

He was dead on arrival at La Mirada Community Hospital.

Rogers off on 17-day world tour

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State William P. Rogers left on a 17-day world tour Saturday, saying he had cause for hope the Communists may be ready to negotiate in earnest at the Paris peace talks.

Rogers was en route to Pago Pago by way of San Francisco and Hawaii on the first leg of his journey which will take him to Canberra, Australia for Monday's meeting of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization ministers.

He told a planeside news conference before leaving Andrews Air Force Base that North Vietnam's offensive into the south has been unsuccessful and "it is quite clear they are disappointed." And, he said, the U.S. blockade of the north has been "quite successful."

"THESE and other indications in the diplomatic community give us hope that the other side is interested in negotiations," Rogers said.

Rogers said the indicatinos he referred to were signs that other world governments were trying to pressure Hanoi to take a new approach in the Paris discussions. He admitted, however, there has been "no clear signal" of a Communist willingness to resume the talks.

He said President Nixon's May 8 proposal linking a return of U.S. prisoners to a four-month withdrawal of all U.S. combat troops was "most generous in its terms. We would hope that they would realize that there is a good opportunity to use President Nixon's proposal."

ROGERS' official duties begin on Monday at the ministerial council meeting of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization and the foreign ministers meeting of the Anzus which links the United States, Australia and New Zealand in a defense pact. The meetings are regarded by administration officials as primarily routine gatherings.

After Australia Rogers will make a brief visit to Indonesia June 30 through July 2. The United States holds the Djakarta government in high regard for its steady economic achievements after the suppression of the attempted Communist takeover in 1965.

Rogers will then arrive in Eastern Europe via the Persian Gulf area where he makes stops at Bahrain and Kuwait.

Rogers described his visits to Yugoslavia, Hungary and Rumania as a mission of "considerable importance." He will be briefing leaders in those countries on the Moscow summit meetings — the first time the United States has included reports on such a major international conference to countries associated with the Soviet bloc.

Nixon gets 'poor grade' in education

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The new leader of nearly 1 million classroom teachers said Saturday she gave President Nixon poor grades on education and would encourage "our people to support candidates friendly to education."

Mrs. Alvia Barfield, who takes over Sunday as head of the Association of Classroom Teachers, said in an interview that she agreed with Mrs. Helen Bain, former head of the National Education Association, who a year ago called Nixon "an underachiever in education."

The ACT, which will be phased out next year in a reorganization of the parent NEA, winds up a two-day meeting of 3,000 delegates in advance of the opening Monday of the NEA's 100th annual meeting.

New Nader study hits job agency

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new Ralph Nader report released Saturday says a watchdog agency has dismally failed its job of upgrading and increasing minority employment in the federal government.

What little has been done by the Civil Service Commission to improve the lot of women, Chicanos and blacks among 2.5 million government workers has been marked more by public-relations gimmickry than real change, the report says.

PREPARED by the nonprofit Public Interest Research Group, the report calls for the resignation of Irving Kator, chief of the commission's Federal Equal Employment Opportunity Program.

"Despite the commission's alleged emphasis on 'affirmative action' programs to achieve EEO results, its . . . programs are a patchwork fashioned more with a view toward 'Image' or public-relations impact than efficacy in the attainment of minority-group and female employment and promotion," the report said.

Among the reports' major complaints:

— The commission through unwarranted delays has discouraged low-ranking minority employes in the federal hierarchy from using a complaint system to claim job discrimination.

— The commission has ignored studies that its Federal Service Entrance Examination is geared to test only middleclass white education and intelligence levels.

— Though the commission appoints a small number of minority members to "windowdressing" jobs with high rank, the real power within the agency in Washington and in regional offices remains with whites.

— Many employes fear the complaints about discrimination to the commission will cost them their jobs.

— When complaints of discrimination are acted on and agreed to be correct, supervisors often are given a slap-on-the wrist reprimand with no resulting loss in job or financial status.

— Statistic reports to Congress and the Civil Rights Commission often conceal what's really happening. Statistics on minority employment, for example, may show dramatic improvement, but they are based upon the almost zero increases of previous years.

— The commission has permitted the Pentagon to virtually ignore President Nixon's order that the government take the lead in improving levels of minority employment.

The report, written by Harvard Law school graduate M. Weldon Brewer, concludes if the commission does not take advantage of the power available to it as the agency charged with reducing federal discrimination and, "if the commission does not write a new script, it may well find one written for it."

Detroit appeals integration rule

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Board of Education has asked the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for an immediate review of District Judge Stephen Roth's order to desegregate schools in the Detroit metropolitan area.

The motion requests the court to hear the appeal during August, before schools are scheduled to reopen. The board is appealing both Roth's finding that segregation by law exists in the Detroit School District as well as his order to desegregate Detroit and 52 suburban school districts.

McGovern 176 shy of nomination

Associated Press

Sen. George S. McGovern of South Dakota moved to within 176 votes of a first ballot nomination at the Democratic National Convention next month as state caucuses were held Saturday in a handful of states — Arkansas, Delaware, Nebraska, New York and Washington.

At day's end, McGovern's nationwide delegate vote total stood at 1,333.15. It takes 1,509 to nominate.

The biggest boon to the prairie senator's candidacy came in New York. McGovern garnered 226 delegate votes in Tuesday's primary. He picked up an additional 32 votes Saturday, winning 25 at-large delegates, commitments from the newly selected national committeemen and five presviously uncommitted delegates.

The state committee meeting also voted to send New York City Mayor John V. Lindsay, an early dropout among presidential aspirants, to the convention as an uncommitted delegate.

In Washington state, however, McGovern appeared to lose ground as the Democratic convention ousted McGovern delegates with eight votes from the state group headed for Miami. The Washington delegation heavily favors Sen. Henry M. Jackson of the Evergreen state.

McGovern forces indicated they would appeal to the credentials committee of the Democratic National Convention.

The shift in Washington would give Jackson 52 of the state's 58 delegates. Six at large delegates remained to be selected as the convention worked into the night, but they were expected to be awarded to Jackson.

In Delaware, McGovern picked up an additional 5.85 delegate votes under a complex formula. Rep. Shirley Chisholm of New York was awarded 0.65 of a convention vote and the balance of the 13-vote delegation was uncommitted.

A special Democratic convention in Little Rock, Ark., went whole hog for Rep. Wilbur D. Mills of Arkansas, giving him 27 votes, for a national total of 29.

In Nebraska, meanwhile, McGovern picked up 15 of the states' 22 alternate delegates. The South Dakotan had won the May 9 primary and captured 18 regular delegate votes to four for Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota. Humphrey won five alternates. Two alternates were uncommitted.

Democrats in other states had housekeeping meetings to plan for the Miami Beach convention. At one such gathering in Columbus, Ohio, there were indications McGovern might pick up some delegate votes previously committed to former Cleveland Mayor Carl B. Stokes, now a newscaster in New York City.

The Stokes delegates voted solidly for candidates put up by McGovern forces in a futile effort to challenge old-timers pledged to Humphrey for leadership posts within the delegation.

Elsewhere, in Minneapolis, the Minnesota Republican Convention Saturday chose 10 at-large delegates pledged to President Nixon. Nixon has already sewed up renomination. Prior to the weekend he had 938 delegates with only 674 needed for nomination.

Wallace gets bid to Bremer trial

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (AP) — George C. Wallace has been invited to testify at the state trial of Arthur Herman Bremer, who is accused of trying to kill the Alabama governor.

Arthur A. Marshall Jr., state's attorney for Prince Georges County, said Wallace was one of 46 persons named Friday in subpoenas for the trial, scheduled to begin here July 12.

The prosecutor said, however, that he did not feel Wallace's testimony was essential and would not compel the wounded politician to attend Bremer's trial.

There was no indication from Holy Cross Hospital in Silver Spring, Md., whether Wallace would accept the invitation. He is recuperating from surgery last Sunday to remove a bullet that had been lodged in his spine since the shooting at a Laurel, Md., shopping center May 15.

The trial is scheduled to start the week of the Democratic National Convention, an event the governor is said to be planning to attend if he is physically able.

Marshall said one of his assistants would deliver the subpoena and a letter to Wallace Monday.

Bremer, being held under $400,000 federal-state bail, is accused by Maryland of assaulting Wallace and wounding three other persons and with violating the state's gun control law.

The defendant is scheduled to go on trial July 17 in U.S. District Court in Baltimore on federal charges stemming from the shooting. He had pleaded innocent to all charges.

Sweeping reform proposal OKd by Demo rules body

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sweeping reform proposal designed to give the Democratic party a broad national base and solid financing was approved by the Rules Committee Saturday for presentation to the Rules Committee Saturday for presentation to the national convention.

The plan, rewritten in the committee by supporters of Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota to reduce the influence of existing party organizations, faces stiff opposition in Miami Beach from party regulars.

An alternate proposal, calling for further study and no action on any reform for at least two years, will be put before the convention in the form of a minority report from the Rules Committee. It has the backing of many state party leaders.

The Rules Committee, completing preparations for the July 10 convention and laying plans for the 1976 convention, took these other actions:

— Nominated a black woman, Yvonne Braithwaite of Los Angeles, to be vice chairman of the Miami Beach convention. Larry O'Brien, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, will be chairman.

— Voted to eliminate winner-take-all presidential primaries by adopting a resolution that would divide a state or district's delegates among the presidential candidates in proportion to their vote.

— Sought to end cross-over voting in Democratic primaries by Republicans by proposing that only delegates elected by registered Democrats be seated at national conventions.

— Adopted a resolution that would require seating a woman as chairman of the 1976 convention and alternating the position between men and women at each following convention.

All the committee's proposals will have to be approved by the national convention to take effect.

The basis of the new party structure being proposed is a national Democratic party, supported by enrolled, dues-paying members. Only enrolled members could vote in party caucuses for delegates to conventions.

Although membership fees would not be required, they would be encouraged and the sponsors of the proposal expect such fees to provide the basic operating funds for the party.

Rep. Don Fraser, D-Rep. James G. O'Hara' D-Mich., of the reform commission that drafted the plan, said if only 500 couples could be enrolled in each of the 435 congressional districts and induced to pay $10 per couple, it would meet the $2 million annual budget of the party.

The plan calls also for greatly expanding the national committee by adding members elected at the grass-roots level and convening a national policy conference between presidential nominating conventions to elect the national chairman and establish party policy.

As it came to the committee floor it called for 150 members to be elected to the national committee from the local level, and 1,900 delegates to the national policy conference. An amendment presented by the McGovern forces increased the numbers to 175 and 2,500.

The amendment also eliminated seven members of Congress and four representatives of the Conference of Democratic Governors who had been proposed for national committee membership by the O'Hara-Fraser panel. After strong criticism of the provisions eliminating them by North Carolina State Democratic Chairman Don Fowler, it was restored.

Fowler presented the alternative plan endorsed by the state chairman. It would provide for a 50-member study commission to look into party reform and prepare recommendations for a national policy conference to be convened in 1974.

Only on the final day of the three-day session did the committee have all its members seated. The Florida delegation, which had been denied certification becauseits committee assignments had not been equally balanced between men and women, finally came into compliance after losing a court battle to be seated.

Florida delegate Alex Preece of Fort Lauderdale, had the final word on the subject, however. As the session was ending, he offered a resolution that would have required nominating a woman for vice president on the Democratic ticket. It was perfectly in keeping with the rule that kept Florida from being seated, he said, but Chairman James G. O'Hara ruled it out of order.

YIPPIE JEFF NIGHTBYRD AT MIAMI
Convention Protest Groups Map Strategy
—AP Wirephoto

Campsites deal irks protesters

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Protest organizations hoping to bring thousands of nondelegates here during the political conventions refused Saturday to accept two campsites outside Miami Beach. They called a secret emergency meeting to discuss strategy.

The move came in the wake of Miami Beach City Council's refusal Friday to provide live-in campsites and an offer by Miami and Dade County to allocate camp grounds on Watson Island and Haulover Beach, several miles from Convention Hall.

"None of the groups will accept Watson Island or Haulover Beach," said Jeff Nightbyrd, spokesman for the Youth International Party. "We will continue to press for a realistic campsite."

NIGHTBYRD said the meeting had been called of representatives of the Yippies, Zippies, Southern Christian Leadership Conference, the National Coalition of Gay Organizations, the National Tenants Organization and Women's Lib to plan what action to take.

"We are holding the meeting in secret," he said. "We don't want any spies reporting on us to the police."

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference in Atlanta said the SCLC has made no change in its plans to hold a tent city during the conventions.

"Consequently, our plans are still the same," said the spokesman. But he said SCLC representatives plan to meet with Miami Beach city officials Tuesday to attempt to negotiate for a campsite.

NIGHTBYRD said the groups were angry because Miami Beach City Council had refused to allow them to use golf courses as campsites but had agreed to allow the National Guard to use two as staging areas.

"They told us we couldn't use the golf courses because we would disrupt citizens who wanted to play golf," he added.

"Now they let the National Guard use it. The whole thing is a sticky mess."

Watson Island is in Biscayne Bay between Miami and Miami Beach. It is linked to the six-mile resort city by a causeway. Haulover Beach is about six miles north of the Convention Hall.

Miami Beach Mayor Chuck Hall says he hopes to reverse the City Council's decision before the Democratic Convention opens July 10. The Republican gathering is slated to begin Aug. 21.

GOP picnic will honor new citizens

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Eight Long Beach Republican Federated women's clubs will sponsor their annual picnic honoring new citizens July 4, noon to 3:30 p.m. in Bixby Park, according to Frances Gregory and Naida Hanson, cochairmen of the Los Angeles County Republican Central Committee, 32nd Congressional District.

Invited guests include Congressman Craig Hosmer, R-Long Beach; State Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach; Assemblyman James A. Hayes, R-Long Beach, candidate for 4th District county supervisor; John Ratterree, nominee for Congress, 34th District; James Sutton, nominee for state Senate, 33rd District; Wilbur R. Richardson, nominee for Assembly, 4th District, and Bill Bond, nominee for Assembly, 39th District.

Participating clubs and their presidents are: 32nd Congressional District, Olive Laubscher; GOP Juniors, Nan Drake; Lakewood-Long Beach; Carol rawford; Long Beach Council, Elva DeLyre; Evening Division, Marie Paul; North Long Beach, Inez Ten Napel; Signal Hill, Doris Miller, and Long Beach-Los Altos, Florence Bowers.

McGOVERN CORRECTION

Correct date for the benefit send-off party for Long Beach area 32nd Congressional District delegates on the Democratic National Convention delegation of Sen. George McGovern is 2 p.m., July 2, not today as announced in an earlier story.

The $3 a person, $5 a couple party will be in the Anthony Homer residence, 4408 Heather Rd., Long Beach.

PEACE RALLY JULY 4

Peace action groups will sponsor an Independence Day picnic and rally July 4 at Founders Park, Whittier, with the theme, "Independence, peace and justice for Indochinese and Americans."

Groups will assemble at 11 a.m. at Whittier College for the march to the rally site. Sponsoring groups include the Peace Action Council, Peace and Freedom party, Vietnam Veterans Against the War, National United Front to Free Billy Dean Smith, Student Union for Peace and Justice, Angela Davis Defense Committee, Young Workers Liberation League, Gary Lawton Defense Committee and the Immigration Coalition.

NEVER BE THE SAME

Open primary changes picture

By BILL STALL

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The California primary election never will be the same.

Beginning in 1976, California will have an "open" presidential primary election in which all recognized candidates will be listed on the Democratic and Republican ballots.

The secretary of state will determine who is a recognized candidate and only by filing a sworn affidavit of noncandidacy could such a contender get off the ballot.

STATE SEN. Alfred Alquist, a Democrat from San Jose, has been battling for the open primary since 1968. Three times, with Republican help, he managed to push a bill through the Legislature to create such a primary, patterned after Oregon's "all-star" primary. But it was vetoed each time by GOP Gov. Ronald Reagan.

This year, Alquist tried a different strategy and landed a proposed constitutional amendment on the ballot. It won by a margin of more than 3-2 in the June 6 primary election.

Alquist said polls indicated the measure would pass with no trouble and the proponents didn't bother to campaign actively for the measure, which appeared on the ballot as Prop. 4.

"It was purely a popular decision," Alquist said in an interview. "There was never any doubt in my mind but that the people would approve it overwhelmingly."

Now, the silver-haired senator is drafting legislation to implement the amendment.

HIS BILL would also do away with the winner-take-all aspect of the California primary and substitute a system of proportional representation at the national conventions based on how well each candidate did in the primary.

Thus, rather than Sen. George McGovern winning all 271 of the state's delegate votes at the Democratic National Convention, the proportional system would have given McGovern only about 44 per cent of the delegates — the percentage of his popular vote in the field of nine candidates.

Reagan and other opponents of the "open" primary have argued that the primary already was open.

HOWEVER, a candidate had to go through a relatively complex procedure to get on the ballot, including appointment of a delegate-selection steering committee and filing of nominating papers with as many as 17,199 signatures of supporters with the secretary of state's office.

Under the present system, a potential candidate was able to pass up the California primary if he felt he would not do well in the state.

In 1968, Reagan was able to freeze Richard Nixon, Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York and other potential GOP candidates out of the primary by running as a California favorite son.

THE DEMOCRATIC primary system was complicated further this year by party reforms that required each potential candidate to hold a series of delegate-nominating caucuses in each of the state's 43 congressional districts in February.

Alquist's legislation would eliminate that system and provide for delegate selection after the primary.

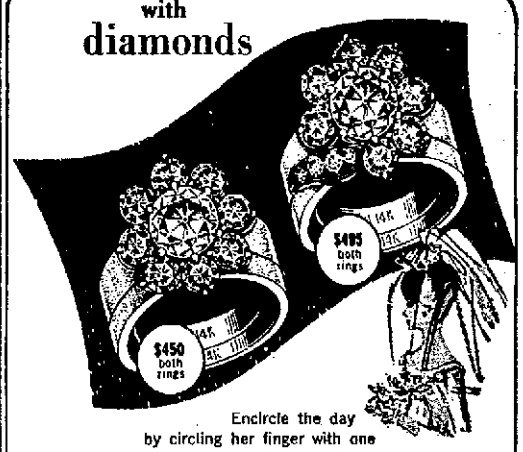

Gravel still has ambition to be VP

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Sen. Mike Gravel says he's interested in the Democratic nomination for vice president but hasn't talked about it with Sen. George McGovern.

"I haven't discussed it with anyone in high office," the Alaska Democrat said in reply to a question at a luncheon meting of the Sacramento Press Club.

Summary, reward review of Secret Witness cases

As part of these newspapers' Secret Witness program, summaries of all cases in which rewards are offered will be printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Thursday and Sunday. The summaries follow.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the men who fatally beat, tortured and burned disabled World War II veteran Clarence Huigar, 53, of 1386 Peterson Ave., after breaking into his home at about 10:30 p.m. on Sunday, March 19. Huigar died of his injuries 25 days later, on April 13. The men are described as Negroes in their mid-20s, one 6-ft. tall, weighing about 180 pounds, with a medium-length Afro hairdo, and the other 5 feet 4 inches, weighing 150 pounds. In connection with the case, Long Beach police are seeking, for questioning only, Sandra Sue Razor, 22, a white woman, 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighing 140 pounds, with blonde hair and blue eyes.

— A $2,000 reward is in effect for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who bludgeoned to death Lino Campos, 40, and his son, Gavino, 18, both of Baja California, last Feb. 10. Their bodies were found near the trailer in which they slept each time they made a trip to the A and J Wrecking Yard, 22632 S. Alameda St., Carson.

—A $2,000 reward is in force for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer of Mrs. Marguerite June Makeig, 50, shot in the head and killed when she returned to her home, 10608 Felson St., Bellflower, on the afternoon of Aug. 11, 1971. Mrs. Makeig had been shopping. When she walked into her living room, someone armed with a small-caliber handgun fired once, the bullet striking her in the head. The slaying was apparently motiveless.

— Two thousand dollars is being offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the men who killed Elliot C. Lawson, 38, during a holdup at the Atlantic Inn, 1854 Atlantic Ave., at about 1:10 a.m. on July 16, 1971. The killer is described as Negro, about 25 years old, 5 feet 7, 130 pounds, with a two-inch Afro hairdo. The man has a slender face, large eyes, a slender nose, and a smooth medium complexion. He has a deep voice, is straight in posture and is well-groomed.

— A $2,000 reward is in effect for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person who killed Horace William Clark, 19, a Marine corporal stationed at Camp Pendleton, who was stabbed to death in Wilmington last Christmas Day. Clark left the base alone at about 8 a.m. to have Christmas dinner with friends in Wilmington, but never arrived. His body was found the next morning beside a dirt road leading to a junk-yard at 831 Sampson Ave.

— A $2,000 reward is in effect for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of cab driver Michael A Miller, 27, of Downey, who worked the night shift for the Southeast Taxi Co., Compton. Miller was found dead at about 11:20 June 8. He had been shot twice in the back of the head in the 200 block of East Reeve Street. Robbery apparently was not the motive for the slaying.

— A 2,000 reward is in force for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer of Independent, Press-Telegram pressman Frank M. Schiavone, 41, and his wife, Shirley, 44, who were shot from ambush May 9 upon returning to their home in Westminster after an evening out. Westminster police are seeking to question a man believed to have been the last person to have seen the Schiavones alive. The man was with them in Woody's Bar, Springdale Avenue and Garden Grove Boulevard, Westminster, shortly before they were murdered. He is described as a white man in his mid-20s to early 30s, from 5 feet 10 to 6 feet 1 in heighth, with wavy dark brown hair, a medium-dark, olive complexion and a pock-marked square face, with high cheekbones.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killers of Long Beach auto wholesaler Robert Wilson Cogley, 44, shot to death in the parking lot of the Highway Center Liquor Store, Pacific Coast Highway and California Avenue, at 1:40 a.m. last Aug. 12. Cogley's killers are described as Negroes between 16 and 19 years old, and from 5 feet 7 to 5 feet 10 in height.

—One thousand dollars for information leading to the capture of fugitive Clinton Hamer Baker, alias Bobby Joe Brummert, who escaped from a state prison camp in Tulare County last Oct. 3. Baker, 31, was serving a sentence for robbery and assault after being captured in Long Beach when accidentally wounded by his woman holdup partner in an abortive stickup attempt at Poor Richard's Bar, 6412 E. Stearns St., on March 1, 1970. Baker is a white man, 5 feet 11, weighing about 170 pounds, pale complexion, medium build, with brown hair and hazel eyes. He has friends and relatives living in Inglewood and may be frequenting the Long Beach area.

—A $2,000 reward for information leading to arrest and conviction of the killer of cab driver Donald Eugene Beard, 44, shot to death Dec. 24 in the 1200 block of Loma Vista Drive at about 4:20 a.m. Prior to his death, Beard told police a car containing five Negro men pulled up to the curb and that the man sitting on the front passenger's seat asked him how to get to Willow Street, aimed a pistol and fired.

FIDEL AIM DEADLY ON CZECH HUNT

PRAGUE (UPI) — Cuban Premier Fidel Castro killed two chamois with a high-powered rifle on a hunting trip in the High Tatras Mountains Saturday, the Czechoslovak news agency CTK reported.

CTK said Castro showed he was an experienced hunter with his "accurately aimed shots."

Rain and fog hampered the hunt, also attended by high-ranking government leaders.

Ulster violence perils truce

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A surge of violence Saturday threatened to sabotage a cease-fire proposed by the Irish Republican Army's Provisional wing and accepted by the British.

Militants from the Provisional wing claimed they laid the remote-control land mines that killed three British soldiers near Dungiven Friday night.

The provisional leaders called a truce for midnight Monday by the mining indicated some IRA guerrillas may be defying the order to halt the fighting.

The British army called the mining a "patently planned murder attack." Besides killing the three soldiers, the blast seriously wounded five other persons, including one civilian. Seventeen-year-old Patrick McCullough was shot to death from a speeding car as he stood on a street corner in the Catholic Antrin Road District of Belfast. Neighbors claimed it was the work of Protestant extremists. His 15-year-old fiancee was wounded in the neck.

The killings raised to 382 the number of persons slain during three years of fighting in the province.

The McCullough shooting raised fears of an IRA reprisal which might prompt a Protestant backlash.

The commander of the Provisionals had insisted it was a "matter of honor" to observe the truce and that anyone who disobeyed would be punished and perhaps shot. Seamus Twomey, the commander, also promised a lessening of guerrilla activities before the cease-fire but there was an upsurge of shootings in the 24-hour period after his announcement.

A soldier was wounded in Belfast by a gunman who opened fire on an army party working on the roof of the Alber Street Mill. Another man, a 53-year-old shopkeeper, was found shot and seriously wounded near his home on Crumlin Road.

Europe bankers trying to prevent floating of pound

PARIS (AP) — Top European bankers and treasury men ended day-long talks Saturday apparently without full agreement on plans to stop the floating of Britain's pound from touching off a wider world money crisis.

Olivier Wormser, governor of the Banque de France, told newsmen after two separate rounds of intensive discussion that the money markets of the 10 nations involved will not open before Tuesday at the earliest.

This suggested that an extension of the shutdown that began Friday may yet be ordered unless full agreement is reached by finance ministers who meet Monday in Luxembourg.

"The British decision will have important consequences," Wormser declared after presiding over a committee of the governors of 10 central banks in Europe.

THE 10 PARTICIPATING countries were the six of the European Common Market — Belgium, France, Germany, Italy, the Netherlands and Luxembourg — and the four applicants for membership — Britain, Ireland, Denmark and Norway.

Although Wormser did no spell out what the "important consequences" of floating the pound sterling might be, it was clear they would not be confined to Europe.

In Malaysia, for instance, officials of that British commonwealth country's central bank said it had been "kicked out" of the sterling money area. This was a reference to the introduction of new British curbs on capital movements to most countries that traditionally have pegged their currencies to the pound.

And in the rich oil-producing state of Kuwait, financial authorities reported the sheikdom might "walk out of the sterling area" because of the British decision. Although Kuwait in recent times has drastically cut back its big pound deposits in London its withdrawal from the sterling area could spell the end of the system sooner than London would wish.

WORMSER summed up the purpose of the emergency meeting of central bank governors: "... to examine the consequences of the British decision to float the pound and to try to make up one of several recommendations about future policy."

Britain's decision on Friday to float the pound's dollar exchange rate — a move many European experts said amounted to a devaluation — broke a commitment made in May to the Common Market countries to keep its currency from fluctuating by more than 2¼ per cent against theirs.

The two-stage Paris talks started Saturday with the 10 European delegations approaching the problems with at least three different solutions in mind:

THE BRITISH view was that the effects of floating the pound had been exaggerated. London felt the true strength of sterling would be revealed after a time and world confidence in Britain's money would return. A refixing of the pound's parity, perhaps somewhat below its former $2.6057 level, then could follow in orderly fashion before Jan. 1 when Britain is due to join the Common Market.

— The Belgians, with Dutch and Luxembourg backing, came intending to press the idea that the market as a group should float their linked currencies against the dollar as soon as the markets reopen. This would save the market system of closely pegged currencies, which is at the heart of the community dream to form an economic and money union. But it would effectively destroy the Smithsonian agreement, which last December realigned the world's main currencies and which the Nixon administration appears to want preserved.

— France was reported in total opposition to both approaches. President Georges Pompidou regards the float system as bad in itself and certainly a threat to the plan for a monetary union. Sources said France went into Saturday's meetings determined to argue first for firmer market controls on money exchange rates in line with its own two-tier policy, and second for stiffer market pressures in favor of a higher official gold price.

Travel agent busy trading for pounds

LONDON (UPI) — Britons besieged the 12 offices of travel agent Thomas Cook Saturday scrambling to change their pounds for foreign currency before taking off for foreign vacations.

The government's decision Friday to break the pound away from its $2.6057-dollar exchange rate and "float" the currency to find its own natural level created anxiety and confusion for vacationers.

The treasury advised travelers to take foreign currency with them where possible because the best rates were available in London.

Waiting customers formed long lines waiting for Cook's offices to open at 7:30 a.m. The counters were staying open until 10:30 p.m. Commercial banks and most other money changing operations were closed, as they normally are Saturdays.

Facts You Should Know About Rubies

by Mike Dreyer

Here are some guidelines for you when you select a ruby as set forth in the booklet "Facts You Should Know About Jewelry" by the Better Business Bureau Educational Division.

Ruby — The term "ruby" refers to the transparent to translucent variety of the mineral corundum. Its color is red with only limited traces of other tints or hues. The color is due to the presence of minute quantities of metallic oxides. The variety which exhibits a six-ray star is known as the Star Ruby. In 1894 a French chemist succeeded in producing a synthetic ruby having most of the distinguishing characterisitcs of the genuine Ruby. Natural rubies generaly contain characteristics recognizable through a loupe by an expert jeweler. For example, the natural ruby generally shows an internal texture of straight and parallel lines of striation whereas the synthetic ruby frequently shows curved lines, never straight lines. Natural rubies may contain what seem to be angular shaped gas bubbles, whereas such bubbles in synthetic rubies are round or rounding. There is more of a carmine coloring in most red synthetics, thus differing from the red of the ruby. Synthetic rubies should be described as such. Ruby is the Birthstone for July.

Pakistan's aims at conference

Editor's note: President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto of Pakistan is flying to India this week for a summit meeting with Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. Here are assessments of the coming Indira Gandhi. On this and the following page are meeting, from AP correspondents.

By ARNOLD ZEITLIN

RAWALPINDI (AP) — All that President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto expects from his meetings this week with India's prime minister, Mrs. Indira Gandhi are agreements to restore diplomatic relations and to meet again.

"Don't expect much," Bhutto told a recent meeting of Pakistan's newspaper editors and intellectuals.

He goes into the meetings with Mrs. Gandhi in India on Wednesday as the head of a country abruptly halved in population by the secession of Bangladesh in East Pakistan, staggered by alarming economic depression and humiliated by defeat in the war with India last December.

But Bhutto has been calling for this summit ever since he took over as president Dec. 20 from the defeated general, Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan.

THE MEETING offers him two major opportunities: one is to start toward establishing normal realtions with Bangladesh and create a formula for the return of 93,000 soldiers and civilians held in India since the war.

The other is to start the end of 25 years of confrontation between Moslem Pakistan and Hindu India.

The latter opportunity is the most immediate.

Bhutto already has indicated he does not want to discuss what he regards as issues only between Pakistan and Bangladesh at a summit with the Indian prime minister. However, in preparation for the summit, he has gradually disclosed his growing commitment to r e c o g n i z e Bangladesh — one condition for the eventual return of the prisoners.

ANOTHER ISSUE is Kashmir, an old dispute between the two countries. The largest part of Kashmir went to India after Britain left the subcontinent in 1947. Pakistan claims all of Kashmir.

On Kashmir, Bhutto wields the threat that any imposed settlement will foster Pakistani hostility toward India and thus require heavy spending on arms money needed for development in both countries. But Bhutto has implied he would let the Kashmir dispute cool until the two countries can make another attempt to settle it peacefully.

Despite his interest in m e e t i n g Mrs. Gandhi, Bhutto has shown a reluctance to tackle the immediate solutions to big problems.

The government-owned Pakistan Times said, "The accumulated tensions and misunderstandings of the past 25 years cannot be dissolved in 25 hours, 25 days or even 25 weeks."

India and Pakistan exchange prisoners

RAWALPINDI (UPI) — India and Pakistan Saturday exchanged more sick and wounded prisoners of last December's two-week war.

A total of 200 Pakistani and seven Indian POWs were involved, along with 28 Indian civilians.

India still holds about 93,000 Pakistani soldiers and civilians.

Indira, Pakistani to meet

By MYRON L. BELKIND

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi says she has one main objective in her meeting with Pakistan's president this week: a durable peace on this subcontinent. But there is little optimism in this Indian capital that the goal will be reached, mainly because of Zulfikar Ali Bhutto himself.

The Indians don't trust the Pakistani leader. They see him as the symbol of the 25 years of mutual distrust and hatred that have marred relations between India and Pakistan since they became independent in 1947.

AS FOREIGN minister in the old regime of President Mohammed Ayub Khan, he was known as an anti-Indian hardliner.

Some senior Indian officials are known to feel that Bhutto's main objective at the summit will be to get back his 93,000 military prisoners of war and civilians, then return home and revert to his former anti-Indian stance.

"We aren't going to let this happen," said one Foreign Ministry official. "This is why we will want a package deal."

Outwardly, the Indians insist they won't even discuss the POW issue at the summit, because they say it also concerns Bangladesh.

STILL, informants here say that Mrs. Gandhi, if she is convinced of Bhutto's sincerity, may release at least some prisoners, probably mostly civilians and noncombatants, even without agreement on the other issues.

The other issues, in the Indian view, include:

Disengagement of troops along the India-Pakistan frontier. Since the Bangladesh war ended Dec. 17, Indian and Pakistani troops have remained at close range, with each side often accusing the other of cease-fire violations.

Exchange of captured territory. India says it holds 5,619 square miles of Pakistani territory taken during the December war, while Pakistan holds about 122 square miles of Indian territory.

Restoration of diplomatic relations. India says it is prepared to resume diplomatic ties, but that the first move must come from Pakistan.

Ultimately, Kashmir is expected to be the thorniest issue, since it had directly or indirectly contributed to all three wars fought between India and Pakistan since 1947.

INDIAN OFFICIALS have indicated India would drop its claim to the two-fifths of Kashmir held by Pakistan, if Pakistan would accept Indian sovereignty over the remaining three-fifths.

Some Western diplomats in New Delhi say there will likely be agreement on peripheral issues, which require no major concessions from either side, including restoration of diplomatic relations, reopening of the border and a partial disengagement of troops along their frontier.

"The summit will be a success if it merely starts the process of ending the cold war on the subcontinent," said one diplomat.

Seamans in Rio for air talks

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Dr. Robert Seamans Jr., secretary of the Air Force, arrived here Saturday on a five-day visit at the invitation of the aeronautics minister, Brig. Joelmir Araripe Macedo.

Seamans and a party of nine will visit Rio and Brasilia, and will leave for Buenos Aires Wednesday.

Official sources said Seamans will meet with senior civilian and military officials. The visiting U.S. party may discuss the modernization of the Brazilian air force.

U.S. to offer Mideast peace plan

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The United States will offer a new resolution on the Middle East conflict that will deal fairly with both the Arab and Israeli positions and "carry the hope of moving this whole area closer to peace," Ambassador George Bush told the Security Council Saturday night.

Bush's announcement raised to four the number of resolutions being prepared for the current emergency session of the 15-nation council, which began Friday night at the request of both Israel and Lebanon.

The council session was a result of three weeks of escalating tension and border incidents between the two nations since pro-Arab Japanese terrorists shot up Israel's Lod Airport May 30, killing 24 persons and wounding 81. Two of the terrorists also were killed, but a third survived the suicide mission and told Israeli authorities they had been trained for the assignment by Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon.

Bush gave no indication as to when the United States would present its resolution, saying only that it would be offered "at the appropriate time."

Council sources said resolutions also were being prepared by the four-nation European bloc, the Afro-Asian bloc and the Soviet Union.

Each of these resolutions would condemn Isreal for actions against Lebanon, the sources said, in reference to Israeli ground and air attacks against Palestinian camps in Southern Lebanon.

A major issue is the Israeli capture of five visiting Syrian army officers in a raid into Lebanon during the past two weeks.

Lebanon and Syria have charged Israel with abduction of the officers and demanded their immediate return.

Bush said the United States deplored the violence in the Middle East, condemned the airport massacre, respected the territorial integrity of Lebanon and was saddened at the loss of civilian lives in Israeli reprisal raids.

The proposed European bloc resolution, which was being circulated in draft form, condemned Israel for its incursions into Lebanese territory and called on Lebanon and Israel to exchange prisoners in accordance with the Geneva Conventions on Prisoners of War.

The Afro-Asian and the Soviet draft resolutions condemned Israel for incursions and called for an immediate halt of such raids.

Guerrilla vessel hit, Israel says

United Press International

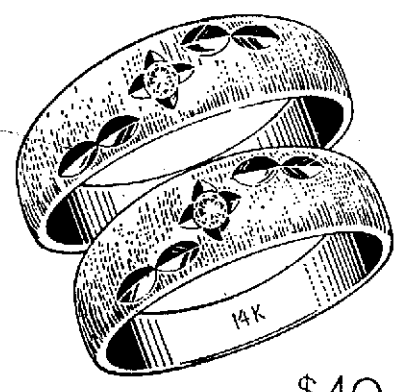

Israel said its gunboats sank an Arab guerrilla vessel off the Lebanese coast Saturday and its artillery shelled guerrilla bases in southern Lebanon. But Lebanese Premier Saeb Salam said Israeli raids would not force his government to crack down on guerrillas operating on its territory.

An Israeli military communique said its forces struck anew in retaliation for a rocket attack on the frontier settlement of Gesher Haziv. The Israeli chief of staff warned his country would take "all the necessary means" to end guerrilla attacks from Lebanon.

Both sides claimed victory in the clash between a guerrilla vessel and Israeli patrol boats off the ancient Lebanese coastal town of Tyre.

Brandt to schedule early vote

BERLIN (AP) — Chancellor Willy Brandt decided Saturday to seek a new mandate from the West German people with a November election, 10 months ahead of schedule.

His goal is to break an even split deadlock in the lower house of parliament. He has been unable to get action on critical issues, particularly the federal budget.

In a statement to the council of his Social Democratic party, Brandt confirmed the November election call first made public by Foreign Minister Walter Scheel to newsmen. Scheel is chairman of the small but pivotal Free Democrats in coalition with Brandt's Socialists.

THERE WAS no immediate word on exactly when the balloting would take place although there was speculation it would be early in November.

Helmut Schmidt, defense minister and Brandt's deputy as Socialist party chairman, told newsmen the party council had unanimously endorsed Brandt's call for a November vote.

Schmidt said he assumed that the chancellor would move for a no-confidence vote on the way to an early election. He rejected the idea that Brandt would resign. If a no-confidence motion failed to give Brandt a majority, then the parliament would be dissolved.

The opposition Christian Democrats have been after Brandt to either resign or implement a no-confidence motion on the way to breaking a 248-248 deadlock in the Bundestag, the lower house.

In his statement Brandt said he could not reach agreement with the opposition, causing him to act on his own. He rejected opposition criticism that he could no longer govern.

New cabinet list readied for Italians

ROME (AP) — Premier-designate Giulio Andreotti received full endorsement Saturday for the program of his center-oriented coalition from the four Italian parties that previously announced their support for the new government.

Sources said Andreotti will present the list of cabinet members to President Giovanni Leone today. Parliament is expected to act this week on the program.

Andreotti's program aims to restore economic stability and public order.

The premier-designate discussed the program in a joint meeting with the four parties at his office. Taking part were Andreotti's Christian Democrats, the conservative Liberals and the anti-Maxist Democratic Socialists, plus the Republicans who have pledged to support the alliance without entering the Cabinet.

ANDREOTTI'S government will be the first center coalition in Italy in 10 years. The center-left alliance, which included the Marxist Italian Socialist party, governed Italy the past decade. It broke up in January in a feud over the country's economy and the Socialists' links with the Communists.

The new government will have a bare majority in parliament, even with the backing of the Republicans. The Marxist Socialists have said they expect it to rule as a caretaker cabinet until fall, when the Socialists and the Christian Democrats have scheduled their national congresses which might produce a return to the center-left alliance.

1st Okinawa vote under Japanese

TOKYO (UPI) — Okinawans vote today in the first governor's election since their island was returned to Japan after 27 years of U.S. occupation.

The outcome of the election will have no direct bearing on the existing friendly relations between Japan and the United States.

No matter who wins, the United States will continue to maintain more than 40,000 military personnel on Okinawa under the U.S.-Japan security treaty.

In the race for governor are incumbent Gov. Chobyo Yara, 69, and former chief executive Seisaku Ota, 68.

Both men have had the experience of dealing with American Army generals who ruled the Western Pacific island for 27 years after the end of World War II.

INDIA WILL BUILD OIL REFINERY

NEW DELHI (AP) — The government announced Saturday it will build a $215-million oil refinery, the nation's largest, at Mathura, 85 miles south of New Delhi.

The import of middle east crude will be through amoored off-shore terminal in the gulf of Kutch which has an all-weather capacity to receive tankers up to 300,000-ton capacity.

A 750-mile pipeline will bring the crude from the terminal to the refinery.

Shah of Iran buying 'best arms available,' 3 SSTs

LONDON (UPI) — The Sham of Iran said Saturday he is shopping for millions of dollars worth of arms.

He told a news conference he is buying planes, tanks, missiles, laser-guided range finders and other weapons — many of them from Britain.

He said he also has decided to buy three Anglo-French Concorde supersonic airliners for an estimated $60 million each, including spare parts.

The Shah talked to newsmen for an hour at the end of a four-day private visit to Britain.

He was guest of Queen Elizabeth II at Windsor Castle, attended Ascot horse races and conferred with Prime Minister Edward Heath, Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home and Defense Secretary Lord Carrington.

"We are shopping for the best arms we can find anywhere, short of atomic weapons," the Shah said.

He said he is doing so to enable Iran to have an "independent foreign policy" and also to safeguard it against the possibility of "some smaller country starting an adventure somewhere."

Peron seeks top office in party

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Followers of ousted dictator Juan D. Peron prepared Saturday to elect him president of the "Justicialista" party at a convention today as a prelude to making him a presidential candidate in next March's election.

Party spokesmen said Peron himself instructed his "personal delegate," Hector J. Campora, to promote his election to the party post when they met in Madrid, where Peron, now 74, has lived in exile since getting the boot in 1955.

THE SAVOY Hotel convention probably will choose Peron's wife, Isabel Martinez, vice-president of the party, "Justicialista" leaders said.

In April, a federal court eliminated the last legal obstacle to Peron's return to Argentina by ruling that the statute of limitations had run out on the one remaining charge against him, "betrayal of the nation."

President Gen. Alejandro A. Lanusse and Peron have been engaged in cautious fencing, through intermediaries, on preparatons for the national election.

Lanusse's military supporters do not wish to see a return of Peron. However, they realize that the "Justicialistas" cannot be excluded from elections if social peace is to be maintained, since they are quite possibly Argentina's largest party.

PERON, who may or may not be serious about returning, is seeking to dissuade Lanusse from a proposed constitutional reform which would alter the electoral system and give the armed forces a direct voice in the government.

Lanusse has countered the bargaining potential of Peron's threatened return by hinting that he—Lanusse — may be a candidate himself.

Besides the Peronists, five other parties have inscribed for the nation's first scheduled presidential election since Arturo Illia was elected in 1963. The military deposed him in 1966.

Chile opposition says state controls industry

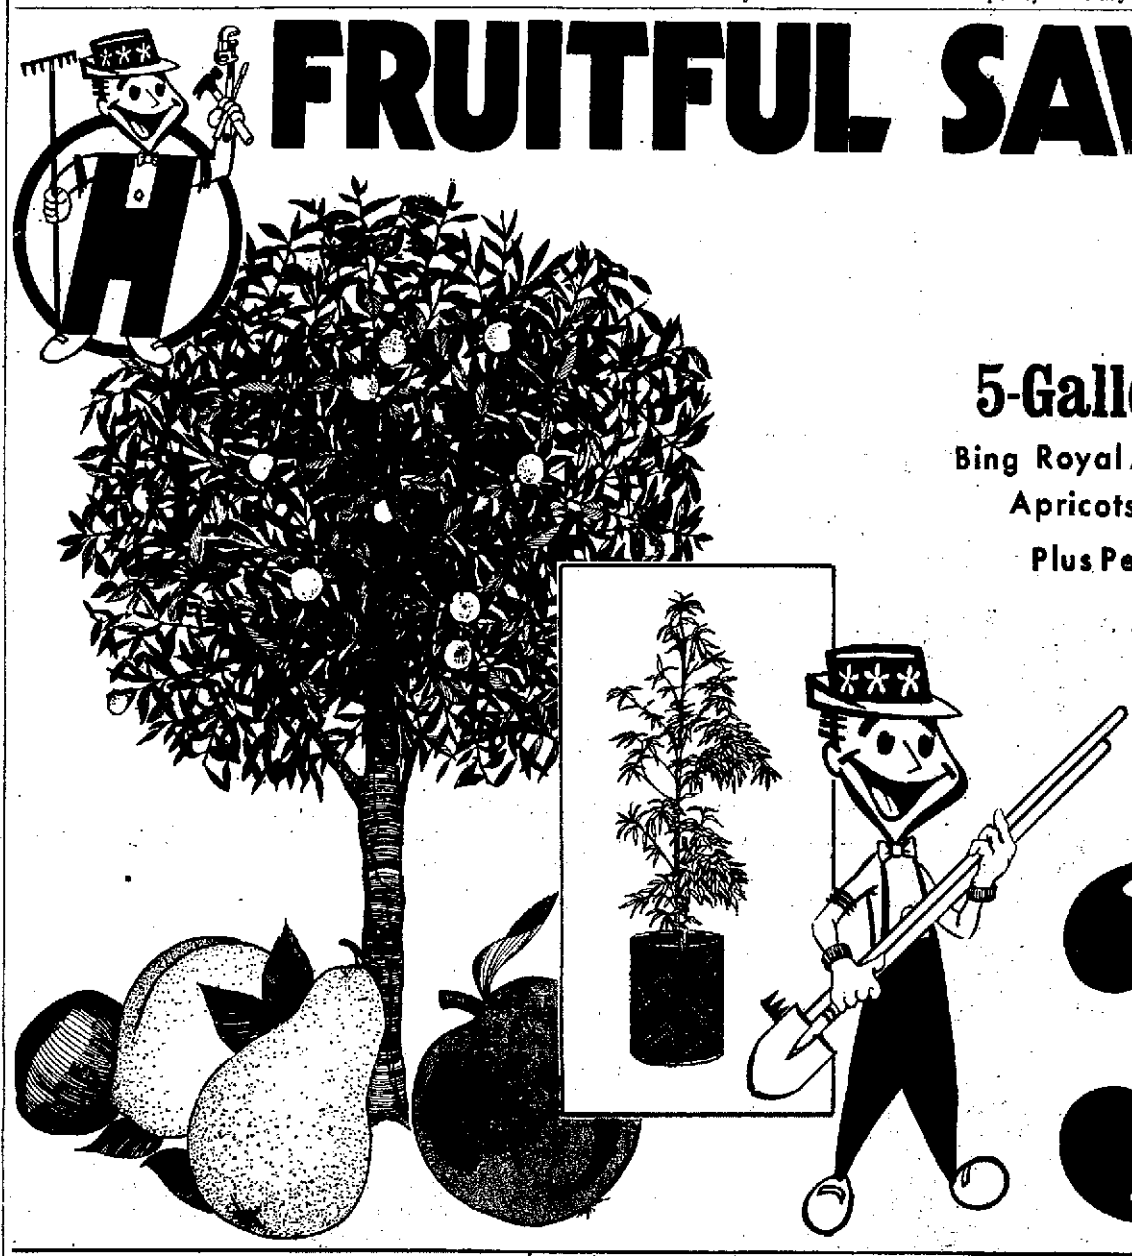

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The anti-Marxist opposition claimed Saturday that Chile's leftist government now controls a major portion of the national economy.

It said some wealthy Chileans are helping out by bowing to government pressures to sell their shares in private industry.

"We are now a Socialist state," the conservative and independent newspaper El Mercurio said in attacking the policies of Marxist President Salvador Allende. In his program to "open the doors to socialism" in Chile, Allende earmarked 91 industries for state takeover several months ago.

The newspaper said the government has exceeded this plan by putting under some sort of state control 238 big private industries.

U.S. bombs keep Japanese busy

INDEPENDENT,
PRESS-TELEGRAM—A-15
Long Beach, Calif., Sun., June 25, 1972

TOKYO (UPI) — Hiroshi Tanaka is a stocky, sociable major in the Japanese army whose job is disarming American bombs that fell on Japan in World War II but didn't explode.

Tanaka has been unscrewing the fuses of Yankee blockbusters for 15 years now. He expects to do it until he retires.

Although Japan surrendered almost 27 years ago, more than 2,000 live American bombs continue to be found and defused every year. Most are buried in the soil of Tokyo and Osaka, dangerous relics of the air raids that wrecked Japan's two largest cities in 1945.

TANAKA is one of 100 engineers assigned permanently to the army's elite Explosive Ordinance Disposal Unit. The navy has a similar corps to deal with more than 5,000 American mines, dropped during the war to menace Japanese shipping.

"The Americans tell us they dropped 161,400 tons of bombs on Japan in 650 missions during the war," Tanaka said in an interview. "Somewhere between 5 and 10 per cent of them were duds."

The majority were 500-pound bombs, but 1,000-pound bombs and one-ton "blockbusters" also are found regularly nowadays.

"The bombs were designed to explode on impact, but a lot of them fell in soft soil," Tanaka explained. "Some had manufacturing defects. In other cases, plane crews failed to turn off the bombs' safety switches, the last step in arming them before dropping."

MOST OF the bombs tunneled about 30 feet underground before coming to rest. Occasionally they explode years later without warning, possibly through deterioration of the fuses, Tanaka said.

The usual finders of the bombs are workmen digging foundations for new buildings. They are ever alert for "bomb tracks," the circular tunnels the missiles bored as they punched their way through the soil.

Tanaka said that when tracks are found, it takes about three days to locate the bomb and make the safety arrangements for defusing.

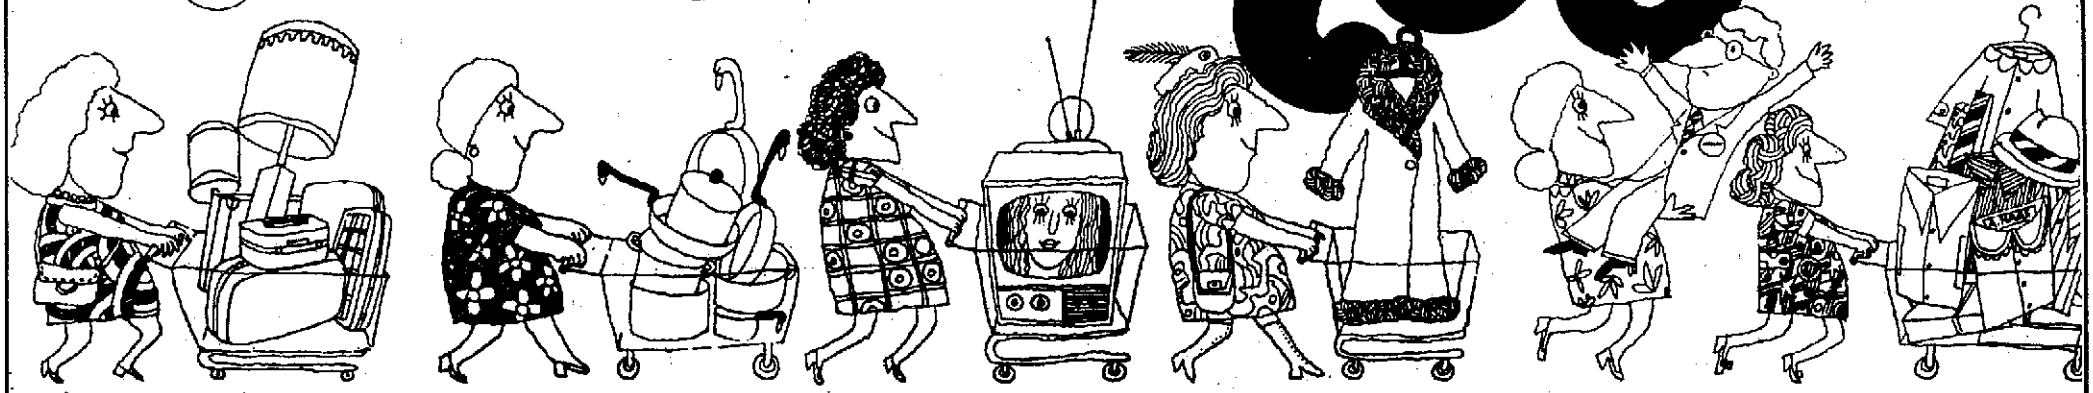

In March, 1971, 10,000 persons had to be evacuated from their homes in one Tokyo district while army engineers disarmed a 2,000-pounder unearthed in a freeway project.

Deaths from "leftover" bombs were frequent in the early postwar years, Tanaka said. There have been none recently and the army's bomb disposal unit has never lost a man.

DRUG-RADIATION USE

Gains cited over Hodgkin's disease

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Use of drugs in combination and radiation treatments are leading to dramatic improvement in the survival of patients with Hodgkin's disease, doctors attending a cancer seminar were told in Long Beach Saturday.

The symposium was held in St. Mary's Hospital under the auspieces of the hospital, the American Cancer Society of Los Angeles County and the USC area of California Regional Medical Programs.

Dr. Vincent T. DeVita, chief of the medicine branch of the National Cancer Institute, Bethesda, Md., said that 80 per cent of patients with Hodgkin's can achieve a complete remission of symptoms using a drug program known as MOPP. MOPP stands for the drugs used— Mustargen, Oncovin, procarbazine and prednisone.

HODGKIN'S disease is a malignant disease of unknown cause marked mainly by progressive enlargement of the lymph nodes. Other organs and tissues also become involved, and untreated, the disease may be fatal within three years.

He said that 41 per cent of patients who have achieved complete remsision (diappearance of symptoms) have remained continuously free of disease for periods up to eight years.

He said further that 70 per cent of patients are still alive at six years. Others have stopped therapy and still remained in remission, without relapse, for as long as 42 months, he continued.

The results are clearly superior to those obtained with use of a single drug, where few, if any, patients with disease are alive at five years.

Another speaker, Dr. Ronald W. Thompson, assistant professor of radiation therapy at UCLA school of medicine, said that the dramatic improvement in patient survival has been due, in part, to "application of megavoltage irradiation techniques."

DR. DeVITA said that drug treatments are also giving good results in the control of lymphomas, tumors of lymphoid tissue but of the non-Hodgkin's type.

At the National Cancer Institute, he said, medical researchers have, been admintsering three drugs over a five-day cycle. The drugs are vincristine, cyclophosphamide and prednisone. The cycles are repeated every 21 days for six months.

The results for the first 46 patients have proved superior to those obtained anywhere else, he reported. Fifty-four per cent have achieved a complete remission.

HALF of the program was devoted to the problem of breast cancer, and Dr. Malin R. Dollinger, director of the medical oncology service at Harbor General Hospital, Torrance, said that a new experimental drug, Calusterone, is eliciting a response in 50 per cent of patients in whom it is tried.

Calusterone, a male hormonal agent, has only about one-fifth of the side effects of the well-known drug testosterone, Dr. Dollinger disclosed.

Dr. John R. Benfield, associate professor of surgery at UCLA and chief of pulmonary surgery at Harbor General Hospital, described a national study which seeks to compare two types of surgical approaches to breast cancer.

One calls for breast removal plus adjacent lymph nodes in the armpit area. The other approach leaves the lymph nodes.

Dr. Benfield said previous procedures that called for giving drugs such as Thio-TEPA or 5-fluorouracil in conjunction with surgery showed that addition of the drugs was not beneficial.

Cancer experts off to Moscow

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five American scientists left for Moscow Saturday to exchange information on drug treatments for cancer with leading Soviet scientists, the National Cancer Institute said.

The team of government and nongovernment researchers is headed by Dr. C. Gordon Zubrod, scientific director for chemotherapy at NCI.

The exchange is part of a U.S.-U.S.S.R. health agreement to share results from cancer, heart disease and environmental studies, as announced by the Nixon administration and the Soviet minister of health in February.

New test detects risk of stroke

A simple, five-minute test can spot conditions that may lead to a stroke, two UCLA doctors reported Saturday in Carmel at a meeting of the International Cardiovascular Society.

Drs. Herbert I Machleder and Wiley F. Barker said the new test involves placement of an electronic device on the forehead just above the eye.

The instrument enables the examining physician to hear and record highly amplified sound waves of blood flowing through a surface artery (the ophthalmic), which is a branch of the deep-lying internal carotid artery. The carotid arteries supply the major portion of blood for the brain.

THE SOUND-wave pattern thus reflects the condition of the internal cartotid artery. This blood vessel is a common site of vascular disease that leads to stroke.

Most strokes occur when the internal carotid artery becomes clogged from hardening of the arteries. When blood (and oxygen) supply to the brain becomes insufficient, a portion of the brain dies. This cutting off, even for a short period, of the blood supply to the brain can cause one form of stroke.

As the diseased blood vessel narrows, the patient may experience transient episodes of insufficient blood supply to the brain. Symptoms, which may last for up to 10 minutes, include blurred vision, slurred speech, weakness and numbness of extremities.

Significance of the new test is this: If the artery condition is diagnosed in time, treament may be started to prevent stroke. For one thing, anticlotting drugs may be given to keep blood clots from forming. Or a surgeon may repair the narrowed segment of the carotid artery.

One problem in diagnosing prestroke conditions has been the inaccessibility of the internal carotid artery to externally applied diagnostic tools.

One way to tell is to use a procedure called cerebral angiography. But this requires hospitalization and involves risk, which physicians are reluctant to take unless convinced it is absolutely necessary.

THE NEW procedure is called the Doppler Ophthalmic Test. It utilizes a Doppler flowmeter, which acoustically measures flow through blood vessels.

The UCLA doctors have used the test on 123 patients so far. Twenty-three of the group were found to have severe impairment of the internal carotid arteries. The condition had not been detected by previous diagnostic studies, which included hospitalization.

The artery involvement was confirmed by cerebral angiography.

Dr. Machleder says the test has great potential as a screening procedure for persons who are a high risk stroke. The test is regarded as harmless, and is inexpensive and simple to perform.

Rosemead girl killed in crash

TWENTYNINE PALMS (UPI) — A teen-age Rosemead girl was killed Saturday when her boyfriend's car swerved out of control and overtuned on Desert Highway 28 miles east of here.

The California Highway Patrol said the victim, Mary L. Quinlivan, 16, died at the Twentynine Palms Community Hospital.

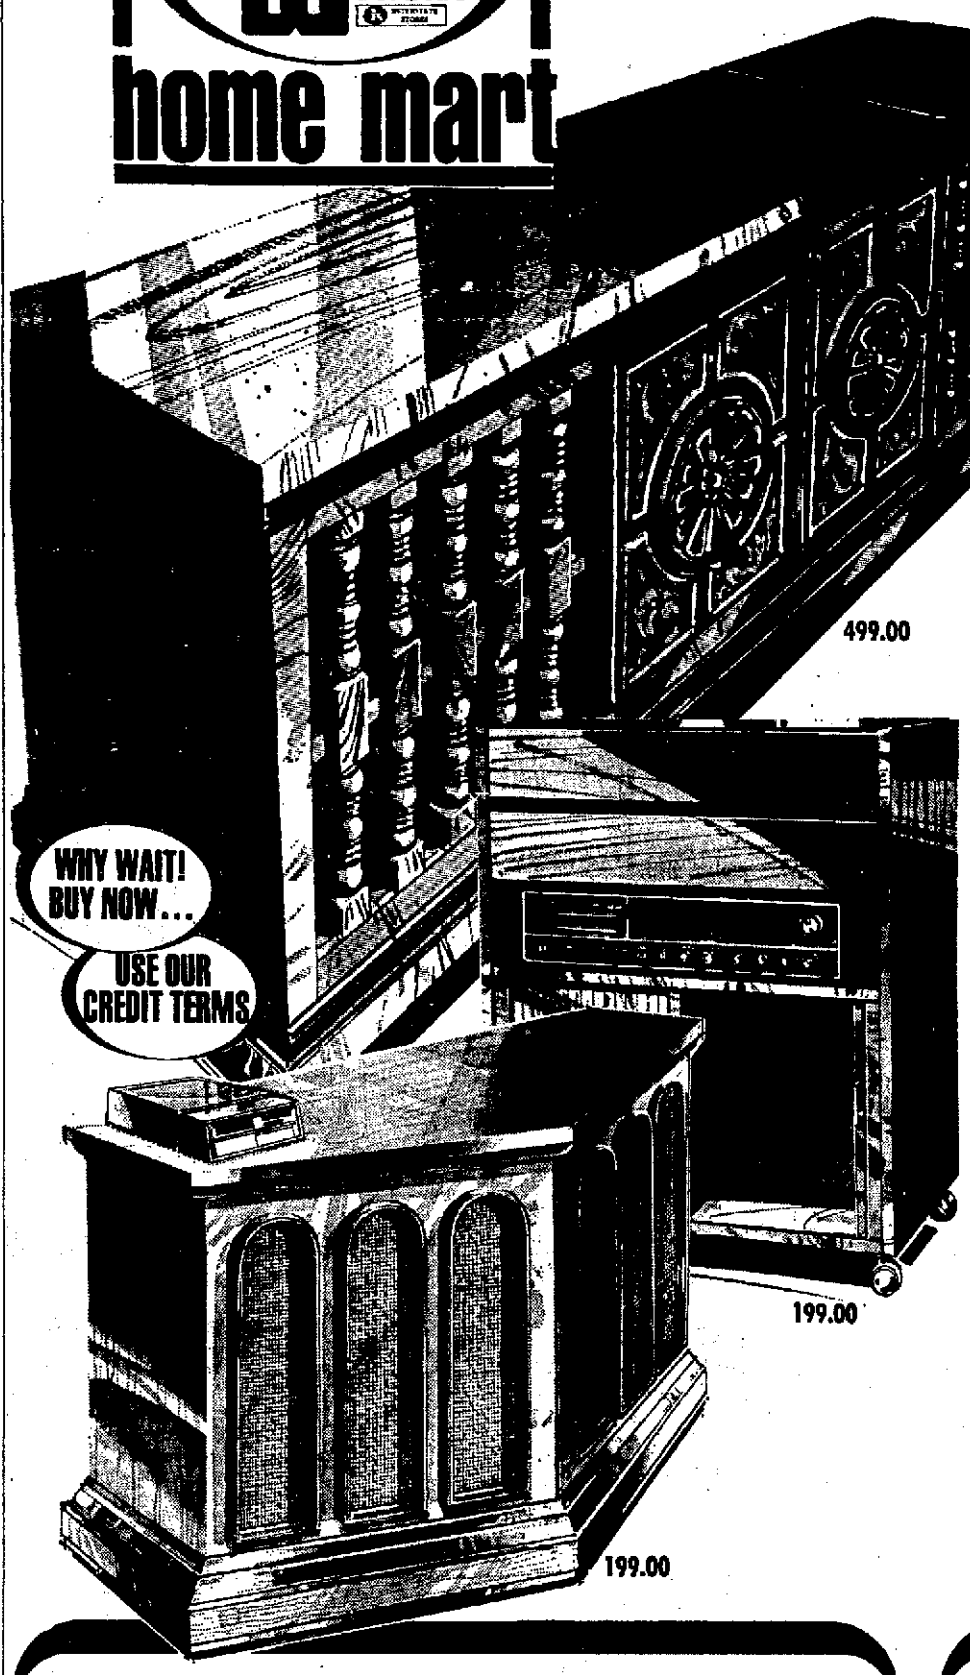

Officers said the driver, Lorenzo Stephenson, 18, El Monte, apparently dozed at the wheel. He was seriously injured in the crash.

Massive drive launched to discover cause of crib deaths

BALTIMORE, Md. (UPI) — Each year approximately one out of every 330 babies born in the United States is found dead in his crib before he is one year old while apparently in good health and from no evident cause.

This has been going on for a very long time, and not only in the United States. But now for the first time there is a coordinated, big scale effort to discover the mysterious why of it and hopefully with this knowledge, to stop it.

The American Academy of Pediatrics, made up of baby doctors, the National Foundation of Sudden Infant Death, composed of involved scientists, and the Guild for Infant Survival, whose members are bereaved parents, are pressuring Congress and the Nixon administration for $10 million in tax funds for scientific research.

SUDDEN INFANT death in medical jargon is SID. In all instances there is a similarity which approaches identicalness, suggesting a specific desease.

The baby may have the sniffles or a cold but otherwise there are no signs of illness. He is tucked into his crib for the night or for his nap. When the mother returns, he is dead.

Autopsy indicates death was by suffocation. But there is no indication of how suffocation was brought about. Most deaths occur between the ages of two and three months and all before one year.

SID is the leading killer of infants. Official estimates place the annual U.S. toll at between 10,000 and 12,500 but not all SID's are reported as such. A similar occurrence is reported in Great Britain, Western Europe and all countries where medical science is advanced. All indications are that SID is universal among people and perhaps has been since the beginning of the species.

IN COUNTRIES weak in medical science and in some sections of the United States, belief persists that unattended infants can so tangle their garments and bedclothes that the tangles strangle them. This notion has been thoroughly discredited; definitely it is not — allowing always for the exceptional case — the explanation of SID.

If the cause is a specific disease, it is a disease in no conventional sense. Though mild respiratory infections are often present, the cause is more than infection. It is likely to be a chance coming together of several deleterious factors not one of which would be lethal in itself, in the opinion of involved scientists.

Dr. Abraham Bergman, Seattle, president of the National Foundation for Sudden Infant Death, has studied 470 cases. His theory is that a nerve spasm suddenly closes the vocal cords. This shuts off the airway and the infant strangles. A baby with a cold is somehow more susceptible to spasm.

OTHER SCIENTISTS theorize the fatal spasm occurs higher in the throat while some suspect it affects heart muscles. Others postulate that a small percentage of infants are unable to breathe through their mouths, for unknown reasons, during a particular stage of development. If nasal passages become clogged by a cold, they suffocate.

Dr. Russell S. Fisher, Maryland's chief medical examiner, has been conducting autopsies on SID victims for 20 years. In his opinion infection is involved but in no simple way — "there is something lacking in the infant's ability to fight off or resist the process of infection." He suspects it is the chemistry which produces antibodies and immunity.

The $10 million sought from the federal government could vastly expand the present scattered research into SID, especially by financing, over a long term, concerted efforts by scientific teams.

CRISIS IN TEACHING OF ANATOMY

Cadaver shortage hampers medicine

New York Times Service

A serious shortage of cadavers is hampering the teaching of anatomy to the growing number of students who are learning to become doctors and allied health workers. The shortage affects medical schools throughout the country with few exceptions.

So critical is the shortage in New York, New Jersey and elsewhere in the Northeast, South and Middlewest that, as emergency measures, financially pressed medical schools are spending large sums to import from other states bodies that have been willed to medical science.

THE BODIES are being shipped legally from the few schools in states like California and Wisconsin that have a small surplus. Anatomists in California attribute surpluses there to long-standing programs of public education on the need to will bodies and to the desire of many persons to do something constructive after death.

A least 160,000 Americans have signed Uniform Anatomical Gift Act cards to will their bodies to medical science or their organs, such as corneas, to other people. All the states have passed such an act, which provides a legal mechanism by which any person can carry an identification card signifying his desire to donate organs of his body for anatomical use.

But the steadily rising numbers have not yet offset the dwindling supply of unclaimed bodies — the traditional source of anatomical material.

ANATOMISTS throughout the country said in interviews that as welfare programs, such as social security, have paid funeral costs for more people, fewer bodies go unclaimed. Further, as more transplant operations and autopsies are done, the potential supply of cadavers declines. Once a body has been opened after death for transplants or autopsies, anatomists say, it cannot be preserved for teaching purposes.

An exception is the donation of corneas, which can be removed from eyes for transplant purposes and the body can then be used in anatomy laboratories.

Medical school and state anatomical board officials stressed that no bodies are being imported from foreign countries. And no medical school pays a donor for his body or organs.

Legislatures have passed new laws, and organizations have taken on new responsibilities to ease the widespread shortages.

For example, Florida has just passed a law, effective July 1, that permits bodies that have been willed to medical science to be exported elsewhere in the United States.

THE LIVING BANK in Houston is now helping Americans to donate organs and bodies to any medical school in the country. The living bank is a private, nonprofit organization that was originally formed to facilitate donations of organs like corneas, kidneys and hearts for transplant purposes.

Now, Mrs. Glen Karsten, who directs the Living Bank, said that it is helping anatomists to determine their national needs by surveying each of the 110 medical schools in this country and Canada.

Anatomists said that the comprehensive survey was the first attempt to solve on a national level what had been done locally.

Mrs. Karsten stressed that donors should will their bodies to medical science, not to a specific medical school, so maximum use could be made of anatomical material.

CONCERNED medical educators fear that because of the shortage of cadavers, future doctors may be less well prepared to understand the basic reasons, for example, why muscles contract to move the human arm and leg, why the knee, which is structured to bend as a hinge joint, can be damaged by football injuries and diseases like arthritis, or why a patient can become permanently hoarse if a surgeon accidentally cuts the recurrent laryngeal nerve during a thyroid operation.

Anatomists blamed themselves for the shortage. Dr. Jack Davies of Vanderbilt Medical School in Nashville, said:

"Wherever professors of anatomy never made any effort (at public appeals for donations) they are having problems."

Davies, who heads the National Committee of Anatomists that is surveying medical schools with the Living Bank, said that two-thirds of the nation's medical schools had cadaver shortages, and that "just four or five have an oversupply."

DESPITE efforts to increase the supply of willed bodies, Dr. Davies stressed that "medical schools cannot become the undertakers for the American public."

After students complete anatomy courses, medical school generally pay for burials that are conducted according to family wishes. Often, the bodies are cremated and buried in communal plots.

At Vanderbilt, where willed bodies comprise 99 per cent of anatomic material and which like other universities owns its own cemetery for cadavers, Davies said:

"We conduct a service there to make the families realize we appreciate what they're doing."

Appreciation of such factors coupled with a 25-year-old program to educate not only the public but also lawyers and doctors, has enabled medical schools in California to meet their needs.

DR. PAUL R. PATEK of the University of Southern California medical school in Los Angeles said that doctors there were advised to follow up on patients' inquiries about donations, and that lawyers were requested to suggest that topic when preparing clients' wills.

Some day, a surplus of cadavers may exist if too many Americans will bodies for organ transplants and to medical science. Until then, Mrs. Karsten of the Living Bank says "we are trying to educate people so it will be the usual thing to do rather than the unusual."

Tenant rights

I recently told my landlady that my toilet was broken. She said it would be impossible to get someone out to fix it right away, but I found a plumber who came out and did the work. The plumber insisted that I pay the $44 bill immediatley. I deducted that amount from my rent, but my landlady's son, Bernard Reizner, insists that I pay my full rent. Are there any laws that cover this situation? N.L. Long Beach.

Section 1942.5 of the California Civil Code stipulates that if a tenant gives his landlord proper notice that there is a health or safety problem in his apartment, the tenant can deduct the repair costs from his rent if the landlord does not do or pay for the work. However, you would have to take the matter to court to have this law enforced. Reizner told ACTION LINE that he has already paid you $15 for the cost of the plumbing materials, but he does not plan to pay for the labor charges because "she did not give me sufficient notice, she was not authorized to call a plumber, and she wasn't home when I came to fix the toilet." Reizner said that the day after you told his mother about the problem, he came to fix the toilet, but you weren't home." "When I returned the next day, the work was done." he added. Reizner said that he felt you had been overcharged for the job and he has contacted the plumber who has agreed to refund you $8, leaving you with a $21 bill.

Surf up

Where are the best surfing spots in Southern California? N.N., Long Beach.

Since weather and wave conditions vary daily, it's impossible to say which beaches always are the best surfing spots, but Mike Perry, associate editor of Surfer magazine, suggested several places that generally offer good surf. Rincon beach in Ventura is considered to be one of the best surfing sports in the world. The waves break best in the winter which is typical of most beaches north of Los Angeles. The quality and quantity of the waves, especially when they're over 5 feet high, make Rincon a risky place for beginners. "County Line" beach on the border of Ventura and Los Angeles Counties, 15 miles north of Malibu, offers year-round gentle surf. Malibu is another good spot in the summer, but this area is extremely crowded. West Newport Beach and most of Huntington Beach have good year-round surfing. The Trestles, south of San Clemente, often has great surfing conditions, but there is no public access to the beach and Camp Pendleton Marines try to enforce a no surfing ban. San Diego has a number of good surfing spots, especially in the summer: Wind n' Sea, Sunset Cliffs, and Pacific, Ocean, and Mission Beaches. Win n' Sea, the site of the World Surfing Championship in August, is strictly for advanced surfers.

Good eggs?

I bought a dozen eggs called One-to-One balanced eggs. A paper in the carton claims these eggs have more polyunsaturates and less saturated fats than ordinary eggs because the hens are fed a special diet. Is this claim true? Mrs. D.I., Lakewood.

It is possible to change the content of the egg to some degree but it probably isn't going to make eggs acceptable for persons who have been denied them because of high cholesterol problems. Specific claims made by egg distributors aren't being checked at the moment, but new regulations with inspection procedures are being set up by the federal Egg and Poultry Quality Control office, according to spokesman Ardi Ferrill.

Storm spreads havoc across the East Coast

built along ridges and valleys on the banks of the Susquehanna, was under 20 feet of water in some places and the river continued to rise.

UPI reporter Jane Shoemaker, who flew over the city in a helicopter, said the river swarmed out of its banks creating a lake four miles wide and 10 miles long in one place.

In the Western part of the state, the Ohio River overflowed and spread through the Golden Triangle business district in Pittsburgh. The flooding river also drove residents out of their homes in West Virginia and Ohio and posed a major threat to Wheeling, W. Va.

THOUSANDS OF FAMILIES fled from their homes in Wheeling toescape the flood and officials said a road paralleling the Ohio River was under six feet of water. Families were also evacuated from the nearby towns of East Liverpool, Martins-Ferry, Bellaire, Shadyside, Powahaten Point and Hannibal, all on the Ohio side of the river.

The Appomatox River continued to rise south of Richmond, Va., threatening low-lying areas of Petersburg.

At Wilkes-Barre, at least 36 helicopters from the Navy, Marines, Air Force, Coast Guard, National Guard and State Police flew supplies to the stranded families from the Scranton-Wilkes-Barre Airport 15 miles away.

The supplies were donated by residents of surrounding states and the U.S. Department of Agriculture shipped in 236,000 pounds of food. There was a shortage of doctors and nurses, however.

UPI reported Charles Madigan, also on a helicopter boat tour of the city, said at least five fires burned out of control and the Army was shipping in a fireboat.

MADIGAN said streets were identifiable only by utility poles and the water reached at lease 20 feet in some paces.

Civil defense workers, National Guardsmen and temporarily released prisoners aided in evacuating entire cities in the Northeast. Hundreds of thousands of persons near the Susquehanna, Allegheny, Chemung, Monongahela, Ohio and James Rivers — all fed by five days of relentless rains from tropical storm Agnes — left their homes to the mercy of the spreading water and fled to higher ground.

In Pennsylvania, the capital of Harrisburg was inundated and statewide damage was estimated at more than $1 billion.

"Without any doubt, it is the worst disaster in the history of Pennsylvania," said Gov. Milton J. Shapp. "I think Pennsylvania will have every reason to rename hurricane Agnes, Hurricane Agony."

The National Weather Service said diminishing rain and subsiding winds had reduced the fury of Agnes, but warned flooding would continue. In Pennsylvania, Lt. Gov. Ernest P. Kline said, "I feel reasonably sure that the worst is yet to come."

THE SKYSCRAPER Golden Triangle in downtown Pittsburgh, where the Allegheny and Monogahela Rivers meet to form the Ohio, was swamped and water spread to the Hilton Hotel. The city, however, was spared as the floodcrest swept on downstream.

There were 17 known dead in Virginia, 14 in Maryland, 11 in New York, two in North Carolina and one each in New Jersey and Delaware. Sixteen persons died earlier in the week when Agnes raged through Cuba and Florida.

Sunbury, Pa., down river from Wilkes-Barre, was placed under martial law. More than 400 National Guardsmen, Army reservists, police, firemen and civilian volunteers feverishly sandbagged the Susquehanna in an attempt to stem the flooding water. A family of four was swept to death when the river carried away their car.

Residents of towns along the Ohio River in the northeastern part of the Buckeye State and the northwestern panhandle of West Virginia were evacuated from their homes and rescue officials said the waters posed a "major" threat to Wheeling. Some 7,000 residents of Wheeling Island, located in the middle of the Ohio, were evacuated. The island was expected to be submerged by Sunday morning.

WHEELING Downs Racetrack was covered with six feet of water and flooding also was reported acorss the river in Martins Ferry, East Liverpool and Bellaire, Ohio.

President Nixon stopped in Harrisburg during his helicopter tour and said, "I'm particularly concerned about the houses. We need to find places for these people to live.

"I'm also concerned about the steel plants because that means jobs. We've got to get that steel plant (Bethlehem Steel Corp.'s steel plant in Harrisburg, Pa.) operating again or find another industry. If they can't open again, this would destroy Harrisburg," the President said.

Nixon also talked to some of the 700 refugees at William Penn High School.

HALF OF the historic city of Richmond, Va. was without tap water after the worst flooding in the history of the James River. Nearby residents of Hopewell and Petersburg braced for expected flooding Saturday night from the rain-swollen Appomattox River.

A National Weather Service spokesman said the expected flooding in Petersburg and Hopewell would be "without question, the worst flood of record."

In western New York where 75,000 persons had to be evacuated from their low lying homes, most rescue operations could be carried out only by boat and helicopter because of flooded roads. The towns of Corning and Coopers Plain were under up to five feet of water and tons of food and other supplies were being flown in to homeless persons.

In Washington, Brig. Gen. George Lincoln, director of the Office of Emergency Preparedness, listed damage as $35 million in Florida; $235 million in New York; $165 million in Virginia and $50 million in Maryland.

Governor asks Arizona aid

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)— Gov. Jack Williams said Saturday that he would ask the White House to declare flood-ravaged regions of Arizona disaster areas.

"I have just inspected from the air some of the most severely damaged areas of the state," Williams said soon after returning to Phoenix from a trip to Wyoming. "We have a disaster situation."

He said he had asked a federal team to come to the state to estimate damage caused by flooding, high winds and tornadoes Wednesday and Thursday.

"And I shall ask the president for a federal disaster designation so that those who have suffered may be eligible for maximum assistance," he said.

State officials said Friday that storm damage in Maricopa County, of which Phoenix is the county seat, was estimated at around $46 million. Scottsdale, a fashionable community east of Phoenix, sustained most of the damage, which officials estimated at more than $40 million.

Flooded delta recovery depends on U.S. help

ISLETON (AP) — With damages put at $21 million, officials Saturday said the speed with which flooded San Joaquin Delta lands will be reclaimed hinges on presidential action.

Last Wednesday's break in a San Joaquin River levee left 3,000 persons on Andrus and Brannon islands temporarily homeless. On Andrus, 12,000 acres were covered to a depth of about 10 feet.

Estimates on the time needed to repair the break and pump water out of the islands ranges up to eight months.

However Gordon Larkin, chief of emergency assistance programs for the state Office of Emergency Services, held out hope Saturday the 1,500 residents of the town of Isleton might move back home in 60 to 90 days.

But he noted there were at least two big ifs — if President Nixon declares the waterlogged region a disaster area making it eligible for federal aid, and if the sewage system can be restored.

Officials of the community on the northern tip of Andrus, assuming no federal aid would be available, decided the town should be left to dry out as the island is drained. They figured the cost of a special dike around the town would be financially prohibitive for city coffers.

Larkin, who made the damage estimate, said state and federal officials would press for such a dike if the President declares a disaster exists.

This, he explained, is because a quick dryout for Isleton would greatly reduce total costs for such things as unemployment, temporary housing and mortgage payments.

City officials had predicted the town would remain vacant for six to eight months until the island gets rid of its surplus water.

Hue attack repelled by South Viets killed in the battle Saturday. Government losses were listed as at least four killed and 16 wounded.

FIELD REPORTS said, however, that two government reconnaissance platoons were overrun with 23 men missing. And one allied officer predicted sweeps would reveal 100 enemy dead out of an attack force estimated at up to 1,000 men.

"The enemy threw everything they had at us — tanks, missiles, tear gas, artillery, infantry — but the airborne stayed and killed them . . . left and right," the officer said.

He refererd to South Vietnam's 11th Airborne Battalion, which was virtually wiped out in fighting in the central highlands two months ago. The reorganized government force repulsed the enemy troops, which were backed by Soviet-built heavy weapons and tanks. The North Vietnamese were reported withdrawing under cover of their long-range artillery.

Blaze blackens 20 dry acres in L.A.

Fire of undetermined origin blackened about 20 acres of dry brush and grass Saturday in the sparsely-populated El Sereno area northeast of downtown Los Angeles.

Eight fire units and a helicopter brought the blaze under control in about 30 minutes. No homes were endangered by the fire.

Girl, 2, dies of beating; 7th area violent death

Early Friday morning a passing motorist discovered the body of 43-year-old Alex E. Lewandowski on a lawn in front of 1491 Linden Ave. Police said he apparently died of a head injury and repeated stab wounds in the chest and back.

A few hours earlier another victim died under similar circumstances. Tim Carswell, 19, was stabbed to death on a lawn in front of 259 E. San Antonio Drive.

Carswell was killed by two men who picked him up as he hitchhiked with his half-brother at Long Beach Boulevard and Market Street. The victim was attacked with a 12-inch hunting knife. The half-brother escaped from the two assailants who fled in their car.

Keith J. Bolla of 12455½ Rose Ave., Downey, was found stabbed to death in a vacant house in Compton Friday. Police said the 21-year-old man was attacked after he left his home for work. His body was found by a plumber who came to the vacant house at 1623 S. Washington St. to do some work.

Police said Saturday three of the rash of apparently unprovoked knifings may be related.

They are investigating the stabbing of two men who managed to escape death during attacks by men in autos who struck without apparent motive.

David Stephenson, 17, of 75 W. Carson St. was riding his bicycle home from work late Thursday when two men, who stopped to ask directions, stabbed him in the throat and chest near the intersection of Linden Avenue and Market Street.

The attackers were frightened off and the youth managed to ride his bicycle to a gas station. He is in satisfactory condition at Domingues Valley Hospital.

The latest stabbing victim was found lying on the ground in front of 339 W. 19th St. at 11:30 p.m. Friday. Raymond T. Sizemore, 31, of 1545 W. 19th St. was stabbed 10 times in the back and chest. Detectives said there was no apparent motive for the attack.

Sizemore is in fair condition at St. Mary's Hospital.

Memphis man held for taking pistol on plane

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A 26-year-old Memphis man was charged Saturday with boarding an aircraft at Memphis International Airport with a concealed deadly weapon, the FBI said.

Joseph V. Baker, special agent in charge of the Memphis FBI office, said James Thurman Prewett was arrested after he boarded a United Airlines aircraft Saturday morning with a .38-caliber pistol in a travel bag.

Following a preliminary hearing Saturday afternoon before U.S. Magistrate Aaron Brown Jr., Prewett was taken to the Shelby County jail. A $3,000 bond was set.

Jail officials said late Saturday that Prewett had not made bond.

Gas prices going up 2 cents

By DOUG WILLIS

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The thrifty motorist will fill 'er up on his next stop in the service station, because gasoline prices are going up about 2 cents per gallon.

That's because the first increase in gasoline taxes in nearly a decade goes into effect on Saturday.

The new tax is an extension to gasoline of the 5 per cent state sales tax. Until now motor vehicle fuels have been exempted from the sales tax. But now the sales tax will be levied on the entire current pump price of gasoline which includes both the retail price of gasoline and the 11 cents per gallon state and federal gasoline taxes.

IT WILL boost your gas cost about 1.5 to 2.2 cents per gallon which state tax experts say it will cost the average motorist about $14 more a year.

The new tax imposed by the 1971 legislature will raise an estimated $173.4 million a year for cities and counties for highways, mass transit and other transportation projects.

It is on top of the present state tax of 7 cents per gallon and the federal tax of four cents per gallon.

The new money will be distributed in about the same way that cities and counties now receive about $600 million a year in gasoline tax revenue for highway programs.

However, the sales tax money will not be earmarked exclusively for highway construction, maintenance and safety, as the rest of the gasoline taxes are.

IN FACT, a major purpose of the gasoline tax law authored by Senate President pro tem James Mills, D-San Diego, was to channel some of the taxes from gasoline into other kinds of transportation systems.

The first $35.5 million of the new revenue will be divided on a population basis among California cities and counties to spend without restrictions — the same as their present general sales tax revenues.

The rest of the money — an estimated $137.9 million the first year — will be divided on two different forumlas depending on the size of the county.

In urban counties, which are defined as every California county with a population of 500,000 or more except San Bernardino, the new money must be used for mass transit programs unless there is a complex set of rulings that local mass transit systems already have adequate funds.

Rural areas will be allowed to use the new funds without restriction either for highways or mass transit programs. San Bernardino, the nation's largest county in land area, was granted the exclusion for classification among rural counties because of its large road system.

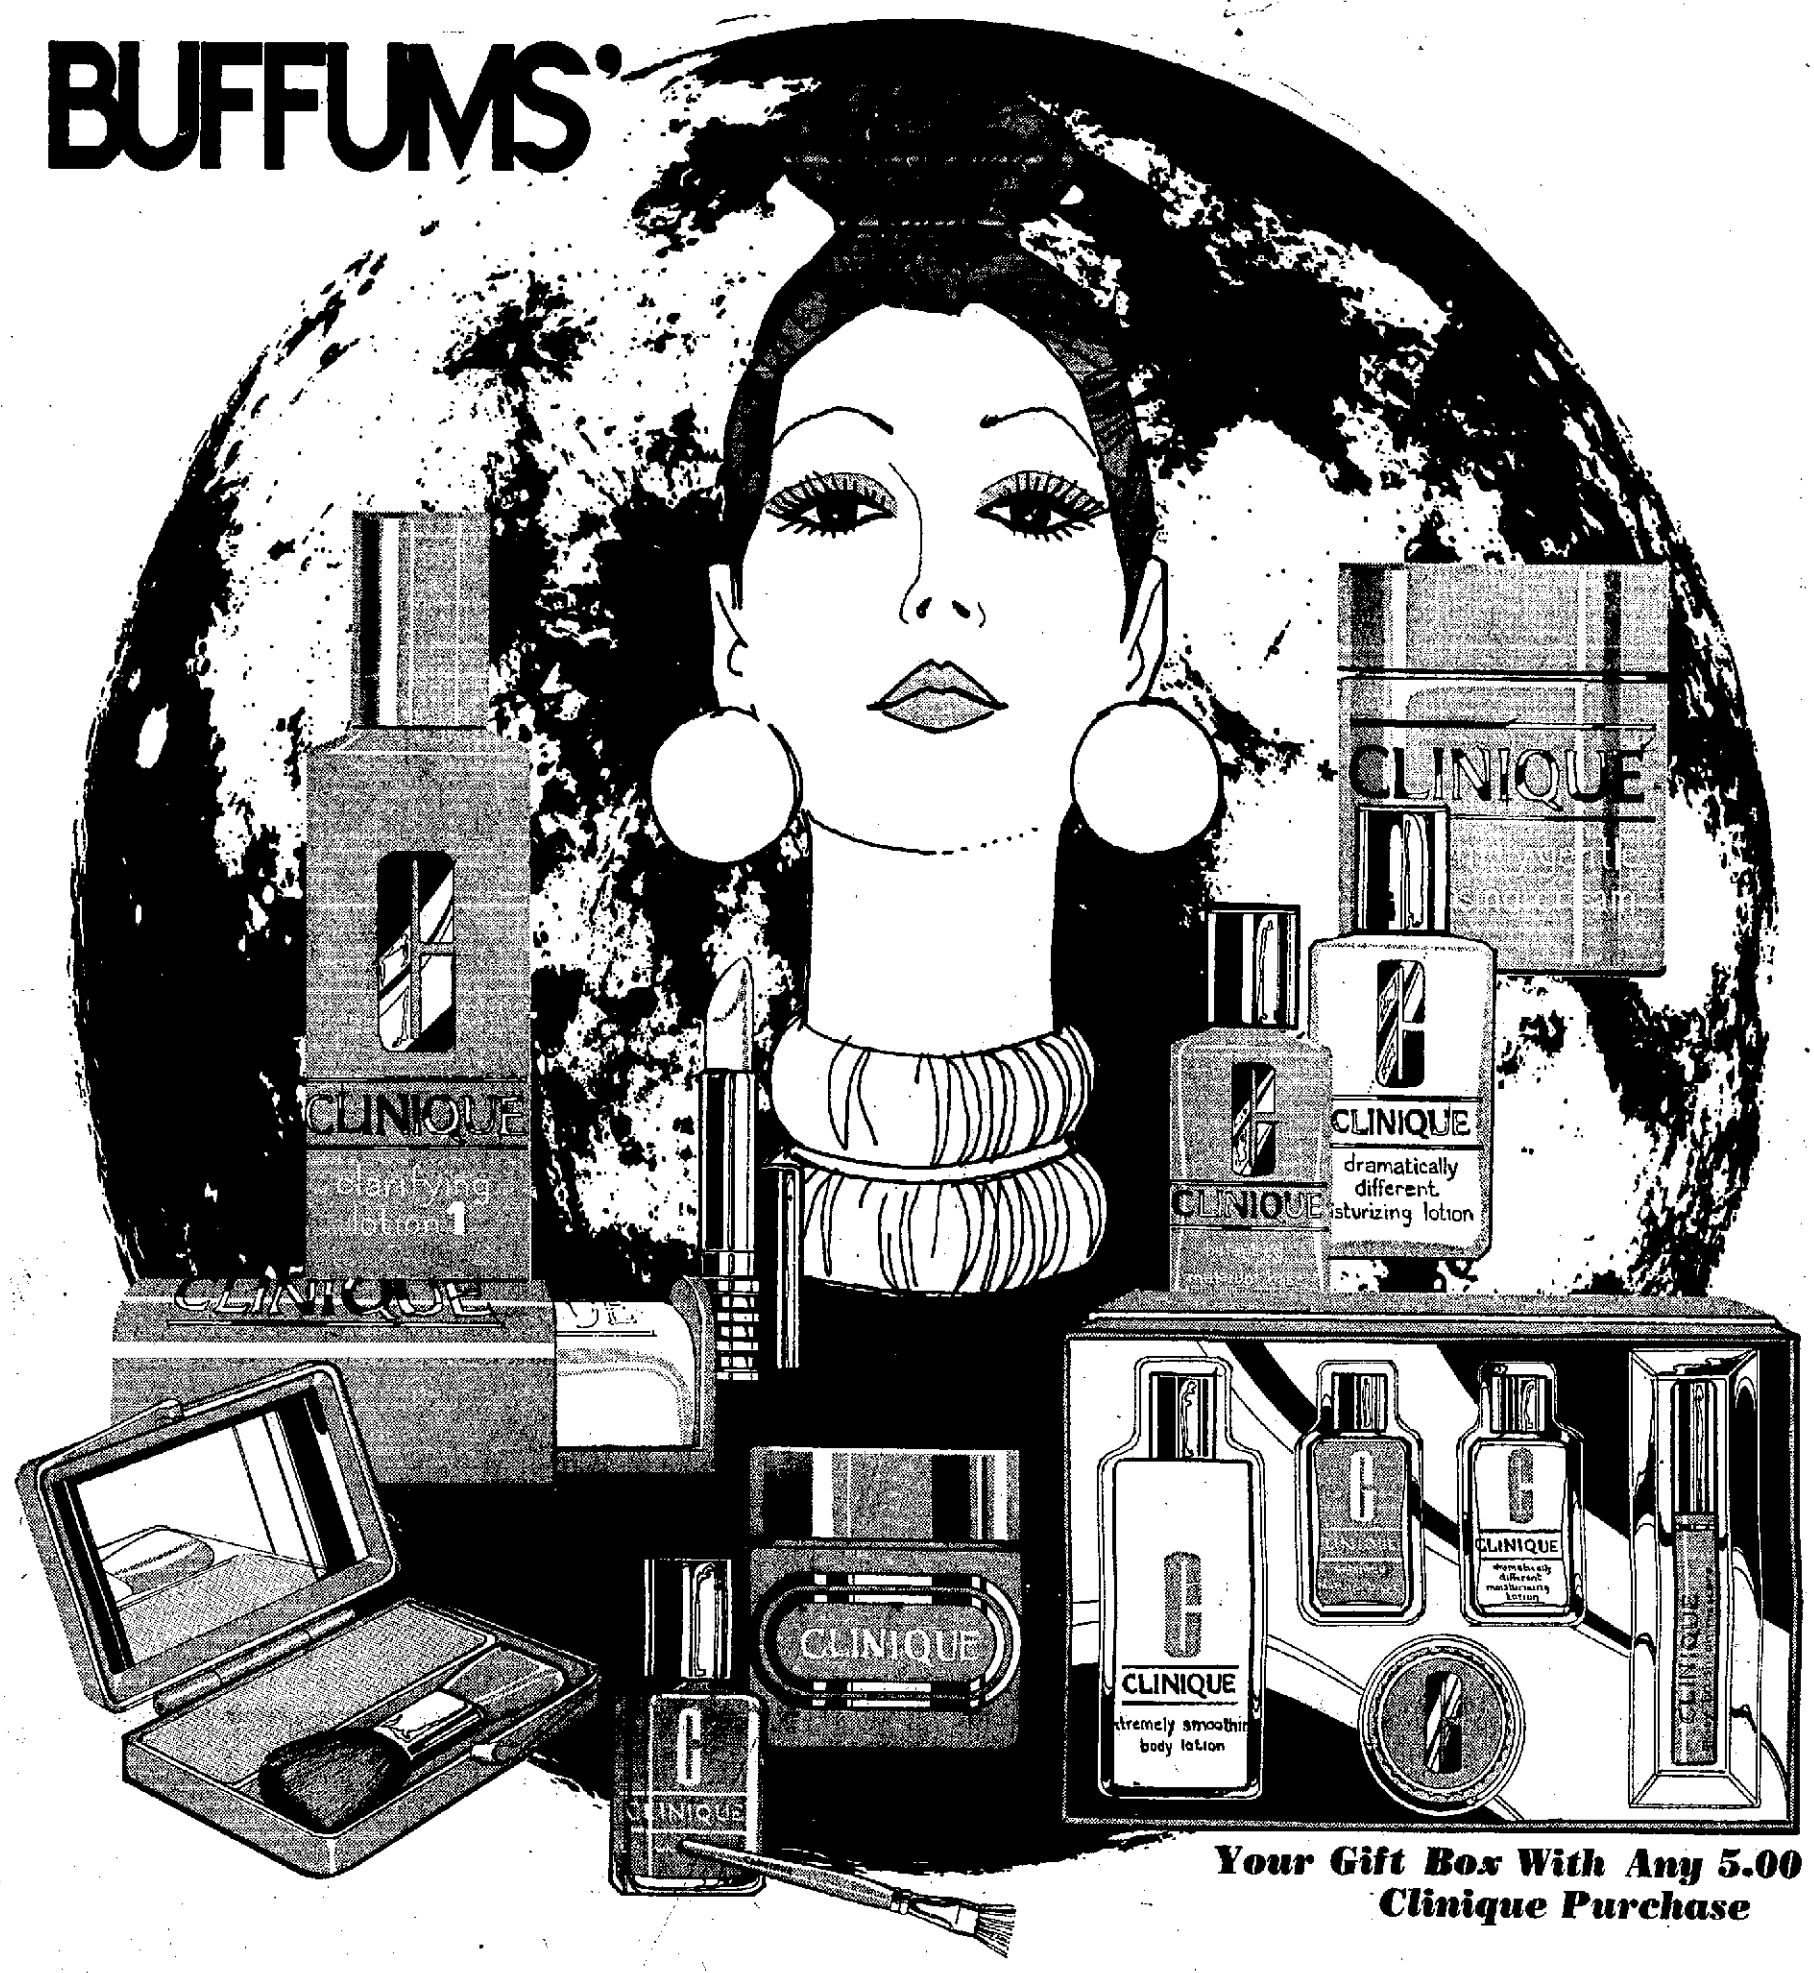

Man waiting for bus killed

A 25-year-old Palm Springs man who had been dropped off at a bus stop to catch a ride home was found shot to death in Los Angeles early Saturday.

Police said the victim, Joon Kyo Choi, was shot through the heart once by a .38 caliber weapon. The apparent motive was robbery, police said.

The body was discovered at the corner of Anderson and Boyd Streets by a passing motorist. Friends of the victim told police they had dropped the victim off at the intersection Friday night so that he could catch a bus back to Palm Springs.

Viet war faces new court test

By JOHN A. GAUDIOSI

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The burning question about the constitutionality of American involvement in the Vietnam war comes up before a federal court panel on Monday.

The panel will hear arguments on a suit filed last Sept. 24 on behalf of all federal taxpayers by a group of peace activists from the area.

They are seeking to halt further military expenditures in Southeast Asia on the grounds that Congress never declared war there.

THE PLAINTIFFS claim congressional military appropriations and extension of the Selective Service Act does not fulfill the requirements of a constitutional declaration of war.

Whatever the ruling of the court here, it most certainly will be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Twice already, the highest court in the land has refused to hear arguments on the legality of the war. One case originated in New York federal courts and the other in courts in Boston.

The judicial panel is comprised of Chief U.S. District Judge Joseph S. Lord III, District Judge Daniel H. Huyett III and U.S. 3rd Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Arlin Adams. Lord was appointed to the bench by President John F. Kennedy. Huyett and Adams are appointees of President Nixon.

THE THREE-judge panel was requested by Lord last March when he denied a government motion to dismiss the suit, which is aimed at Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird. The government is expected to renew its motion to dismiss the action at Monday's hearing.

In his March ruling, Lord noted that more than 45,000 Americans have been killed in the Indochina conflict and hundreds of thousands more injured. He termed the casualties a "staggering loss in human resources."

"The blood of these men provides sufficient conservational interest on the part of every citizen in saving human resources in this nation," the judge found.

During a recent interview, Lord described himself as a "liberal" and added, "don't ask me why. I really don't know."

Adams ran Nixon's Pennsylvania campaign in 1968. A source close to him said he is a "moderate who uses restraint."

BEFORE ascending to the bench here in November 1970, Huyett was a lawyer in upstate Berks County, former chairman for the County Republican Committee and former member of the Pennsylvania Utility Commission.

The plaintiffs include the Rev. David M. Gracie, activist Episcopal priest; John P. Malinowski, former theology instructor at St. Joseph's College here; and economist John S. Atlee.

In an amended complaint last May, the plaintiffs said the conflict had inflicted more than 1.1 million casualties (killed and injured) on both sides since 1965. They contended that passage of appropriations bills resulted from "concealment and misrepresentation of facts" about the war by the executive branch.

Intruder pays for hating women

PERRIS (AP) — Julie Wilson, 21, told authorities she was doing dishes Friday when a strange man walked into her house, grabbed her arm, slapped her face and bellowed "I hate women."

Miss Wilson said she grabbed a small steak knife and cut him on the arm. He screamed in pain and fled out the door, she said.

EAVESDROPPING AT 35,000 FEET

Pilot's gadget lets passengers listen

By ROBERT C. MILLER

HONOLULU (UPI) — A $4.50 gadget invented by veteran airline pilot Percy Cunningham has added a new dimension to transpacific flying: eavesdropping.

The hefty Tennesseean from Waverly teamed up with American Airlines' electronics expert Bill Boyd to take some of the boredom out of jet travel, and has acoustically moved all the passengers into the cockpit so they can listen to the chitchat of the airways.

"Things get pretty boring back there, Cunningham explained. "and despite in-flight movies and stereo, we figured the passengers would like to know what's going on up front."

The result is a flip switch and volume control gadget that Cunningham plugs into his head set, enabling everybody in the plane to listen in to what's going on.

On American's transpacific flights, the new system links weather ships and isolated atolls with the cabin passengers to the delight of both.

"The Coast Guard keeps a patrol ship — Ocean Station November — about halfway between Hawaii and California," Cunningham said. "And the crew gets a great kick out of talking to a jet load of passengers flying 35,000 feet over their heads. They identify themselves as 'Big Casino,' 'Swami' and 'Little Casino' and give the passengers a great speech about the Coast Guard, what they do, and how things are aboard."

In return, Cunningham relays messages on the same frequency to the crew, including Steve Cullom who is also from Waverly, Tenn.

On the Honolulu-Sydney flight, Cunningham brings in the Canton Island transmission for the passengers, and the radio station on the isolated atoll halfway between Fiji and Hawaii reciprocates by playing special music for the passengers. The residents have a chamber of commerce spiel in which they tell about the joys of living on a South Pacific island with spear fishing and sun bathing.

Cunningham, a former test pilot with 22 years as an American Airlines pilot, first got the idea of giving the passengers a part of the action back in 1947 when he was flying transcontinental. During one world series he gave a running play-by-play account during the flight.

The $4.50 device he uses now was made from equipment taken from an old piston propelled DC-7, and Cunningham says it works beautifully in the jet he flies today.

On a typical Chicago-Honolulu flight, Cunningham gives a little introductory speech about what the passengers will hear, and then pipes them right into the various weather stations and traffic frequencies used by the airliner.

"It's amazing how little some of the passengers — and even the stewardesses — know about what's going on up in the front office," Cunningham said. "We not only entertain them; we also educate them."

The high point in the flight to Honolulu comes as the jet approaches the islands. Cunningham makes a little tourist welcoming speech, throws in some history along with a bit of geography, and then settles them all down to monitor his communications with the Honolulu Airport, as ground control feeds the jet the weather conditions and landing instructions.

They learn there is a check-in station called "Agate" far off the coast where all planes check in for landing instructions, and they eavesdrop on all the information, weather and instructions relayed to Cunningham and his crew.

"We have more people helping land that jet than any other plane in the Pacific," Cunningham said. "Together we do a great job."

Russ sending 23 spacecraft experts

By VERN HAUGLAND

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union is sending 23 spacecraft experts to Houston next month to work out technical details for the scheduled 1975 joint earth-orbital mission of Russian cosmonauts and American astronauts.

George M. Low, deputy administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said plans for the technical conference starting at the Manned Spacecraft Center July 5 were outlined Friday in a telephone conversation between NASA officials and Soviet authorities in Moscow.

LOW TOLD the Senate Space Sciences Committee Friday that about a year from now some astronauts will go to Russia and some cosmonauts will come to the United States to begin training in the rendezvous and docking of an Apollo spacecraft and a Soviet Soyuz, both modified so they can hook up while in orbit.

The Apollo will be launched into a 125-mile-high orbit, and the Soyuz spacecraft would be launched perhaps a day later from a Russian base and placed in orbit 167 miles above the earth.

Once the two vehicles have docked together, up to two days will be devoted to joint experiments, Low said.

Low said if the rendezvous, dock and transfer maneuvers are successful, "both countries will have increased their chances of rescuing astronauts in distress without commensurate increases in the costs of a standby rescue capability.

"We are looking into the future here, but it is not too much to hope that through such joint activities it will be possible to enhance the benefits of space exploration—to gain more space than we would from our separate programs," he said.

LOW SAID the joint test mission offers the U.S. a way of continuing the national capability for manned space flight developed during the Apollo program.

Without such a project, he said, there would be no U.S. manned space flight between the last Skylab flight in 1973 and the first space shuttle missions in in 1978.

Pilot error blamed in Italy crash killing 115

ROME (AP) — Investigators concluded Saturday that pilot error caused the crash of an Alitalia airliner against a Sicilian mountain May 5 that killed 115 persons.

A 52-page report presented by the commission conducting the probe stated that the pilots failed to follow the proper landing procedures. They turned the aircraft to the left instead of following the air corridor to the right, away from Mt. Pegoraro where the plane crashed.

The report also mentioned "an insufficient observation outside the plane" and "repeated absent mindedness shown by the commander throughout the day."

The plane a DC8 purchased by Alitalia in 1961, was judged to be in perfect condition before the crash.

ARTIST'S CONCEPT OF NEW McDONNEL DOUGLAS F-15

Newest warplane a first–built under cost by Douglas

By ROY MALONE

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — When the first copy of the nation's newest warplane is rolled out Monday at the McDonnell Douglas Corp. plant its $10.5 million price tag may get more attention than its deadly capabilities.

"McDonnell is coming in under target, and it would be a first," said Maj. Gen. Benjamin N. Bellis of Wright - Patterson Air Force Base in Dayton, Ohio. He has responsibility for managing the F15 program.

The F15 will become operational for the Air Force in 1975. It replaces the McDonnell-built F4 Phantom jet, which has been the workhorse of the nation's air defense. But the F4 is becoming obsolete because of Soviet fighter plane advances, the Air Force said.

The Phantom probably will continue in production until the end of the 1970s, giving it a 20-year lifespan. More than 4,266 have been built. The Phantom has gone through 11 modifications and has been sold to nine foreign countries.

McDONNELL BEAT out Fairchild-Hiller Corp. and North American Rockwell Corp. for the F15 contract. It calls for 749 planes at a cost of about $7.8 billion.

After the first F15 makes its test flight in July, 20 more test planes will be built. Then a wing of 107 planes will be produced.

Building of military planes by private firms has proved to be a costly enterprise for the government. Still haunting military and congressional leaders are the huge cost overruns on such planes as the C5 jet transport and the F111 fighter.

Gen. Bellis said the Air Force made a study of the reasons for past overruns and found "fault on both sides," the government and the contractor. This led to a rigid set of standards for the F15 program, he said.

"We're doing it as if we're in a fixed price environment in the open market. The taxpayer's dollar is important," Gen. Bellis said.

THE AIR FORCE came up with a cost schedule control system which includes a number of development and cost milestones which have to be met by the contractor. "They could lose the contract," Gen. Bellis said, although in the case of the F15 the chances are remote.

A McDonnell spokesman said the F15 requirements "are the toughest we've seen. It led to increased use of computers to control the various phases of the program. A data bank was set up so each department and supervisor could have access to vital information concerning research, development and production.

"Our people need to know when certain parts are available, where, and if there are any delays," the spokesman said. "When it's time to put section 52 on the plane it better be there when they reach for it."

Bellis said the Air Force has practiced the "fly before you buy" concept as much as possible on the F15. "We prototyped the engines before we bought," he said, explaining that engines of two competing companies were run at the same time to determine which would be best for the F15. The same thing was done for the radar system.

DESPITE THE precautions noted by Bellis to keep costs down, the price tag of each F15 has now risen by more than $500,000 to $10.5 million per copy. However, the blame lies mainly with the Navy, not with the Air Force or McDonnell Douglas.

The Navy and Air Force worked jointly to develop new engines for the F15 and the Navy's new F4 fighter plane being built by the Grumman Corp. But last August the Navy decided to use an existing engine for its plane, causing the Air Force to revise its cost estimates and renegotiate the engine contract with the manufacturers.

The production of fewer engines means higher costs for the Air Force model and is resulting in a bigger price tag for the plane.

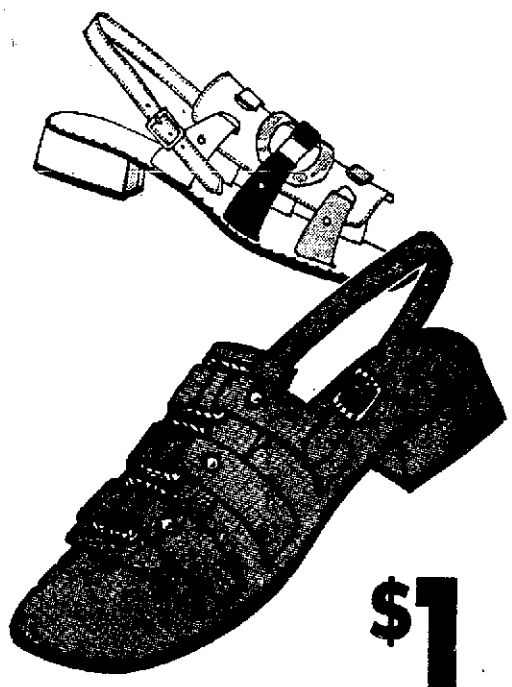

"We've done more testing on the F15 than we've ever done on any plane," said Sanford N. McDonnell, the firm's chief executive officer.

HE COMPARED the development phases of the F4 and F15 and said the firm has more confidence in the F15 "that we have a winner."

The F15 is smaller than the F4, much lighter because of the amount of titanium and aluminum used, and is faster and more maneuverable. The double tail fin increases maneuverability, something the Air Force considered more important than great speed.

The advanced electronics system will allow the pilot "more freedom to fly his plane," a McDonnell spokesman said. It is expected to outperform any other warplane built or on the drawing boards.

Officer crisis at West Point

By SEYMOUR M. HERSH

WEST POINT, N.Y. — The military academy at West Point has been stung by a series of resignations from many of its most successful and brightest young officers assigned to teach and train cadets.

In the last 18 months, 33 officers — most of them captains and majors with Vietnam combat experience and advanced education degrees — have ended their Army careers.

The resignations have caused consternation and concern at some levels in the Army but thus far no official steps have been taken to try to stem them.

EXCLUSIVE
N.Y. TIMES SERVICE

A spokesman for the academy noted that the 33 officers who resigned make up about 4 per cent of the overall faculty of more than 800 now on duty at West Point.

THE spokesman, an Army lieutenant colonel, did acknowledge however, that "it's really disastrous to see these people go because they are the brightest. They're outstanding officers

Most of the officers, in interviews here, acknowledged that anti-Vietnam war feelings or personal concern over future promotions had little to do with their decision to leave. Instead, the young officers, all of whom were promoted ahead of their classes, cited a belief that life outside the Army would be more satisfying than life inside it—even as a high-ranking general.

"If I stayed in, my ambition was to have not one but four stars," explained Capt. Paul Wam Bucha, a 28-year-old social science instructor who resigned his commission this spring. "But in the old days," he added, "it was even enough to be a colonel. That was enough for life and respect."

BY ALL accounts, Bucha was headed for a prominent career in the Army. He graduated 18th in his West Point class, in 1965, and was chosen as its outstanding cadet. During service as a company commander in South Vietnam, he won this nation's highest battlefield decoration — the Medal of Honor.

Later, he attended Stanford University where he earned a Master's degree in business economics.

"What's next for me in the next 10 or 14 years?" Bucha asked. "People talk to me about serving as a battalion commander (as a lieutenant colonel) and I know, if someone gave me a battalion, I would be the best damn battalion commander in the Army.

"But that's not enough of a challenge," the dark-haired, intense officer added. "I don't want to wait 10 or 14 years to do a job I know I could do now."

MAJ. JOSIAH BUNTING 3D finished as first captain of his 1963 class at the Virginia Military Institute and earned his promotions well ahead of his Army contemporaries. He was, perhaps, one of the most popular instructors in the social sciences department at West Point. He is also the author of "The Lionheads," a well-received novel about Army live in South Vietnam published this spring.

The major estimated that he had at least an 80 per cent chance — "before publishing my book" — of becoming a general.

Why did he resign? "Mainly, I think it's a terrible dissatisfaction with the Army and this whole deadly career game," Bunting said. "You know, got to play it safe for a long period of your life so you can become a general —, and by the time you reach it you're a completely different person."

"There are some people in the Army who are willing to wait," the major added. "We're just not willing to wait anymore."

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Conflicting influences checker your whole year, yielding many opportunities. Personal relations are vivid, with probably several memorable moments of drama defying explanation. If you have a technical specialty, status comes to you; if not, much can be done about it. Today's natives often hoard small objects.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Go ahead with agreed plans despite belated misgivings or reservations. Others change their minds and let down on promises.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Coping with interruptions is an art — you can distinguish yourself simply by being calm as you do what you think is best.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Show your maturity and judgment in how you meet obstruction this complex day. There may be little sign of the appreciation you value.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Reflect on where you are, what you'd most like to have happen, and act accordingly. Playing favorites is the last thing to try.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): It's a do-it-yourself day if you want anything done. Trying to settle differences hastily may be even more trouble; find an out.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Make an arrangement that gives you time for the responsibility of what you're trying to do. Get a start made on some long-standing dilemma.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Personal interests and work obligations may clash. Setting out early gives you more chance to cater to both with good results.

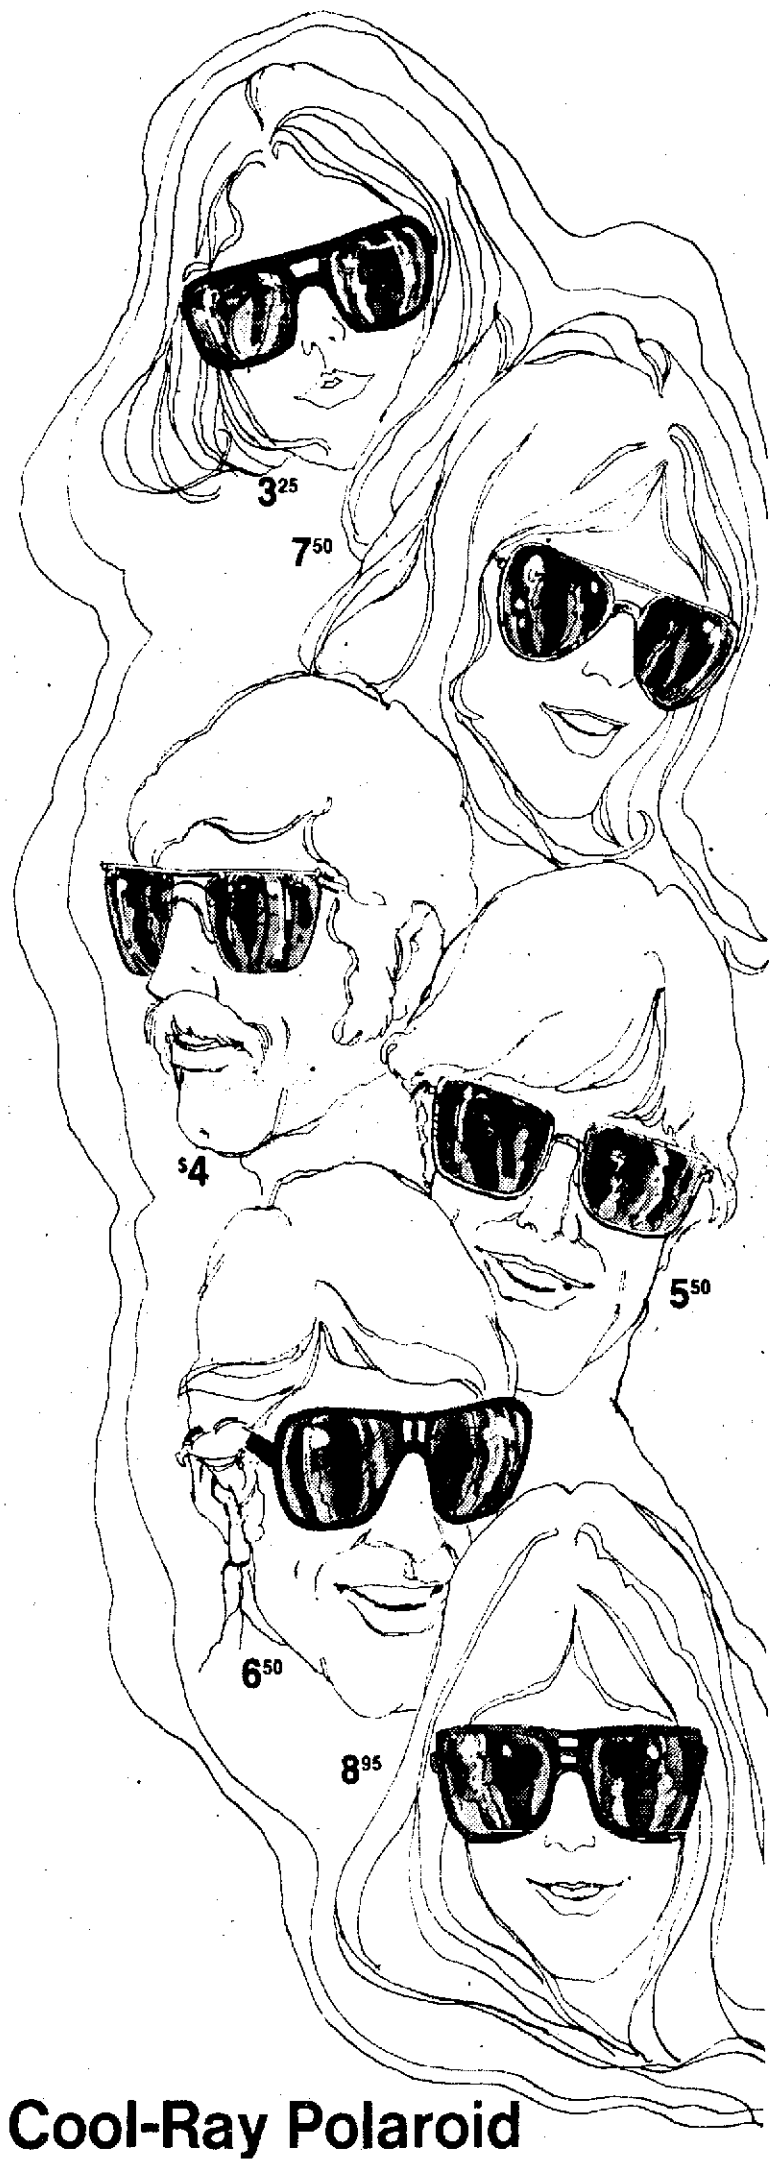

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): New contacts are sensitive, subject to improvement only by explicit understanding. Your work includes details which need discreet handling.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your hunch is as good as anybody else's. Almost any course you take puts you in a direction away from others beliefs acceptable risks.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Realize that others lack your intense concern and may not have things thought out as you do. Fellow workers have passing moods.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Resistance comes naturally, is no excuse for failure to keep promises. Safety precautions pay off without getting any notice.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): The day mellows steadily from a rough start to gentle reconciliation in later hours. Be considerate of others and their dignity.

CHARLIE TAKES WALK TO WORK

One of the Naval Undersea Research and Development Center "retriever" sea lions, Charlie, is easily led to work by his handler, Jim Cory. This method is favored by handlers and the sea lions because they do not like to be cooped up. Since the Navy has no veterinarians, Air Force vets take care of the mammals when they need medical aid or care.

RETRIEVING SUBMERGED OBJECTS

Sea lions working flippers off for the Navy

My BUCK LANIER
Military Editor

SAN DIEGO — Able, Baker and Charlie are working their flippers off and enjoying every minute.

This trio of sea lions is involved in retrieving objects off the ocean floor up to depths of 750 feet. The mammals have some help from the Navy's Undersea Reasearch and Development Cinter (NUC), too, in the form of "pingers" attached to the needed objects with the range frequency tuned to that of the lions.

Here's how it works:

A Navy ship fires a practice anti-submarine rocket off the coast and the rocket carries an instrumentation package. After the shot, the spent simulated warhead's pinger turns on and either Able, Baker or Charlie bark happily and is sent after it.

A dual-jawed "grabber" is attached to a line carried by the lion and he presses it against the target, completely encircling it. When the "grabber" is locked into place, the warhead is lifted to the surface.

The sea lion program has been dubbed "Quick Find" as an alternative to using divers or submersible vehicles to recover the objects.

Divers are limited in depth and duration while submersibles are expensive and difficult to transport thus the adaptability of sea lions to locate and attach recovery gear on test devices on the ocean floor is a major boon for the Navy.

Able, Baker and Charlie got their initial training at NUC's laboratory at Kaneloe, Hawaii — adjacent to the Marine base on the island of Oahu and on the island's quiet side.

The lions will work the remainder of the year with the Navy's Underwater Demolition and sea-air-land (SEAL) teams in object retrieval and in some cases placement.

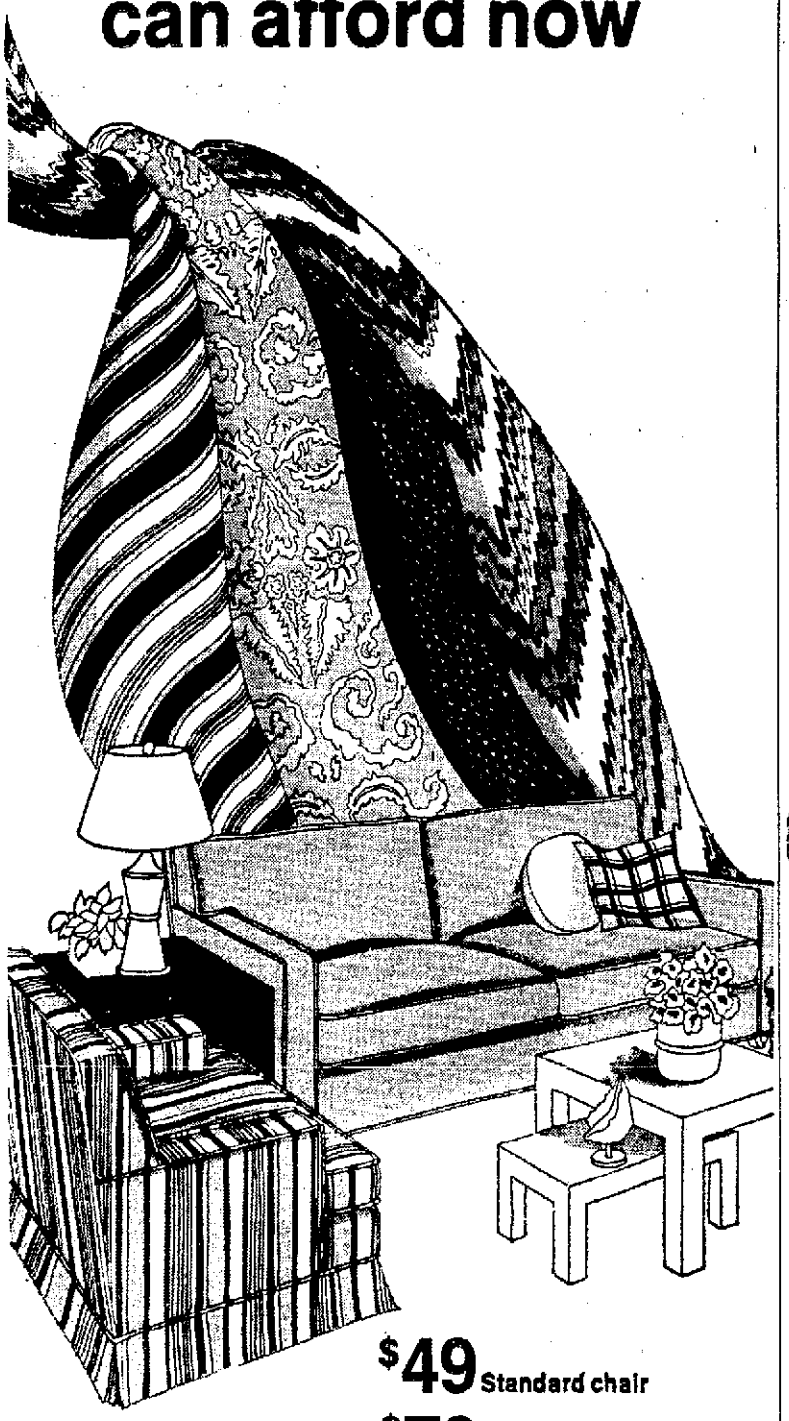

Initial training tested the sea lions' concentration, willingness to work and attitude. Then the NUC scientists at Kaneloe moved them into easy retrieval tests and graduated to the difficult line attachment method.

The "pingers" get tested for what frequency is best for each individual lions.

The UDT and SEAL teams will utilize Able, Baker and Charlie in a full schedule of retrieval tasks.

Hydrofoils – ahead of their time in terms of pollution

The boats that fly through the water with the greatest of ease—hydrofoils—are ahead of their time also when it comes to pollution.

They already meet 1975 auto standards for exhaust emission, according to their maker, the Boeing Co. in Seattle.

Instead of internal combustion engines, gas turbines power them; and Boeing says these turbines don't do such awful things to the air we breathe."

THE HYDROFOIL gunboats Boeing has built for the Navy are "quiet, clean, don't pollute the water and don't pollute the air plus you don't have to cut down the trees and pave the countryside to operate them. The waterways are underused and there are no problems in obtaining the rights of way.

"They don't even make waves, so you can tear through congested areas."

About 13 years ago the company began designing and testing these speedy craft, which operate on foils entirely under water, in contrast to the usual hydrofoil boat with foils that pierce the surface.

It's not strange that an aircraft company should branch into this field, since the foils "fly" in water like the airfoils of planes soar in their element.

Boeing's first hydrofoil was the Fresh-1. The 50-foot twin-hulled research boat looked like a giant waterbug. The company never said how fast the 15-ton craft traveled during tests, but Boeing did say it was designed to rip the water at speeds up to 115 miles an hour.

Then came Little Squirt, a 2½-ton boat powered by a gas turbine engine operating a centrifugal pump capable of forcing 3,500 gallons of water a minute through a nozzle at the stern. The continuous water jet could drive the boat at about 50 miles an hour.

THOSE TWO research boats led to Navy contracts for the construction of the grandame of the Navy's embryo hydrofoil gunboat fleet, the 110-ton High Point, and the 60-ton Tucumcari, which has seen action off Vietnam and in the Meidterranean.

The 71-foot Tucumcari, launched in 1967, flies on wings developed through Fresh-1 and is powered by engines pioneered by Little Squirt. Tucumcari can fly through the water at up to 50 miles an hour.

Now Boeing is working over contract details that it expects will lead to construction of at least two more hydrofoil boats—not gunboats but carrying the Navy's new Standard missile.

These new boats will be patterned after the Tucumcari, now based in Norfolk, Va.

All this has led to national and international interest in what kind of flying boat Boeing could build to ferry people places faster on the sea or on inland waterways.

TODAY THERE is commercial interest in Hawaii, New York, San Francisco and right at Boeing's home base area, Puget Sound. Financial eyes have been raised also in Japan, Denmark, Hong Kong and the Mediterranean.

A commercial hydrofoil is in the development stage and will carry 200 people and cost about $3.5 million.

However, its entry into the transportation field is two years away.

Vets group condemns amnesty

Delegates to the national convention of the Disabled Officers Association voted unanimously Saturday to oppose the granting of amnesty to draft dodgers and deserters.

In presenting the motion to the Anaheim session, Col. George Paston of New York said, "There should be no compassion for those who rejected their obligation to serve their country in its hour of need."

In other action, the convention elected Maj. Morris B. Brown of Huntington Park as its new commander.

Zoo plans to use lion for watchdog

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — To combat vandalism, officials of the Des Moines Children's Zoo announced Saturday they will begin using a lion for a watchdog.

"We're not sure of exactly how we're going to work it yet," said zoo director Robert Elgin, "but these acts of vandalism this year are just nauseating."

Elgin said the decision to use a lion as a watchdog follows the theft of a valuable hawk trained for falconing. He said the theft Friday night "was the last straw."

"Just in the last few months we've had animals turned loose, stolen, sprayed with chemicals and just about everything else," he said. "Earlier this spring, someone deliberately cut off the air supply for our cougar and we had a heck of a time rounding up our deer after they were turned loose."

Elgin said he believes the lion will make "an interesting and probably very effective watchdog."

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — Flower power almost upset a production of Hair in Rio.

Sponsors offered free tickets for those who brought a rose. Police had to be called out because too many rose to the occasion and the mob scene that resulted from the surplus of rose-holders threatened the planned night of love and peace.

Shouts of "Brothers, please exchange your roses for tickets at the box," proved unrewarding. The crowd began yelling, "We want in, you hypocritical bureaucrats."

When the youths started using the thorny rose branches as missiles, the peace-and-love organizers decided to call in the police.

Peace eventually was restored. One of the frustrated organizers commented: "We never thought it would be so easy to find roses in Rio."

Longshoremen threaten to tie up docks in Hawaii

HONOLULU (UPI) — Hawaii's trade with other states and the rest of the world could be virtually cut off if no progress is made today on a contract for 900 dock workers.

The International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union is demanding a settlement by midnight or a strike will be called. Hawaii ILWU director Robert McElrath predicted the longshoremen "will be on strike Monday."

Negotiations have been under way for more than a year in an attempt to produce a contract to replace the one which expired last June 30. "We are not asking for anything the federal pay board has not already approved for the Pacific Coast longshoremen," McElrath said.

McElrath's gloomy outlook was reflected somewhat by federal mediator Reynold Hagist who said the sides are "far apart."

The islands are almost completely dependent on shipping for commercial goods from around the world. Although air cargo can take up some of the load, last summer's West Coast strike sent prices soaring and caused shortages of many basic goods.

Gov. John A. Burns said he is "hopeful" the strike will not take place. He called off a survey of the state's food resources saying "You don't promote a strike before it happens."

A POLITICAL pressure group, "Operation Blackeye," is not as optimistic as Burns and announced a drive to force Burns to use the Dock Seizure Act. This law allows the state government to man the docks during a strike. It has been on the books since Hawaii's worst dock strike in 1949, but has never been used.

If the ILWU does walk out, it will not mean a complete shutdown on the docks. The union says it will continue to serve passenger ships, the U.S mail and ships going between islands.

PARITY WITH WHITE DOCTORS SOUGHT

Minority training plan in medicine

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A national program is being undertaken to eliminate racial imbalances among medical practitioners, Dr. Julius Hill, president of the Golden State Medical Association, said Saturday at the group's convenion.

To achieve parity with the white majority of doctors, the nation would need 30,000 black doctors, 15,000 Mexican-American doctors, 4,000-5,000 American Indian doctors and about 2,500 Puerto Rican doctors, he said.

Sen. James Mills, D-San Diego, welcomed delegates to the predominantly black medical organization's formal convention opening.

"All Americans — the poor and the middle class especially — have the right to a basic minimum level of health care," Mills said. "Keeping Americans healthy is in the national interest."

HILL, of Los Angeles, said the minority medical training program, "Project 75," was aimed at stimulating blacks and members of other minorities to study medicine.

"There is a gap," Hill said. "We need, like yesterday, about 30,000 black doctors to balance the ratio (to population)."

The disparity of numbers is compounded by the imbalance in distribution of doctors, he said. Most physicians go where they can earn the best living for themselves and their families but black doctors go "to the ghetto" where the need is.

Thus, the doctors are overwhelmed by the immensity of the health problem and work 10 times as hard, he said. However, because of restrictions in medical programs, the doctors often bear the costs of treating their patients.

VISITOR GO HOME

No welcome sign hangs at Bolinas

By JAMES O. CLIFFORD

BOLINAS (UPI) — A lot of people in this rustic coast town don't like visitors. At least one of them apparently feels so strongly about it he's cutting down road signs that tell strangers how to get here.

Bolinas, at the end of a winding two-lane road less than 50 miles northwest of San Francisco, is a quiet village of spectacular views. But it's torn by the influx of outsiders, many young hippie-types, and the road sign destruction is only the most obvious symptom.

Henry W. Miller, the county road superintendent, estimates he has had to replace 20 road signs in the past six months.

"They take a chain saw and whack them off," he said.

THE MUTILATED signs not only point the way to Bolinas, there also are speed and dangerous curve warnings — important on the treacherous road. And steel signs haven't stopped efforts to hide the town — the vandals just spray the sign with paint.

Miller and Bob Halligan, of the State Division of Highways, are convinced the person or persons wrecking the signs want to keep tourists and new settlers away.

"Its' definitely not the work of the merchants," Halligan said. "Our men went there and asked them if they want to keep tourists out. They said they wanted the tourist dollar."

Brighton Avenue, the main street, contains antique stores, a restaurant, one bar, a grocery store and scores of longhaired, unkempt young men and women.

TOURISTS are nothing new in Bolinas, which has long been favored by artists and families seeking a quiet vacation. But the masses of young people are new.

Mrs. Frances Stewart, a widow, has lived in a small home about a mile from town for 10 years. She is head of the local chapter of the Marin Conservation League, and she thinks the youngsters are "great."

"About five years ago we had this influx of young people and they took an immediate interest in conservation," she told a reporter as a deer scampered across her lawn. The newcomers, in an effort to stop growth, forced a recall election last November that unseated members of the local public utility district who wanted to improve sewage facilities.

Mrs. Stewart feels development would wreck Bolinas, which she said is "unique because it is one of the few places near a large city that has not yet been developed."

But many of the older residents of the 600-resident community don't share her enthusiasm.

"First we had the surfers," said Charley Pepper, 54, a contractor who has lived in Bolinas all his life. "We thought they might be bad but they turned out to be a pretty good, clean bunch of people. Now we have people on welfare, unwed mothers."

THE NEWCOMERS, Pepper said, "figure they discovered Bolinas. We discovered it when they weren't even born and we never tried to keep people out," he said.

"I'd like to see more responsible people come here," said William L. Creitz, a nationally known potter who is an outspoken opponent of the newcomers.

"Now we have a fascist element that has no respect for property. As far as I'm concerned, this town has been taken over by the new left in a quiet revolution."

Creitz is one of several artists in Bolinas. Others include poet Robert Creeley, painters Arthur Okamura and Erwin Manheim, singer Grace Slick, and illustrator Park Edwards and his wife, author Peg Bracked.

The Edwards' feel the town's spirit has changed over the years. Where once "children could be taken to the beach and you wouldn't have to worry," now there are nude bathers. There once was a cooperative spirit that no longer exists. And every resident in the area fears vandals or burglars, they say.

"We have a big dog and that keeps them away from us,' Mrs. Edwards said.

As for the young people, they don't want to talk much. One young man, who said he was a "struggling painter," refused to be interviewed, saying "it would only bring more tourists."

Another of the newcomers, Greg Hewlett, 31, who was one of those elected to the public utility board, would not talk to a reporter at all.

Dune buggy, bike licenses due July 1

SACRAMENTA (UPI) — Outdoor enthusiasts who roar through California's wilds on trail bikes, dune buggies and other rugged machines will experience next month what State Motor Vehicles Chief Robert C. Cozens calls a "coming of age."

During the last several years the "modern Riders of the Purple Sage," as Cozens calls them, have proliferated in California, scarring virgin forests and deserts without paying social "dues" to restore the environment.

However, on July 1 the free ride will end. Under a new law, owners of off-highway vehicles will be required to purchase $15, two-year licenses.

Money from the registrations will be devoted to developing a statewide trail system where the machines may roam with only minimal environmental damage.

Cozens estimates that at least 6 million Californians — almost a third of the state population — are involved in the mushrooming mode of outdoor recreation.

"Almost nowhere among the 100 million acres that make up California is real isolation any longer to be found," Cozens said recently. "Dune buggies already have conquered nearly every sand dune in the state." When federal and state officials recognized the environmental threat of the sport, virtually all public lands in California were closed to the go-anywhere machines.

The idea of the new license law is to establish special public sites where the bikes and buggies cannot cause severe harm to the land and then to clean up any environmental damage that might occur.

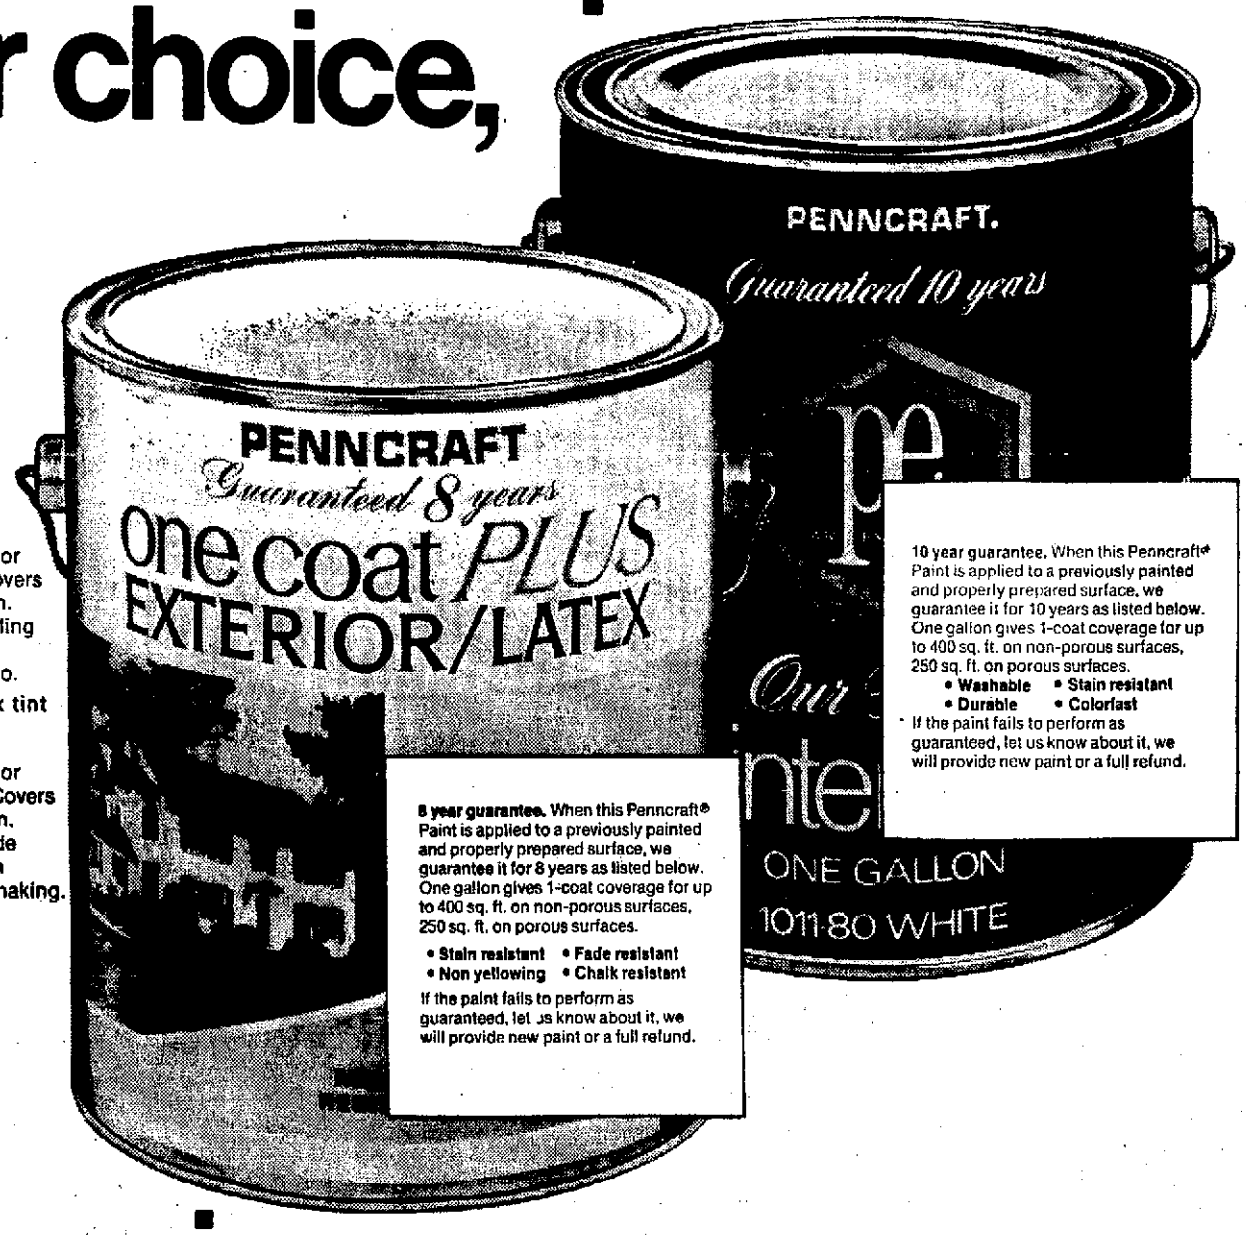

The registration funds also would be used to construct picnic areas, parking facilities and rest rooms, according to a spokesman for the State Parks Department.

Department of Motor Vehicles officials estimate that as many as 1.2 million off-highway vehicles may be registered under the new law, producing as much as $18 million. The revenue will be split by the DMV, the Parks Department and local governments.

Small, green-and-white DMV registration stickers will be required only on vehicles used strictly off highways. Any vehicle already registered for highway use need not reregister under the new law.

'MIRACLE CHEMICALS' NO LONGER EFFECTIVE

Mosquito curbs fail; fear epidemic

FRESNO (UPI) — Now that the "old miracle chemicals" used for years to control mosquitoes no longer do the job, health officials are expressing concern about the possibility of an encephalitis epidemic sweeping across California.

And the outlook for controlling the disease-carrying mosquito population without chemicals, especially in the farm rich central valley where an epidemic would most likely originate, is not promising.

"The mosquito season has been slow until now," said Dr. W. Donald Murray, secretary of the California Mosquito Control Association and manager of the Delta Mosquito Abatement District.

"But after spending some time in the field I have to say the dream is over," he said.

MURRAY said tests have shown that available chemicals are "absolutely useless" this year in the battle to control mosquitoes, because a number of strains have become totally resistant to treatment with substances such as baytex and parathion.

"The companies are just not doing research on chemicals any more," he said, "because of harrassment from environmentalists and, of course, the costs involved."

In 1952, when mosquitoes developed an immunity to DDT, there were 800 reported cases of western equine encephalomycelitis — sleeping sickness in California. It was the worst encephalitis epidemic in the state in recent times.

The epidemic killed 50 persons and another 50 were hospitalized with brain damage. Most of them remain wards of the state today.

"The mosquito season is still ahead of us," said Murray, "and we can't say it won't happen again."

THE MOST active time for mosquitoes is later in the summer — July through October — when the breeding period hits its peak in irrigated pasture land.

Western encephalitis usually occurs in this part of the country in August and a related virus, called St. Louis encephalitis, is most common in September and October.

But the two local varieties of sleeping sickness are not the major concern of health officials this year.

"Our surveillance is aimed at the more virulent Venezuelan strain causing trouble in south and central America," said Ted G. Raley, director of the Selma Mosquito Abatement District.

VENEZUELAN encephalitis occurs most commonly among horses but recent tests have shown it also can affect human beings, Raley said.

"The Venezuelan strain is so virulent," said Raley, "if it does get a start we don't know what we might do. It is transmitted by any mosquito and can be passed from animal to animal.

"We are concerned about it mainly because it is more active than anything we've ever had to cope with."

Now that chemicals are no longer effective the problem is primarily one of water management, especially in agricultural areas.

Disease-carrying mosquitoes breed in stagnant pools of water — near rice fields, irrigation ditches and dairy barns for example.

MILLIONS of mosquitoes can be produced from four to six days in a large stagnant pool of water.

"The only solution is better water management," said Murray.

Officials say they receive some support from the farmer, would like to get more and have threatened to take legal action if they don't get better cooperation.

"We will use the health and safety code to take their property away from them if they refuse to cooperate," said Murray.

"If our men spot large pools of water we'll give the farmer four days to cut back on irrigation or we will prosecute.

"Instead of spraying this year, we are informing farmers that they are breeding mosquitoes.

"Irradication is never going to occur, but we will proceed to do what we can to control the mosquito population," he said.

IN THE PAST, when water management failed to do the job, the next step was to kill the insects in the larvae stage, before they had a chance to become adult disease carriers.

If an epidemic of sleeping sickness should occur, Raley and Murray say health officials will have to turn to a costly chemical known as baygon, which kills the mosquitoes in the adult stage.

Murray said baygon is most effective against adult mosquitoes when they are swarming and can be used safely over school grounds and other places where large numbers of people gather.

But baygon is a stopgap and would be used only in an emergency situation, he said.

In the meantime, there is not much going on in the field of mosquito control. One chemical has been developed which its inventor says upsets the growth pattern of mosquito larvae, but it is still in the experimental stage and not all experts are convinced it will work.

"We are in no better position than we were last year to control the mosquito problem," said Raley, "and last year mosquitoes were thicker than they have been in some time."

Montevideo school protest in killings

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — Teachers at Montevideo's high schools and trade university have called a 72-hour strike beginning Monday to protest the shooting of three teachers.

The victims were wounded by a soldier while taking part in a demonstration Friday in front of the Finance Ministry. Defense Ministry spokesmen said the soldier fired accidentally.

Nothing like a Packard

By DENISE KUSEL
Staff Writer

P-s-s-s-t. Hey, the Pack is Back.

Southern California Car Cult Freaks know a good thing when they see one. And for guys like Bob Freiwald of Long Beach, a Packard is a good thing. Ten good things.

Freiwald, 31, owns a fleet of them.

Enough Packards to suit a kaleidoscope of moods. He can wake up in the morning and decide to be 1956 kool-kat mod and jump into a two-tone job. Or he can be rakish — casting his fate to the wind — in a 1938 super touring machine with wire wheels, chrome as thick as your fist and enough leg room in the back seat to satisfy Wilt Chamberlain.

"I've been interested in Packards since I was 14 years old," the mustachioed Freiwald said. "My first Packard was a 1936 B sport coupe with a rumble seat.

"I was surrounded by Packard buffs. My dad owned one and my two uncles owned dealerships."

The first Packard was built in 1899 because the auto's namesake, James Ward Packard, wanted a car he could depend on. When Charles Schmidt, designer of Packard's early showpiece, the Gray Wolf, built the first car with more than one cylinder, James Packard quipped, "One gives enough trouble (referring to the cylinders), why four?"

But four it was, and the same year, Packard came out with the first independent hand and foot throttle, the first gear slot (they had already invented the first automatic spark advance in 1901).

The twin six cylinder followed the four and then onto the more powerful eight. Soon the name Packard was synonymous with speed in the heart of every boy and rakish young man.

In 1927 after his historic trans-Atlantic flight, Lindbergh rode up Fifth Avenue in a Packard. Two years later the Pack was outselling Cadillac three to one.

With all this popularity in the 1920's and 30's — what happened?

Freiwald, a pharmacist at California Hospital Medical Center in Los Angeles, believes it may have been a case of trying to hold onto the Packard name and quality while trying to beat rising production costs at the same time.

It didn't work.

"Packard officially closed their factories in September, 1956, although they had already merged with Studebaker in 1954," Freiwald explained.

A form of bootleg Pack appeared on the market as late as 1958 — a conglomerate marriage of a Studebaker body and Packard engine. The marriage was dissolved soon after — non-compatability.

But the production stoppage didn't dampen the appetites some people had for the Pack. Just like the folks who swear by their Edsels, Packard owners belong to a special cult.

They hold their heads high, driving coolly and unharassed in rush-hour freeway traffic . . . pampered and protected by 10-gage steel fenders with that Superspecial chrome hood ornament (the Daphne, the Donut Chaser and the Cormorant). They sneer at Detroit's latest dreams with their plastic grillwork and make-believe leather interiors and fake wood.

"Good cars are like vintage wine," Freiwald said. "They improve with age.

"Eight of my cars are licensed for street driving. Three of them fall under the category of true classics. Two are 1938 super-eight Packards, one a four-door touring sedan. The third is

PACKARD COLLECTOR BOB FREIWALD POSES WITH HIS PERSONAL FLEET OF CARS

NO TIME FOR PINOCHLE

Firemen on duty always are busy

By JOHN SHEEHAN
Staff Writer

As far as Harold Omel is concerned, that age-old myth about the potbellied fireman sitting around the station house playing endless games of pinochle while waiting for the next fire alarm is as obsolete as Mrs. O'Leary's lantern — and just about as true.

"It's hard to convince people that we don't sit around on our duffs all day," says the 29-year-old fire fighter. "People living in the neighborhood around a fire station see their firemen leisurely watering the grass or playing volleyball and they figure we're on the gravy train, doing our time and waiting for that pension."

Long Beach firemen have plenty to do to keep themselves busy, according to Omel, and it's due as much to the rapidly changing nature of the job as much as the ambition of the younger men now manning the hoses.

But the question remains: what do firemen do when they're not out knocking down fires? For the Long Beach Fire Department, the answer is that they train, and when they're finished training, they train some more.

Station 10 is typical of Long Beach's 22 fire stations that include a crash truck at the airport and three fire boats in the harbor. The work day begins at 8 a.m. when five men report to the brick fire house at 1417 Peterson Ave., the station that will be their home for the following 24 hours.

After an intense, thorough briefing by the off-going shift, these men will begin a work day filled with hour after hour of training, drilling and more training; a few hours of neighborhood fire inspections in homes and businesses; several hours of lecture and study on fire fighting; a few moments of leisure time and a couple of hours of sleep.

The cycle of training-drilling-studying will go on from 8 a.m. until 8 p.m. with time out only for fires. It's a day of activity repeated in fire house after fire house throughout Long Beach.

After the briefing, and one of two daily citywide tests of the entire emergency network, the men go to work cleaning up the station and the grounds. At station 10, this takes a little more time than usual because of the rocks and bottles thrown at the building almost every day.

The rock and bottle attack, launched by kids who live in the neighborhood, has led to more than one fire station in Long Beach installing heavy metal grates on its windows and surrounding the station with thick, brick walls. Still, these airborne missiles find their way over the walls, and their intensity is almost in direct proportion to the tension in the neighborhood at any given time.

After this housekeeping chore, the fire fighters go to work cleaning, polishing and testing every bit of mechanical apparatus in the station and on the trucks. The men familiarize themselves with their backup responsibilities, contingency plans that allow a neighborhood to be covered by other fire fighting units when its own have gone to answer a call. The procedure takes on all the aspects of a giant game of checkers played out in the streets, with one unit leap-frogging another to provide the city with continuous fire protection.

Then the drills begin, drills that test the men's readiness and ability to respond to any type of fire. There are hose drills, street drills, communications drills, riot drills. There are drills that simulate any type of fire situation — fires in schools, oil fields, aboard ships and pleasure craft out in the harbor, libraries, hospitals, supermarkets and businesses. The threat of fire is endless, and so are the drills.

When the men at station 10 aren't out fighting real fires or drilling in the streets, they are over at the department's training tower facility at 2261 Argonne Ave. There, in full "turnout rig," the water-resistant coats and boots they wear during a real fire, and with oxygen masks and tanks strapped to their backs and hoses slung over their shoulders, the men go up and down the tower — practicing, practicing.

Training also includes lectures and chalk talks on knocking down fires, and when this is finished, the men go into the neighborhoods to inspect homes and businesses.

According to Omel, the men try to visit each home and business in their neighborhood at least once a year. Some of the businesses that present a real threat are inspected more often. He adds that one of the more disappointing aspects of these inspections is that while businesses must submit to them, private homes don't have to.

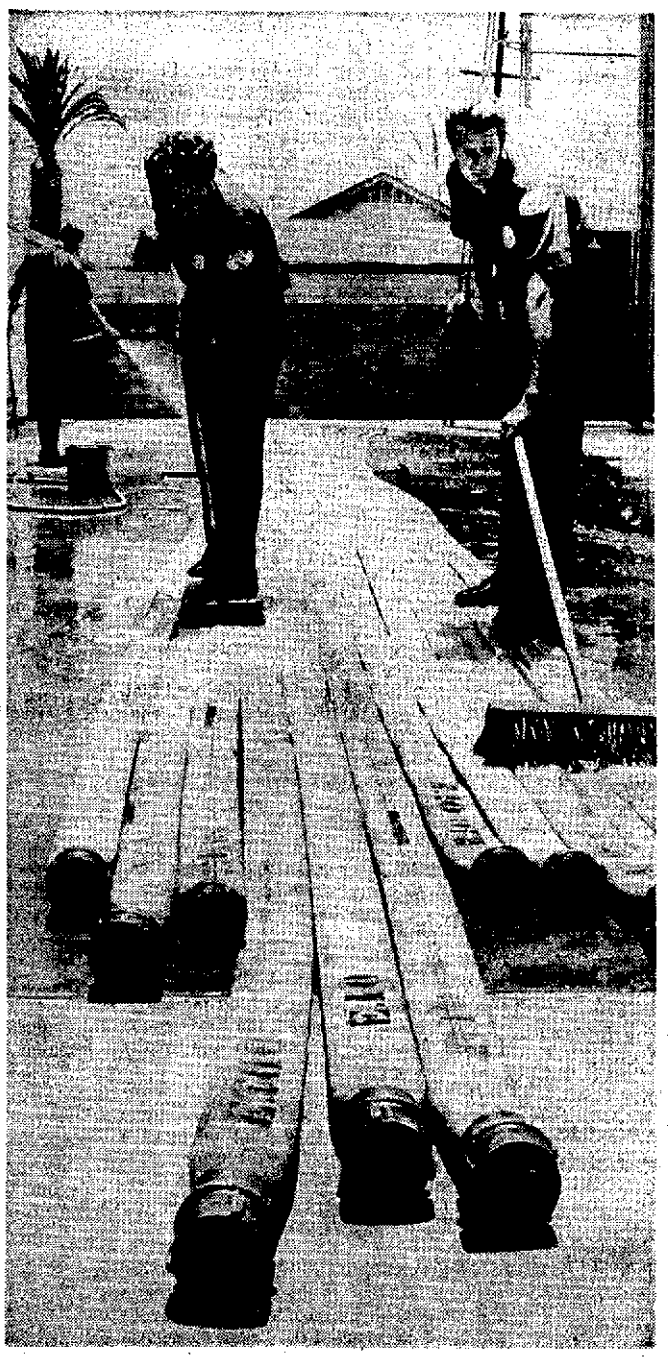

So Omel and his partners go from door to door, reminding housewives of the ever-present threat of fire and offering to show them how to shut off their gas and electricity. Some homemakers, he adds, take advantage of this opportunity to protect their homes. Many don't.

The men at station 10 do find time for recreation, but even this can be coordinated into the training program. According to Omel, the department encourages its fire fighters to play rough, aggressive

Complete summer program offered by Recreation Dept.

No matter what age or what activity, the Long Beach Recreation Department believes that there is "something for everybody" in the 1972 summer programs which open Monday at 49 school and 23 park playgrounds.

Swimming instruction, day camping, athletic competition, crafts, drama, field trips, concerts or dances — they make up only part of the choices in the city's 44th year of its coordinated eight-week municipal and school recreation program.

Playgrounds at 46 elementary schools will be open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., except for the Fourth of July, until Aug. 18. In addition, summer programs also will be offered at Nightingale School, Hamilton Junior High and the Poly High gym in the afternoons.

The 23 city park playgrounds will be open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m., also starting Monday and running through Aug. 18. They, too, will be closed on the Fourth of July.

Swimming instruction, always one of the department's most popular summer activities, will be offered at four beach areas, the two municipal pools and the four high school pools.

Free lessons, with no preregistration required, will be offered Monday through Friday at Colorado Lagoon, 5119 E. Colorado St.; Bay Shore Aquatic Center, Ocean Boulevard at 54th Place; on Alamitos Bay at 59th Place; and at Marine Park, northwest of Appian Way and Davies Bridge.

Preregistration is necessary and there is a $2.25 fee for the two-week sessions at the six indoor pools. Schedules and further information may be obtained at the pools. They are Belmont Plaza Olympic Pool, 4000 Olympic Plaza; Silverado Pool, 1540 W. 32nd St.; Poly High, 16th Street and Atlantic Avenue; Wilson High, Eighth Street and Ximeno Avenue; Jordan High, 65th Street and Atlantic Avenue; and Millikan High, 2800 Snowden Ave.

All four of the city's high school youth clubs will continue to operate during the summer, with dances, live bands, records, Ping Pong and pool tourneys. They are Jordan's Hi Teen, 6301 Myrtle Ave.; Millikan's Ram Shack, 2800 Studebaker Rd.; Poly's Hutch, 2611 Locust Ave., and Wilson's Bruin Den, 4900 E. Seventh St. All will be open Monday and Wednesday from 7:30 to 10 p.m. and Friday from 7:30 to 11:30 p.m. In addition, the Hi Teen and Ram Shack will be open Tuesday and Thursday from 1 to 5 p.m.

Two major all-city events will be the girls' Powder Puff Track Meet at Millikan High on Aug. 1, and the All-City Fishing Rodeo on Belmont Pier Aug. 11.

The Recreation Department's drama department will present a summer musical, "High Button Shoes," on Aug. 18-19 at Bixby Park and on Aug. 25-26 at Recreation Park.

"Programs Under the Stars," featuring a variety of musical groups, will be presented each Thursday from 7:30 to 10 p.m. at Bixby Park.

Three-day camp sessions at Camp Sea Hawk, at the northeast end of Marine Stadium, followed by an over-night camp at El Dorado Nature Center will be offered boys entering the fifth, sixth and seventh grades during eight sessions from June 28 to Aug. 16. Buses will pick up and deliver the boys from their respective playgrounds.

All playgrounds will conduct athletic competition, primarily in softball and volleyball. Youngsters should check with their playground director for schedules.

Special classes will be offered at selected playgrounds in such activities as needlecraft, cake decorating, sketch, woodcraft, macrame and yoga.

Long Beach Single Adults' Dance Club will hold dances Sundays from 8 to 11 p.m. at El Dorado Park Clubhouse.

Additional information on programs or schedules may be obtained from the Long Beach Recreation Department headquarters in Long Beach Auditorium.

MY TOWN AND YOURS

My own longest day

I HAVE INVENTED the 72-hour day.

It was easy.

Like most great inventions, it was an accident.

You all remember the case of Benjamin Franklin. He was out flying his kite one day (like most printers he was a little dingy) and decided, just for the heck of it, to put a key on his end of the string.

The other end of the string was tied to the kite, which was dancing around in a storm cloud. Pretty soon there was a bolt of lightning in the cloud and a jolt of electricity ran down the string into the key.

Franklin had invented the hot key. He had discovered the principle of electrical conduction, which is used to this day. That's why you see all those kites flying over the Edison plant.

Later on Benjamin Franklin went to Paris as our ambassador and became the first Henry Kissinger, because hardly anything shocked him.

MY INVENTION of the long day came about when I decided to quit smoking cigarets. I smoked the last one in the pack at 11:48 p.m. on a Saturday. However, I had the misfortune of discovering another pack in my other suit at 7:02 a.m. Sunday. This shows that when you are looking for a pencil it doesn't pay to search your other suit.

At today's prices the logical way to quit smoking cigarets is to wait until you empty your last pack. I did the second-best thing. I hid the pack in a buffet drawer under a stack of recipes and then went into the front room to watch TV.

I was hardly smoking at all until the last five minutes of Perry Mason. The next thing I knew I had smoked three cigarets, one for each confession, and during the commercials I had memorized a recipe for Happy Holiday Pound Cake.

Monday morning I left at home what was left of my last pack of cigarets so I wouldn't be tempted on the way to work.

When I got to the office, I bought a fresh pack and, to make sure of strict rationing, I wrote the date on it—6-19-'72—and stowed it away in the cabinet behind my copy of the IBM Selectric II Typewriter Operating Instructions. I took one cigaret and thought the rest would be safe because I hardly ever look behind my copy of the IBM Selectric II Typewriter Operating Instructions.

I don't bother IBM and IBM doesn't bother me, except when I'm typing.

MY SYSTEM was to smoke one cigaret an hour. I had the first one at 7:30 a.m. This was a mistake, because at 8 o'clock I decided it would be easier to keep track if I smoked every hour on the hour. So I had my 8 o'clock cigaret.

As you know, June 19 was one of the longest days of the year. In fact, there were three hours between 8 and 9. I waited it out, although I telephoned 437-0211 three times between 8:40 and 8:58. I finally decided the lady on the recording DID have the correct time.

Now that I have invented the 72-hour day, you might assume that the calendar is a real drag. It's not. For instance, yesterday morning I looked behind my copy of the IBM Selectric II Typewriter Operating Instructions.

I discovered that, according to the date on my on-the-hour package of cigarets, today is the Fourth of July.

The pack I keep at home is hidden in my wife's sewing-basket and should be safe there unless our kitten finds it.

I have sworn off Perry Masons and am concentrating on quiet programs like Boxing at the Forum and old movies such as "Our Very Own", starring Ann Blyth and Farley Granger. I have seen dozens of Farley Granger movies and so far nothing has happened to him.

In one drama Ann Blyth had a close call. She stood on tiptoe to be kissed and ran into a Christmas tree ornament.

Twice-told tales in Congress

Readers of Clark Mollenhoff's column on these pages may have noticed that the author is an admirer of Rep. H. R. Gross, R-Iowa. Gross's investigations get frequent salutes from Mollenhoff.

It is not surprising that Mollenhoff's fondness for the congressman should be reciprocated, as reflected in insertions by Gross into the Congressional Record of Mollenhoff columns and even a whole chapter from Mollenhoff's new book, "Strike Force."

ASIDE FROM THAT use of the Congressional Record to promote the work of an old friend, Gross is reasonably pure about what he asks the Government Printing Office to print at $140 for each 7-by-10-inch page. He confines his Record insertions pretty much to legislative business.

Gross is thus in a good position to engage in the crusade he has now started. He says abuse of the Record is "flagrantly increasing." He hopes to persuade congressmen to throw a few more things into the wastebasket rather than into the Record.

The crusade can't be conducted with a meat ax. Most of the material placed in the Congressionl Record is of considerable interest to anyone trying to keep watch on life in America. It would be unfortunate if congressmen stopped putting into the Record magazine articles, newspaper stories and texts of speeches by friends. What would be helpful would be if the congressmen would stop putting the same things in over and over.

Congressmen apparently do not read the Record. At least it is hard to think of another explanation for the fact that an important newspaper article or speech text will often be inserted into the Record not just once but two, three or more times.

IN RECENT WEEKS, for example, a Tom Wicker column was reprinted three times, a Wall Street Journal article made it twice and a San Diego Union report that "Reds invade American politics" won the accolade of two insertions. Perhaps two different congressmen wanted to have it reprinted and mailed to constituents to help them stem the Red tide. That can't be the explanation, though, for the fact that a Washington Post report that "Study casts doubt on busing" was so appealing it was reprinted four times. Probably it was just an article that happened to say what four different congressmen wanted to hear.

Multiple insertions of the same article are a minor but irritating part of the expense of producing the Congressional Record. Gross might start his crusade by asking Congress to agree to the clear rule that nothing—even if its author is a congressman—can be reprinted in the Record more than once.

Has military lost its credibility?

Clark Mollenhoff

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The size and complexity of multibillion-dollar weapons systems and the confusion surrounding the Department of Defense budget may be political assets to Sen. George McGovern in his drive for the presidency.

This thinking in the McGovern campaign is a major factor behind the South Dakota senator's proposal to cut $30 billion from the Nixon defense budget. He and his advisers feel the low credibility record of the Pentagon both on money matters and on the Vietnam war makes his budget cut proposal potentially a winning issue.

IT IS DOUBTFUL if more than a handful of voters will really understand which side is making valid arguments, for many of them will be based on speculation about Soviet plans and about what our weapons systems will cost.

The Pentagon budget is one area where it is probably possible to fool most of the people most of the time.

This has played into the political planning of presidents, who have claimed greater knowledge and experience in these areas than their challengers. For the most part, the voters have seemed to take the incumbents' word for it.

It has been effective for the "in" administration to use a combination of national security secrecy and expert opinion testimony to silence or ridicule an opponent.

We have seen some of this in the Peking and Moscow visits and in the weeks that have followed. We will undoubtedly see a good deal more of it before the election.

BUT THE VERY factors that make it easier for the President and Dr. Henry Kissinger to sell the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks agreements to Congress are the same factors Senator McGovern is counting on to make a cut in defense spending a political asset.

Americans want peace, and they want to believe that Nixon is taking significant steps toward peace. This has been an advantage to the President.

But Senator McGovern is convinced that the voters also want cuts in defense spending and are fed up with the pattern of excessive Pentagon secrecy, multibillion-dollar cost overruns on defense contracts and falsification of reports by high military officials.

Against this background of proven mismanagement, corruption and admitted deceptions, the McGovern camp is confident it is in a different position from past challengers.

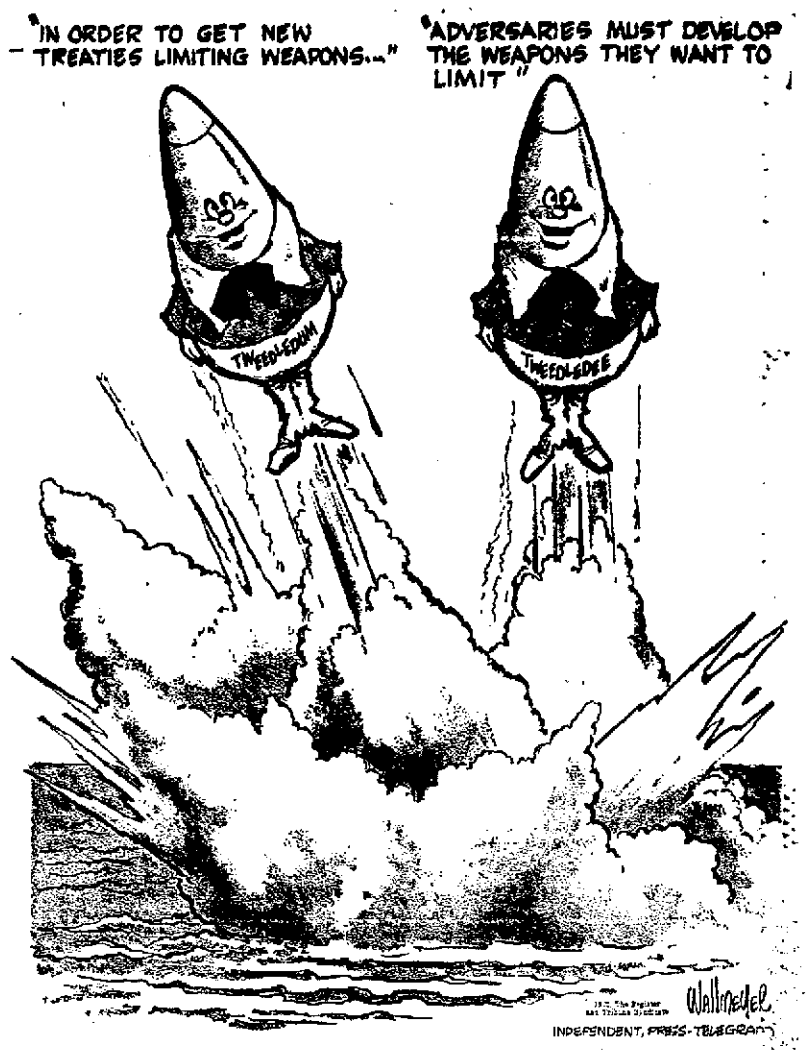

McGovern is reported to be convinced he can meet all general financial arguments by military experts with the example of the C-5A transport and its $2 billion in cost overruns and a half dozen equally dramatic examples.

The McGovern people concede that the C-5A contract originated in the Johnson administration. But they point out that the Nixon administration has taken on the responsibility for the C-5A blunders in firing cost analyst Ernest Fitzgerald after he testified about the huge cost overruns.

McGOVERN HAS BEEN given another political windfall in the credibility area in the General John Lavelle affair. Lavelle admitted he violated the "rules of engagement" in the air war in Vietnam more than 20 times and approved the false reports filed with Washington on those air raids.

There are indications—and there is some evidence—that a number of other high military men and civilians had knowledge of the raids or the falsification of reports and that Lavelle simply agreed to be the fall guy.

In an atmosphere of admitted falsification of reports on the controversial air war in Vietnam and admitted doctoring of reports on the C-5A, and the forced cancellation of a tank project after more than $200 million was wasted, McGovern may not have to came up with a full explanation of his pared-down defense budget.

Demo brigade's light charge

Democrats think it was chicken of President Nixon to block a proposed dollar checkoff by taxpayers to finance presidential campaigns. So they have responded in kind—to the depth of their breasts, thighs, wings and miscellaneous parts.

John Y. Brown Jr., chairman of Kentucky Fried Chicken, proposed a 19-hour nationwide telethon addressed to the arterio and sclerotic trauma of the Democratic party treasury. It will start at 7 p.m. Saturday, July 8, our time and wind up Sunday afternoon, the day before the Democratic national Convention opens in Miami Beach.

Bob Houser

POLITICAL EDITOR

Denny Shanahan, of the Cowan and Brenner advertising agency of Beverly Hills and New York, handling the event, has hopes ranging from great to spectacular. He says John Brown would be pleased if the telethon clears six or seven million. Shanahan thinks it could reach 12 or 14 million.

The telethon's ace hole cards are credit cards—Master Charge and Bankamericard—on which contributors may charge their contributions. Credit card pledges of $50 may be paid over six months, of $100 over 12 months.

There are 51 million such credit cards. Shanahan says that means about 45 million people and "if only 2 per cent of those credit card holders are moved to contribute $10 each, that's $9 million."

Air time for the telecast will cost the Democrats $660,000 and other costs will hike the bill to as high as $1.5 million. But Shanahan says it will be worth it and the show and entertainment will be like none anybody has ever seen on a telethon. The services of 150 big name attractions, a list that is growing and may reach 175 by July 8, will assure, says Shanahan, "that we won't have to pan to the janitor at 4 a.m. in a lull."

Throughout the telecast a random contributor will be selected at intervals to receive a personal telephone call of thanks from one of the celebrities. Switchboards in 35 cities will be staffed by 10,000 to 12,000 volunteers to accept pledges.

A sampling of the talent: Girl singers—Edie Adams, Lana Cantrell, Dusty Springfield, Leslie Uggams, Connie Stevens, Dionne Warwick, Florence Henderson. Male singers—Paul Anka, Ed Ames, Billy Daniels, Vic Damone, James Darrin, Jack Jones, Billy Eckstine, Al Martino, Andy Williams. Athletes—Dick Butkus, Rosey Grier, Paul Hornung, Rafer Johnson, Gale Sayres, Roger Staubach, Maury Wills.

Among female performers will be Lauren Bacall, Carol Burnett, Gail Fisher, Sally Kellerman, Angie Dickinson, Cloris Leachman, June Lockhart, Julie London, Shirley MacLaine, Debbie Reynolds, Susan St. James, Sally Struthers, Marlo Thomas, Lili Tomlin, Edy Williams and Shelley Winters.

Burt Bacharach will be there along with Bobby Troup, Trini Lopez, Peter Yarn, Carol Lynley, the Gold Diggers, the Clara Worth Singers and the cast of Hair. And for the consumers, Bess Myerson.

The "hot" political figures of the Democratic party will also make appearances but Shanahan says it will be on a restricted basis.

As a fillip, Gov. Wendell Ford of Kentucky will next week challenge the other 30 Democratic governors to see which state comes up with the greatest money response per capita in the telethon.

In addition to the serious business, the show will try to show that Democrats have more fun, Shanahan said. To that end there will be film clips of the "wit, wisdom and humor" of Democratic presidents through the years. And there will be "funny" spot commercials for the cause, delivered by the celebrities.

For example, Paul Newman says, "we realize that everybody in America can't be a Democrat—but you can try!"

Is there a dropoff between pledges and delivery? Yes. Shanahan says collection of 65 to 75 per cent is regarded as acceptable. But with follow-up reminders the return may reach as much as 83 per cent.

One of the telethon's commercials makes the point that contributors are helping not only the Democratic party but the survival of the two-party political system. The choice, they say, is the donkey or the mammoth—that "prehistoric elephant!"

All the same, prehistoric or not, he's not throwing a telethon.

Stay on the right track

In accepting the Republican presidential nomination four years ago, Richard Nixon spoke of the longings aroused when as a child he heard a distant train.

When the President established the Western White House at San Clemente he commented on the delight he took in watching the Santa Fe Railway trains as they moved along the beach.

The railroad does indeed add a picturesque quality to the beach. Swimmers can pick flowers from between the ties. Residents on the bluffs above can gaze upon trains and fishing boats at once. And the ocean scenes are a special joy for rail passengers.

Some San Clemente and Orange County officials want the tracks moved, however. The beachfront is too valuable for use by the railroad, they insist.

At their urging, the legislature included $100,000 in the state budget for a study of the feasibility of moving the tracks inland. The move, which would cost millions of dollars, would be made largely at federal expense.

It would send the trains through mountainous country at a cost in time that would make it more difficult for Amtrak to compete with airlines for passengers between San Diego and Los Angeles.

That argument has apparently not been considered by San Clemente officials. It should be considered by federal officials, before they spend the taxpayers' money to deprive the taxpayers of speed and pleasure.

Beyond this practical argument the railroad is a congenial presence on the beach. The other works of man that would probably replace it might not be.

Is California ready to pay cost of reducing crime?

SACRAMENTO—Late last year the public's attention was dramatically focused on a new state policy for handling criminals by two homicides, committed by state prison inmates "out on pass."

The reaction, by the public in general and law enforcement in particular, prompted Atty. Gen. Evelle J. Younger to create a task force to evaluate the new policy.

The evaluation has been completed, and it puts to Californians a question being asked over and over again at every level of government: Are citizens willing to pay for the services they demand of government, or would they rather have those services reduced?

In this case, the service is the protection of society.

Younger's task force, headed by Judge Lynn D. Compton, former head of the Los Angeles County district attorney's Long Beach office, put together a 54 page report which contained 14 recommendations preceded by the chilling observation that "in view of the information gathered and evaluated, the task force concludes that there has been an increase in the exposure of the public to risk by current practices, and that the various segments of the criminal justice system have moved to implement what are believed to be progressive approaches to the problem without the availability of the necessary level of knowledge and techniques."

Bob Schmidt

A TREND IS developing in California's criminal justice system, the report stated. "The trend is, simply stated, one of reducing the number of criminal offenders who are taken into close confinement, and reducing the length of time served by those who are held in custody (with the result that there is) a steady reduction in institutionalization and a comparable increase in community- based handling of offenders."

The trend, the report asserts, is nationwide.

In March 1968, the Assembly Committee on Criminal Procedure, headed by Craig Biddle, R-Riverside, undertook an extensive study of California's sentencing policies and concluded that the length of incarceration played little if any role either in deterring crime in the first place or influencing a criminal to stay out of trouble when he was released.

Furthermore, the report stated, prisons simply did not rehabilitate prisoners.

The committee joined a presidential crime commission and the American Bar Association in recommending a shift in emphasis to "local supervision" for criminals.

The shift in emphasis has been accomplished in California.

THE TWO MURDERS committed in the Los Angeles area last year by prison inmates out on furlough involved prisoners due soon for release. They were participants in a program designed to make their return to society smoother, with the object being to increase their chances for making that return successfully.

But, Younger's task force determined, the decisions on which inmates are suitable for participation in such programs, and on which convicted defendants are suitable for probation rather than confinement, are frequently based on information that is inadequate to begin with and for which there are no adequate evaluation criteria.

The task force's first recommendation was to improve the gathering and use of criminal statistics, and its second was to improve the manner in which such statistics are evaluated and related to individual defendants and inmates.

The general public, through its legislators, must make some difficult decisions. Lengthy incarceration is expensive and, in most cases, apparently unnecessary in terms of its effect on the inmate. But it does protect society from the offender.

Probation, work furlough, early release, and similar programs cost considerably less than incarceration (about one-third the cost, Younger's task force said), and convicted persons in such programs have a slightly better record of staying out of trouble than released long-term inmates.

BUT THERE IS a risk, the task force said, because of the difficulty of making the preliminary evaluation of who is suitable and of maintaining adequate supervision of criminals chosen for those programs.

The report says a determination must be made of the "level of acceptable risk" in terms of danger to society, cost to society, and benefits when such programs are successful.

One way or another, either by lengthening prison terms or developing more proficient evaluation and supervision practices, the cost of protecting society is increasing.

Which seems to be an argument for spending more money now to combat the causes of crime in hopes of spending less money later on dealing with persons after they have become criminals.

"I couldn't help it. They followed me home!"

Everyone plays a strong middle game

It was a vast noisy dull place with a television set in every other room which people tuned to another channel whenever Dick Cavett came on, and there were gales of automobile exhaust fumes.

The superintendent was surly. "So you want to move to the middle," he said. "Who doesn't? Make an appointment for the agent to show you some space. I'm busy."

The superintendent was busy, all right. He was getting some space ready for Sen. George McGovern (who won't do).

"IS IT DEFINITE then that Senator McGovern, who won't do, is going to move to the middle so that his inevitable loss to President Nixon will not be so humiliating?" I inquired.

"All I know is what I read in the newspapers," said the superintendent. "And everything I read tells me that McGovern, who won't do, has to move to the middle. I'm getting the space ready."

It seemed inexplicably comfortable there in the middle, with all the television sets amplifying the sound of gunfire which never really killed anybody except when it was the news that was on, or an instant replay of a great state assassination.

The superintendent, who was now pumping automobile exhaust fumes into the space he was preparing for McGovern (who won't do), said, yes, it always seemed comfortable there in the middle. One reason, he confided, was that so many of the tenants used alcohol.

THE SUPERINTENDENT threw several tax breaks at random around the space being prepared for McGovern (who won't do), and set off down a plush corridor. Passing the space occupied by Humphrey, we heard the senator shout happily that things had to be done differently around the middle, but not too differently.

Then we passed the space occupied by President Nixon. He was practicing for an emergency television speech to reassure all tenants in the middle that they were good people who loved their country and that anyone who disagreed had a perfect right to disagree because that was what the middle was all about, although in good conscience he, the President, had no alternative but to mine the bathtubs of such persons.

Senator Muskie was there, too, and most of the rest of the Senate, and all of the House of Representatives, and while we hurried past they all got together and soaked the poor a little bit more by passing yet another increase in the Social Security tax, and then they drank some alcohol and passed a resolution denouncing the evils of the loco weed.

The superintendent, it turned out, was hurrying to his own space to tune out Dick Cavett, who was threatening to relieve the dullness.

"There's no point in you hanging around here, because I've got too much to do to show you what you're looking for," he said.

"I don't know what I'm looking for. I knew when I came in here, but now I've forgotten."

"YOU WERE LOOKING for a place to hang your conscience," the superintendent grumbled. "That's what everybody comes looking for here. But they all forget. It's all the television shooting, and tax breaks, and soaking the poor,and the mines in the bathtubs, and booze, and auto exhaust gases, and rushing around to turn off Dick Cavett on account of the suspicion that he is an intellectual—that's what makes them all forget."

He had opened a large storeroom and was taking bombs from its shelves. Slinging them under his arms and over his shoulders, he began distributing them, leaving several bombs outside each door.

"Everybody who lives here pays for these things," he explained, "and I'm supposed to deliver them. The trouble is everybody pretends that he hasn't bought any bombs, and they just ignore them, so I've got to come around eight hours later, collect them, and mail them out to somebody who will dump them where they will do the most good."

WHERE MIGHT that be? I asked.

He couldn't remember, he said. Nobody there could remember. It was a place they talked about frequently on television, but there in the middle it was hard to keep the names of places like that in mind. Things were too comfortable there, in the middle, he said, too comfortable for a man to spend his time struggling to think of the names of every country he was dropping bombs on to build a generation of peace.

The superintendent left six bombs in the space he was preparing for McGovern (who won't do), and, as a special favor to rank, mailed Nixon's straight to some airplane pilots.

Resolving parent-child conflict

Parent-child relationships are all too often power struggles, contests of will. Either the parent or the child gets his way. Someone wins and someone loses.

Most parents view the problem of child-rearing as one of deciding to be strict or lenient, authoritarian or permissive. But whether the parent decides to be soft or tough, the fact of the power struggle remains, says Thomas Gordon in his book "Parent Effectiveness Training" (Peter H. Wyden, Inc., $6.95). He quotes a typical exchange between a father and his 12-year-old daughter:

"Bye, I'm off to school."

"Honey, it's raining. Take your raincoat."

"I don't need it.

"You don't need it! You'll ruin your clothes!"

"It's not raining that hard."

"It is too."

"I don't want to wear a raincoat."

"Now please go get it."

"I hate that raincoat. I won't wear it."

"You march right back to your room and get that raincoat."

"But I don't like it."

"No buts. If you don't wear it, I'll ground you."

"All right. You win. I'll wear the stupid thing."

Children quite naturally resent those who have power over them. It feels so unfair. And they strike back in numerous ways: lying, blaming others, hiding their feelings, cheating, dominating others or becoming overcompetitive, needing always to win and hating to lose.

Authoritarian parents—those who make up their children's minds for them—find that their children have little incentive to carry out parental wishes. They are rebellious and resistant. The parent has trouble enforcing his decisions. The child has little opportunity to develop self-discipline.

Samuel I. Hayakawa

On the other hand, parents who rely entirely on letting the children have their way find that the children quickly learn how to control their parents. They may throw temper tantrums. They try to make their parents feel guilty, and not infrequently say unkind, depreciating things to them. Such children are often wild and impulsive. They regard their wishes as more important than anyone else's.

As for the problems of adolescence, Dr. Gordon believes most theories "have focused incorrectly on such factors as the adolescent's physical changes, his emerging sexuality, his new social demands, his struggle between being a child and an adult." Gordon argues that the central fact of this period is a shift in the power relationships in which "the adolescent becomes so independent of his parents that he can no longer be easily controlled by their rewards and punishments."

Despite the serious limitations of the use of parental power, it remains, says Dr. Gordon, the method of choice for most parents, no matter what their education, social class or economic level. Is there no alternative to the power struggle? Must there be winners and losers in every family disagreement?

Gordon has another way: the "no-lose" method of resolving conflicts. Both child and parent win because a solution is found that is acceptable to both. If they cannot agree, resolution is postponed until someone comes up with an acceptable idea.

With this method the raincoat problem is resolved like this:

"Bye. I'm off to school."

"Honey, it's raining. Won't you ruin your clothes? Aren't you afraid of catching a cold? Shouldn't you wear your raincoat?"

"I don't want to wear my raincoat."

"You definitely don't want to wear that raincoat?"

"Yeah, it's plaid."

"Something about plaid raincoats?"

"Nobody wears plaid raincoats."

"You don't want to be the only one."

"I sure don't."

"I see. Well, we've got a problem. I don't want to pay cleaning and doctors' bills and you don't want to wear your plaid raincoat. Can you think of a solution we can both accept?"

"Maybe I could borrow Mother's coat today? It's white."

"Let's ask her."

The principle is of great importance. The effects of mutual agreement between management and labor have been well established in industry. When employes have a hand in making decisions, they carry them out with greater enthusiasm and zeal than when decisions are made by management alone.

The more the world is governed by agreement rather than by power, the better off we all will be.

Eniwetok blasts planned

Eniwetok's gentle natives, who have been waiting 26 years to go back to their nuclear-scorched island, will have to wait a while longer.

U.S. authorities haven't bothered to tell them that their precious atoll, already ripped apart by 30 nuclear

by

tests, will be battered again by 21 secret new TNT blasts to simulate nuclear explosions.

The natives were evacuated in 1946. They were shipped to the neighboring island of Ujlang, a spot so barren it was inhabited only by hardy rats.

The Pentagon promised a possible return in 1973. But all the while the Defense Nuclear Agency was sending hush-hush military missions to Eniwetok to prepare for the new tests.

Heavy equipment was moved in and several acres were bulldozed. The military neglected to file an advance statement on the potential environmental damage as required by law. When they belatedly filed a statement, they violated the law again by omitting the views of the natives about the upcoming destruction.

Indeed, the 400 former residents knew nothing about the plans. The new bombs will leave craters 140 feet wide.

Poverty Corps lawyers have now volunteered to assist the islanders. In their behalf a counter-statement has been filed complaining that the new tests will prolong their enforced exile.

The statement also charges that the blasts will stir up deadly latent radiation that will poison the atoll water supply.

PRESIDENTIAL candidate George McGovern, according to the latest smear story, had to be sent home from Europe during World War II because he was a coward.

We have traced the story—which is totally unfounded—to Frank Capell, an aging right wing smear peddler from New Jersey. In 1965 Capell falsely charged that Sen. Thomas Kuchel had been involved in a homosexual incident.

It was Capell, too, who spread the preposterous rumor that Marilyn Monroe was driven to suicide by Robert Kennedy.

News you can use in your planning

Under this section in U.S. News and World Report magazine are given some advice that can help in planning vacations, auto inspection, air conditioning, vacation costs, G.I. insurance and sale of your home. Because they apply to most of us some of the suggestions are given in the following.

One warning is for those who attend conventions and expect to charge off the cost for income tax purposes. It points out that the IRS is getting tough in allowing deductions for conventions when vacationing is the major factor. If the trip is entirely for business the expense may be deducted. But if you extend the trip for nonbusiness reasons or make a side trip for personal reasons the additional expenses cannot be deducted. If the trip is primarily personal your travel expense cannot be deducted even if you have some business activity. The new rules will cause many travelers to change their ideas on charging off expenses.

OTHER INFORMATION is given on other family plans and safety factors:

"AUTO INSPECTION. Taking your car in for annual or semiannual checkups for possible defects may seem to be an inconvenience, but Canadian studies reported by the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators indicate that it is well worthwhile. The surveys showed: Two years after introduction of compulsory motor-vehicle inspection, traffic accidents dropped 8.7 per cent in New Brunswick and 12 per cent in Prince Edward Island. The drop was 19.05 per cent in Nova Scotia in the first three years.

"FOR A PARTY. Air conditioning in your home that is sufficient to keep it cool under normal conditions may not be adequate for the load when the house is full of party guests. This can be offset, says the Air-Conditioning and Refrigeration Institute, by precooling the house a few degrees lower than usual so it remains comfortable for the duration of the party.

"VACATION COSTS. In planning a holiday trip by car, the American Automobile Association suggests you budget $46 a day for the time on the road. This would be divided as follows: $17 for hotel or motel, $16 for meals and snacks, $9 for gasoline and oil, and $4 for tips and other miscellaneous costs. Those figures are based on expenses for two people driving 300 miles a day and getting 14 miles per gallon of gasoline.

"The total could be more or less, depending on type of lodging and meals. In any event, the AAA figures the vacation dollar on the road will be spent this way: 37 cents for lodging, 35 cents for food, 20 cents for gas and oil, and 8 cents for tips and miscellaneous costs.

"GI INSURANCE. About 3.9 million veterans of World War II who have Veterans Administration life insurance are to be notified in weeks ahead of an opportunity to convert dividends to additional coverage. In a typical case, a $100 dividend at age 50 would buy $224 in additional protection. The size of the addition depends on a veteran's age and amount of the dividend.

"SALE OF HOME. A decision by the U.S. Tax Court strictly interprets the tax-law provision that, when you sell your home for more than it costs, you must pay income tax on the gain unless you buy and occupy an existing home costing as much or more within 12 months or a new one within 18 months. In one case, a couple built and occupied a guest house within 18 months but did not finish the main house within the time limit. The court said the cost of the main house could not be counted in meeting the test."

Cerritos Council called 'dictatorial' in C of C split

By MARK CLUTTER
Staff Writer

The Cerritos City Council is a dictatorial body determined to prevent optimal commercial and instustrial growth and turn the rapidly growing city into just anotner bedroom community, John Corcoran, manager of the Cerritos Chamber of Commerce, charged in an interview Friday.

Corcoran's blast followed an angry break between the chamber and City Hall in the Thursday council meeting after Ronald L. Call Jr. new chamber president, presented an open letter which said that councilmen had given the chamber five ultimatums which, if not carried out, would cost the city's financial support.

Among the demands was the firing of Corcoran by June 20. The other demands called for drastic reorganization of the chamber and its membership.

The council reacted angrily. Call's letter was called "criminal," "untruthful," "and a shocking misrepresentation." "I don't see any hope of a working relationship between these two bodies," Mayor Barry A. Rabbitt said.

Corcoran, who has been manager since the organization of the chamber nine years ago, said the conflict dates back to the time when the then agricultural municipality of Dairy Valley decided to open itself to urban development.

"The new people looked upon the rich Dutch and Portuguese dairymen as mortal enemies," Corcoran said. "They were mostly very young. The thought the Dutchmen were planning the wrong kind of city. So they organized the Homeowners Association. Mayor Pro Tem Frank Lee, Councilman James S. Reddick and Councilman Robert J. Witt were among the organizers."

The dairymen did intend a different kind of city, Corcoran said.

"When they realized that they would have to sell because of high taxes and high land prices they were determined to have a balance of homes, commerce and industry. They started out by making a general plan.

"The Dutch city council was made up of astute businessmen who knew the economic facts of life for one of the potentially finest cities in the West. They preserved 5,000 acres of swampland from haphazard development. They had the foresight to bond the water system and to establish one of the largest flood controls in the area. Not one bulldozer moved until the general plan was completed.

"I believe in updating the general plan, but the planners should consider the economic facts of life," Corcoran said.

Cerritos' problems began when the Homeowners Association took over the city council, Corcoran feels. Witt and Reddick were elected. Rabbitt was elected as an independent over an association candidate but later switched, he said. Councilman Frank Leal resigned and was replaced by Frank Lee.

"Their basic philosophy is the bedroom community," Corcoran said. "There is not one businessman on the council. They don't understand the economic facts of life. A city is big business, and big business must have money.

"Cerritos has no residential property tax. The residents don't contribute financially. The bulk of necessary funding comes from sales tax. Without commerce there is no sales tax. And commerce and industry carry much of the educational burden."

That burden is heavy in Cerritos. The ABC Unified School District can't build schools fast enough to meet the needs of the young families in a city, now 32,000, which has doubled in size in two years.

"Since the Homeowners Association took over the city government there has been no commercial development in Cerritos," Corcoran said. "Everything that is here was brought in before. The city council has eliminated 25 commercial sites from the general plan.

"The chamber of commerce doesn't advocate overbuilding of commercial sites. But we do advocate that before you decide in favor of single-family residences that you be positive that present and future needs are being satisfied. There isn't a city around here that doesn't rue the day when commerical sites became residential. Once you build a house you never get rid of it except by urban renewal.

"Anyone who favors a residential city should consider Garden Grove. It started out with $1.25 city tax, which can't go higher. This city of 112,000 has a budget deficit of half a million dollars.

"Cerritos is the most strategic land in Southern California. It is central, with a five million population within 20 miles and is easily accessible by freeways. It is prime location for commerce and industry."

Business is discouraged from coming into Cerritos because of overly rigid restrictions, he said, and by attitudes encountered at City Hall. "The word is going out through the business world: Stay away from Cerritos. You can't do business there," he said. "Two or three years ago we received a mountain of mail every day. We don't get many inquiries any more."

Corcoran emphasized that his opinions were his own and did not reflect the opinion of the newly elected board of directors.

The city has been contributing $950 a month to the chamber's work.

"The chamber intends to go on functioning," Corcoran said. "There is talk of combining with the Artesia chamber and possibly for a larger chamber including much of the surrounding area."

North American Rockwell gives 250 communications certificates

More than 250 junior and senior students from 10 Southeast Los Angeles County High Schools have received completion certificates for the Advanced Communication Techniques (ACT) program sponsored by the space division of North American Rockwell.

The program is conducted as part of the division's Affirmative Action program, in cooperation with the Compton, El Rancho, Norwalk-La Mirada and ABC Unified School Districts.

Carl J. Oles, corporate vice president of personnel, heralded the program as the "forerunner to a statewide program which by next year will embrace more than 40 business firms and school districts from throughout the state."

ACT grew from its start two years ago at the space division with eight classes and 100 students, to its present position in the California vocational education scene — a situation where industry and school officials have worked together to develop a program which will better qualify graduating high school students to complete sucessfully in the job market, or better qualify them for higher education.

Joseph P. McNamara, space division president, and William E. Dean, vice president of space systems and applications, took part in presenting the certificates along with George T. Murphy, space division director.

The certificates were presented by Dr. Alonzo A. Crum, superintendent, Compton Unified School District; John P. Jones, superintendent, El Rancho Unified School District; Dr. Charles W. L. Hutchison, superintendent, ABC Unified School District; and Clinton V. Brown, vice president, regional occupational programs governing board of the Norwalk-La Mirada and ABC Districts.

James J. Haun, ACT project director, who conceived the program and has been its leading advocate since its inception, expressed a bright future for ACT and its projected plans.

Buffums' annual sales of $39 million predicted

William S. Hansen, president of Buffums' specialty department store chain, has predicted sales of $39 million for the current fiscal year from the firm's nine stores in Los Angeles, Orange and San Diego counties, up from $37.2 million last year.

Hansen told a group of security analysts that Buffums' should earn an estimated $1.30 to $1.50 per share of common stock on a primary basis in the fiscal year ending Jan. 31, 1973, up from 89 cents a share last year. There currently are 747,000 shares of common stock outstanding.

He said the substantial earnings gain is expected to be achieved by good incremental profits on the sales increase together with the effectiveness of new expense control systems, especially in the selling cost and credit areas and reduced depreciation.

Hansen said the firm's long range goals include the addition of four new stores in the next five years, with an annual volume of $55 million. He said the firm hopes to raise sales per square foot of selling space to $100 from the current $82, profit margins to 4 per cent after taxes, and return on capital to 14 per cent.

L.B. pharmacist escapes death

A Long Beach pharmacist narrowly escaped death Saturday when a young, nervous bandit panicked during an unsuccessful holdup and wildly fired three shots before fleeing on foot.

James Clark, 45, owner of Abrams and Clark Pharmacy, 3826 Atlantic Ave., said that a neatly dressed man about 20 years old approached him in the rear of the store shortly before 5 p.m. with a small pistol, demanding "all of your Seconal and all of your cash."

Clark tried to disarm the robber but the young man leaped back and fired pointblank, then fired two more scattered shots into the floor and ceiling before running out the door.

Eleanor Roosevelt dissent revealed

By HENRY RAYMONT
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was so upset about what she considered to be growing military influence on foreign policy during the first months of the Truman administration that she threatened to make her disagreement public and resign from the United States delegation to the United Nations.

Mrs. Roosevelt's concern is detailed in a new book, "Eleanor: The Years Alone," the second volume of a two-volume biography based on her private papers. The book, written by Joseph P. Lash, is a sequel to "Eleanor and Franklin," which won Lash a Pulitzer Prize last April. It is to be published July 31 by W. W. Norton.

The dispute revolved around Secretary of Defense James V. Forrestal's opposition to a plan for a United Nations police force to supervise the proposed partition of Palestine; he objected that it would place Soviet troops in the Middle East. Mrs. Roosevelt was also aroused by his refusal to allow American volunteers to go to Palestine on the eve of the Arab - Jewish war of 1948, a position shared by the State Department.

In a letter to Secretary of State George C. Marshall in February 1948, Mrs. Roosevelt said she considered Forrestal's opposition to the international force "utter nonsense."

Four days later she wrote President Harry S. Truman: "I think Mr. Forrestal is entirely wrong. I was shocked at the suggestion that any American volunteering to fight in Palestine would lose his citizenship, and I could not understand why that was not invoked when Americans went to Canada and enlisted in the Canadian forces before the war."

Her offer to resign came on March 22 after she learned that the State Department, confronted with the Arabs' avowed determination to resist the United Nations partition plan with arms, was moving toward a British proposal for a temporary trusteeship.

Her disagreement with the administration over Palestine, writes Lash, a close friend of hers, "reflected a larger disagreement over the increased deference to military considerations in the formulation of American foreign policy."

"I feel that even though the secretary of state takes responsibility for the administration's position on Palestine, you cannot escape the results of that attitude," she wrote President Truman.

"On Trieste I feel we have also let the U.N. down. We are evidently discarding the U.N. and acting unilaterally, or setting up a balance of power by backing the European democracies and preparing for an ultimate war between the two political philosophies. I am opposed to this attitude because I feel it would be possible, with force and friendliness, to make some arrangements with the Russians, using our economic power as a bribe to obstruct their political advance."

The difference were buried two months later when the president overruled the Defense and State Departments, backed the partition plan and almost simultaneously announced recognition of Israel.

The book also quotes a letter Mrs. Roosevelt wrote Dr. David A. Gurewitsch, her physician, on a breakfast meeting with Golda Meir, now Israel's premier.

"A woman of great strength and calm, and for me she symbolizes the best spirit of Palestine," Mrs. Roosevelt said. "Evidently at last we mean to follow through on a policy of aid to the Jewish state. The British role seems to me quite stupid, no more greedy and self-interested than ours has been but at last we seem to be doing better.

"Eleanor: The Years Alone," which traces Mrs. Roosevelt's dynamic public career after her husband's death on April 12, 1945, will be excerpted in the July issue of McCall's.

Torrance council balances budget

By BOB ANDREW
Staff Writer

Only a promise to purchase additional land for Sur La Brea Park was left after the Torrance City Council reached consensus Saturday on how to balance the city's $21 million budget.

The promise was to appropriate the funds from an expected $1.8 million tax windfall in federal revenue sharing money. Or — if that measure, which still is awaiting U. S. Senate aproval, fails to pass — to repeal an exemption for manufacturers from the 5 per cent utility users' tax to provide the needed funds.

Council members had spent more than nine hours in the last three days trying to reach accord on the spending program. The decision on whether or not to approve the city manager's recommended repeal of the utility exemption was central to the discusson, although it was never put to a vote directly.

Councilman Don Wilson attempted on both Friday and Saturday to repeal the industrial exemption and lower the utility tax to 3 per cent, but his motion never reached the floor.

Councilman George Brewster proposed making provision in the 1972-73 budget for spending some of the federal revenue money but tying it to projects that could be delayed until late enough in the fiscal year for Congress to have given final approval of the bill.

Before Mayor Ken Miller would go along with that concept he insisted on a commitment to provide an alternate source of funds by repealing the utility tax exemption. Councilmen Wilson, James Armstrong and Ross Sciarrotta assented.

That decision was reached Friday and left City Manager Edward Ferraro with the task of suggesting budget deletions Saturday to make up for the loss of $520,000 in utility tax funds he was no longer going to receive.

The first half was easy: delay purchase of the five additional acres of Sur La Brea Park (the condemnation price of which the city is appealing so the money would not be needed for about six months), $300,000; and reducing the park development to provide grass only the first year, $60,000.

Ferraro also listed five items totaling $26,669 that needed to be added to the budget before providing a shopping list of possible cost savings from which the council tried to pick the remainder.

Items deleted or delayed from Ferraro's initial budget proposal were: delay a new fire station opening three months to April, 1973, $48,226; close the Post Avenue branch library, $5,561 in operating costs and $14,582 for two employes; three-month delay in hiring an assistant city engineer; $3,905; delete hiring a license inspector, two zone enforcement officers, and a building inspector, $58,809; delete one park maintenance man, $9,749.

Also removed were a library page, $4,278; pocket page communications units, $2,627; police department records update, $8,000; and a one-half reduction in a fire apparatus replacement fund, $20,000.

That still left the council a little short of its goal, but Ferraro quickly suggested reducing the unappropriated reserve by the remaining $10,952, thus heading the council off before they could take a second look at what they did not cut.

Formal adoption of the budget will await the advertised public hearing at Tuesday's regular council meeting, but all the details have now been ironed out during nearly a dozen workshop sessions in the past three weeks.

Summing up the council's top actions, Mayor Miller pointed out that this was the first time in his memory that the council had balanced the budget without raising any new taxes or increasing any tax rate. Also, the council had indicated a new commitment to funding capital improvement projects, Miller said.

Orange County Soap Box Derby trials on

The first of a series of Saturday tryouts for Soap Box Derby hopefuls drew almost 100 boys and girls Saturday to a hillside race course in Orange County's Peters Canyon, near Irvine Park.

A variety of rolling stock went on display: some of it was unfinished, showing the skeletons of what will become sleek soap-box racers groomed to compete in Orange County finals July 30.

The winner of that big event will be sent to the national finals in Akron, Ohio, on Aug. 26, where competitions will be held for college scholarship money and much prestige among the soap-box derby racing set.

Wally Dietrich, coordinator of the tryouts for the sponsoring Santa Ana Elks Lodge, said that about six girls are in the tryouts thus far, but more may enter before the next ones on July 8, 15 and 29 at the Peters Canyon race course.

Almost identical to the mecca course in Akron, this one is but 50 feet shorter . . . but the course has the same grade.

Attorney indicted

A Tustin attorney was indicted Friday on four felony counts of subornation of perjury and one count of bribing a witness in an Orange County Superior Court case in which he was defendant.

The Orange County Grand Jury accused Everett Eldon Stone, 41, of 1194 E. First St. His bail was set at $10,000.

Stone had been accused of lewd conduct and allegedly hired a man to testify to an alibi.

Deputy District Attorney James A. Stotler, of Orange County, told the grand jury that the alleged fraud was discovered by another deputy, Brad Boeckman, who reported to the court.

Subsequently Stone was convicted of the lewd conduct charges for which he was tried.

Stotler claimed that Stone offered the witness $1,000 and paid him half the sum to guarantee his testimony.

12 at Lakewood Post Office will retire after 370 years on job

By HAL LOWE
Staff Writer

Almost 370 years of government service will come to an end when 12 employes of the Lakewood Post Office retire on June 30.

Postmistress Ora Knudson said that a few of the employes have already hung up their mail bags in the past two months and the last of the group will sign out on the 30th after appropriate ceremonies.

The mass retirements are part of a nation-wide program by the Postal Service to encourage those employes who are scheduled to retire within the next few years to begin early. Benefits for early retirement have been improved.

Mrs. Knudson explained that the modern technology which is being instigated by the Postal Service means that fewer employes are needed to handle the mail. Rather than have those employes who are close to retirement trained to handle the new equipment which the service is installing, it was considered more economical to have them retire early.

"It's very expensive to train employes in the new technology knowing that they will remain on the job only a short time pending their retirement," Mrs. Knudson said.

Local mail carriers at the Lakewood station who will be retired by the June 30 date, and their total years in government service which includes both military and Postal Service, are:

David Walker, 26 years; Alex Garcia, 27 years; William Thompson, 30 years; James Thurber, 27 years; Kenneth Moody, 26 years; Conrad Fee, 37 years; Harry Logan, 30 years, and Willard Mayer, 22 years.

Postal clerks who will be retired by the June 30 date are: Julius Trout, 30 years; Jack Keevers, 23 years, and Joseph Horton, 40 years.

Anthony Vander Goore, a foreman of delivery and collection, with 36 years of government service, will also retire on the 30th.

Variety of courses offered adults at campus of Artesia High School

A variety of courses are now open for enrollment on the Artesia High School campus, 12108 Del Amo Blvd., Lakewood.

Both men and women can turn a hobby into a productive new occupation by enrolling in one of the upholstery classes available at the ABC Unified School District's Adult School Upholstery Center, 16743½ Parkside St., Cerritos. The instructor is Will Bryson.

Although the evening classes are filled, there are still openings in the daytime sections, according to Bud Weber, adult school vice principal. Classes will be held Tuesdays and Thursdays from 8:30 a.m. to noon or 12:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. on Wednesdays and Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Off-duty policeman kills Hawaiian in Torrance

A 29-year-old Hawaiian was shot and killed in Torrance early Saturday by an off-duty policeman who said he was attacked when he complained the man was making too much noise, police said.

Lawrence Erwin was pronounced dead at the scene, officers said. A second man, Phil Oran Lee, 24, also of Hawaii, was arrested and booked for investigation of assault with a deadly weapon, burglary and attempted murder, officers said.

Terry Schauer, 25, a three-year veteran of the Los Angeles police force, said he attempted to quiet the men down in his apartment building at 5 a.m. The men attempted to throw Schauer over a railing, the officer said.

He then drew a revolver from his hip pocket and when the two men refused to halt their attack, Schauer shot Erwin five times, investigators said. Lee was uninjured and taken into custody at the scene.

Hometowns for the two Hawaiians were unavailable.

35 coughs a mile

Air pollution is a big problem. In fact it may seem to be too big a problem for the man on the street. But it's not. There are a lot of things all of us can do to clean up the air we breathe.

We can reduce automobile exhaust by maintaining our car's anti-pollution devices. Or by buying a car with just enough horse power to meet our driving needs. Or by having its engine tuned every 10,000 miles or every year.

We can keep gasoline-powered tools in top operating condition; we can support local, state, and national clean-air programs; and as employers we can initiate anti-pollution measures. There are a lot of things we can do. Let's.

People start pollution. People can stop it.

Training and more training keep firemen too busy for card games sports in order to stay in shape for their grueling work. The shock to the body, says Omel, of having to make the transition from a state of full sleep to breakneck speed in a matter of seconds has taken a heavy toll on fire fighters' hearts and nervous systems.

Leisure time doesn't begin until after 8 p.m. Then the men either get some sleep, read or watch television. More and more younger firemen spend their free time studying for college degrees, an ambition that doesn't go unrewarded. The department pays an incentive to its fire fighters for their level of education through step raises.

The recreation facilities for the men at Omel's station seem sparse. There is a Ping Pong table, a few weights, a basketball net and a television. According to Omel, these facilities are paid for out of the men's own pockets.

"The city provides us with a bed," he says. "We chip in for everything else."

The question still hangs there: what does the fireman do between fires? After an afternoon with the men of station 10, the answer is an unqualified: get ready for the next one.

Believers keep Packards on the road

a rumble seat coupe with a back window that rolls down so you can talk to the people sitting in the front.

"A car becomes a vintage auto when it meets qualifications of being of limited production, or has an unusual body style, and was built between 1927 to 1942.

"I'm primarily interested in driving and showing them. I've shown the 1940 Packard a couple of times. I also have a 1949 Custom eight, a 1953 Mayfair hardtop with wire wheels and continental kit; three 1954 models, one 1955 and a 1956 hardtop.

"Cars have a personality of their own," said Freiwald who lives around the corner from the location of one of the original Packard agencies in Long Beach — in 1938 the George J. Waldvogel Jr. dealership was located at 1235 American Ave. (which is now Long Beach Boulevard).

The only Studebaker-Packard dealership left in Los Angeles is Frost and French, Inc., 230 Western Ave. They even have a showroom with a couple of cars inside — used Studebakers.

"We were Packard dealers from 1940 until 1956," said Walter Bibens, co-owner of Frost and French, Inc.

"But you can still come in here any weekday and see three or four Packards. We service about 20 a week.

"What kind of people own a Packard? Well, I would say all types — dedicated people. Dedicated," Bibens continued, "because they know what a good car really is."

Bob Freiwald agrees. He says the Packard is the greatest automobile ever built. If you have any doubt, ask the man who owns one.

FINANCIAL PERSPECTIVE

Rising meat prices, floating of British pound top news

By THOMAS E. MULLANEY
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — The mounting concern over rising meat and other food prices in the United States and the sudden, dramatic action of Britain in floating the pound sterling this week diverted the attention of the business and economic community away from the state of the domestic economy and the securities markets.

Those two major developments introduced new problems and elements of uncertainty into the various markets that were not fully visible or evaluated as the week ended.

On the domestic front, the Nixon administration was pondering various options to try to bring uncontrolled raw agricultural products under a price discipline that would help in its difficult battle against inflation.

IT IS A knotty problem—one that could well undermine the whole controls mechanism. Most observers agreed that the basic approach on meat and foods had to be a program to increase supplies. An increase in imports of meat, now restricted to about 1.25 billion pounds, would help somewhat, but it might take considerable time to achieve.

It is the general affluence of the American consumer that is partly responsible for the recent sharp upward course of meat prices. The public is demanding and eating much more beef these days, but the increase in supply has been rather minimal, while production of pork and lamb had declined. Upward price pressure have been the result, and they are expected to intensify.

Imported beef is almost entirely of the lean variety used for hamburgers and variety meats such as frankfurters. An increase in beef imports, coming largely from Australia and New Zealand, would serve to ease upward price pressures on cheaper cuts of beef and indirectly on the higher-priced T-bones, sirloins and prime ribs. But, of course, it will take time.

ON THE international front, the most significant event was the decision of Britain to allow her currency to float freely after several days of speculative pressure that demanded massive support operations. It was a reflection of the country's huge economic problems, particularly rising inflation and a deteriorating balance-of-payments situation.

While the suddenness of the decision to float was surprising, it was hailed by some bankers here as a constructive move that would avoid the usual prolonged period of currency support and borrowing operations that were typical of past periods when a country's currency was subjected to such pressures.

The British move validated the view that was prevalent after last December's multicurrency revaluations at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington that, in the future, there would be more frequent changes in exchange rates by various countries.

While the British move was viewed rather calmly here, there was an air of anxiety over it in Europe's money centers and some rather frantic initial trading in some of the world's foreign exchange markets. And it does impose some new challenges for the dollar and the United States foreign trade.

BEFORE the major continental markets were shut for the weekend on Friday, the German Central Bank had to acquire about $1 billion in the first hectic hour of trading after the British announcement and the Banque France had to take in about $150 million in similar dollar-support operations. And several currencies moved above their ceilings in relation to the dollar.

But one prominent New York banker said he expected the effects from Britain's freeing of the pound from its official $2.60 level would be short-lived.

"Some people," he said, "would, of course, suffer exchange-rate losses, but there will be no material effect on trade and the pound won't float for long because of pressures from other Common Market Countries."

It remains to be seen, however, how extensively world trade, investment and various economies are affected by this startling monetary action by Britain.

WITH NOTHING particularly uplifting in the background news to spur it on, the stock market here market time during most of last week and managed to retain its steady, cautious course.

It was somewhat surprising that the market was able to hold its ground so well in the face of the rather adverse ration of economic news here and abroad.

At home, the unpalatable developments included such things as a further rise in consumer prices during May, especially meat and other foods; the upward course of the prime banking rate and other interest rates; the decline in durable-goods orders last month; the continued redemption trend in mutual-fund shares, and growing concern about the huge size of the federal deficit and the implications it carries for fiscal and monetary policy.

The Long Beach Red Cross Youth Council has elected Wayne Parks, a 15-year-old student at Hamilton Junior High School to head the city-wide group as president for the coming year.

Parks has been active in Red Cross youth affairs for the past two years. He entered the program following completion of the Red Cross leadership school held annually at the University of California at La Jolla.

Last week Parks left with a 24-man youth delegation for the leadership school where he will be a junior executive for the five-day school course.

The Red Cross Youth Council is made up of representatives from all schools in the greater Long Beach area. The council members decide youth programs for the local chapter.

When he accepted the gavel from outgoing president, Jeff Kilmer, Parks stated, "I want to involve as many youth as possible in Red Cross.

"Our organization is not perfect, few are. But we can make it better by working together."

The new youth president wants to see youth members more active in the adult programs.

"We have been offered the opportunity to serve with the adults on committees and to help decide on future programs," said Parks. "It's up to us to take the opportunity. Sitting around and complaining will not get us anywhere," he added.

EARL WILSON

Alan Arkin is amazed over his fame

Alan Arkin is amazed at how famous he's becoming.

He's made nine movies — he thought it was 11 till he counted them. The latest is "The Last of the Red Hot Lovers." He can't go anywhere without being recognized. Of course his fame really began when he made his Broadway stage debut in "Enter Laughing" 10 years ago.

"I never missed a performance in that show," he stated solemnly the other day. "One night a man from the audience said 'You were sensational in your part.'

"I thanked him. He then said, 'And incidentally, you're much better than the fellow who usually plays the part'."

"Ten years," Arkin said with a sad shake of his head, " and I haven't figured out yet how I should have answered him."

Hanging around people like Neil (Doc) Simon, author of "The Last of the Red Hot Lovers," and Paula Prentiss, Sally Kellerman, Eva Marie Saint, Shirley MacLaine and other celebrities has made Arkin conscious of being a celebrity himself.

"We had to chase Doc away from rehearsals of the movie," Arkin said. "He wouldn't stop laughing at his jokes.

"Anyway," continuing his tale of being famous, "I was in Nashville a few weeks ago and a man came over to me and said, 'I saw you in a movie last week.'

"I thought it was another case of mistaken identity, and, I said, 'I don't think so.'

"HE SAID, 'Yes, I saw you. I never forget a face.'

"I tried to be nice and told him that none of my movies would have been playing in Nashville at that time. He said, 'Don't tell me. I saw you, and, as I told you, I never forget a face.'

" 'No,' I said, and then he said, 'I'll tell you the movie. It was "Diary of a Mad Housewife." '

"I said, 'Oh, there it is again. That wasn't me. That was Richard Benjamin. People mix us up all the time.'

"The fellow said, 'I'm telling you it was you I saw in the movie. You were sitting in the lobby of this theater with a boy having a Coke or something to drink.'

"Then," declared Alan Arkin glumly, "I realized he was right. I was in a movie — a movie house with my son. The fellow had no idea who I was. I said to him, 'Yeah, you were right. You could have seen me in a movie.' The fellow said, 'See, I told you, I never forget a face.'

"Then he said, 'You a stranger here? What are you doin' in town?'

"I told him I was just a salesman passin' through."

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: "There's one thing to be said for the Mafia," notes Dick Cavett. "They're one of the few groups that still make house calls."

WISH I'D SAID THAT: Capsule description of a Las Vegas trip: "Out by jet. Back in debt."

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "Some husbands never chase other women. They're too decent, too refined, too old."

EARL'S PEARLS: Roger Price read of a scientist who crossed a racehorse with a giraffe. It's not very fast, but it's great in a photo finish.

Hefty singer Julie DeJohn says she's never been able to curb her appetite for snacks at odd times: "I was the first singer in history to hit a high C with a Hershey bar in her mouth." That's earl, brother.

Alcohol top drug trouble, expert says

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Alcohol is the nation's No. 1 drug problem, says a California rehabilitation therapist who spoke at the University of Utah School on Alcoholism and Other Drug Dependencies.

"Ethyl alcohol is this country's most abused, most dangerous drug," Bob Scott, program director of the Beverly Manor Alcoholism Treatment Center, in Orange, said.

"The alcoholic has to stop giving phony excuses for his sickness, and realize that he was looking for relief from problems, and got hooked," Scott said. "Once he decides to get well, it is just a matter of choosing the kind of treatment he prefers to follow."

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The Tampa Police Department says the majority of young men who apply for jobs have smoked marijuana but are not barred from getting employment unless it is a habit.

Capt. Joe Diaz, acting head of the Personnel and Training Division, said Saturday: "Almost every serviceman coming back from Vietnam has smoked it (marijuana).

6 plead innocent to skimming

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Six men accused of participating in a profit-skimming conspiracy at the Flamingo Hotel here have pleaded innocent to the charges in federal court.

Entering pleas Friday were Morris Lansburgh, 55, and Samuel Cohen, 66, both of Miami Beach, Fla.; Jerry Gordon, 45, and Steve Delmont, 37, both of Las Vegas; Harry Goldberg, 71, of Miami, Fla., and Las Vegas, and Samuel Ziegman, 75, of Omaha, Neb., and Las Vegas.

They were indicted by a federal grand jury here Feb. 24. Also indicted was reputed underworld figure Meyer Lansky, who is in Israel.

Eddie Fisher still a charmer at 44

By RENA PEDERSON

DALLAS (UPI) — Eddie Fisher — of Eddie and Debbie and Liz and Connie — took a sip of Diet Cola and said if he could do it all over again, he would.

"If I had been married once and divorced, I could say by now I was wisened. But three times? I have to be a fool," he said, smiling to himself and having some more Diet Cola. As an entertainer, Fisher has to watch his figure.

At 44, the movie Magazine Casanova of the '50s and '60s is still singing on the road. He amazes audiences such as those at the Fairmont Hotel in Dallas with the fact he can still raise a goose bump or two with his singing and can still charm with his stage patter.

HE DOESN'T stick with his Hit Parade songs such as "Lady of Spain" or "Oh My Papa," but starts with a rousing version of "Let Me Entertain You" and then does just that with songs such as Kris Kristofferson's "For the Good Times."

His real crowd pleaser is a medley of Al Jolson tunes he's always done — "Mammy," "After You're Gone," and "Toot, Toot Tootsie." His audiences are mostly fans of yesteryear who used to love him on Ed Sullivan and "Coke Time" on television, who envied his marriages, criticized his divorces and pitied his bankruptcy. They rise to their feet to applaud because Eddie Fisher, in his own way, is an American institution.

"It never fails and it always makes me sad, but some guy will come up after my act and say he always thought I was a creep and a gigolo and he didn't like me until he saw my show. Isn't that amazing? It's incredible all the people who can dislike anonymously."

Fisher grimaces at the thought of all the movie magazines that fed on his career and personal life. But he doesn't complain.

"All the movie magazine background was true. I was discovered in a children's hour radio contest at 13. Then I was singing in bands in the Catskills when Eddie Cantor found me. Then I was on my way, you know, Ed Sullivan shows, 'Coke Time.' Then I fell in love.

"But you know," he said, "The whole time I always wanted to be married just once and to have a house and a picket fence and fireplace and pipe and slippers . . . really."

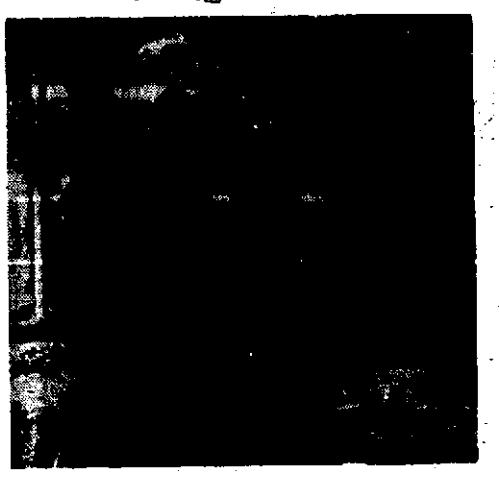

What he does have as a result of three marriages is four children: Carrie, 16, and Todd, 14, by Debbie Reynolds, and Joely, 4, and Tricia Leigh, 3, by Connie Stevens.

"I don't get to see them much. I'm gone a lot," he said. "It's catch as catch can."

His face is worn, rutted with laugh wrinkles, with a slight sag under the chin. But he looks tan and healthy and dapper.

He said his bankruptcy declaration several years ago "hurt more than my pride. It hurt everything." Now after a million-dollar settlement with his first wife, he just has to pay child support for his family. He said he is now "financially in the black."

He is currently dating a psychologist in Los Angeles. He said they have "a very good relationship — she's very intelligent and she understands me."

FINAL PERFORMANCE

Gary Gordon stars in the Long Beach Civic Light Opera production of "Fiddler on the Roof" which closes its run with today's matinee in the Jordan Auditorium, 6500 Atlantic Ave.

ALL LIVE TO TELL STORY OF CRASHES

OREGON CITY, Ore. (AP) — A train hit a car at an Oregon City crossing Friday.

The car hit two boys on bicycles.

One of the bicycles was thrown through the air and smashed the windshield of a waiting car.

Assistant fire chief Jerry Venderberghe, racing to the scene of the accident, was involved in a traffic accident en route.

City policeman Jerry Bobliss, who recounted the mishap, said no one was seriously injured.

SECRET WITNESS

$100,000 IN CASH REWARDS

"Someone always knows" is the theory behind the Independent, Press-Telegram Secret Witness program. In crimes that the police department has been unable to solve there is always someone who can lend valuable information—but because of fears for one's safety or incrimination or various other reasons—that person is reluctant to come forward. And in crimes where time is an important factor to the police, Secret Witness will be used to obtain that information without delay.

The Independent, Press-Telegram Secret Witness program is designed to relay information concerning any of these cases to the police via the newspaper without ever knowing the name of the Secret Witness. For information leading to arrest and conviction—a reward fund of $100,000 has been established by the I,P-T.

HOW SECRET WITNESS WORKS

Each Thursday and Sunday, the I,P-T will publish a list of the cases currently on the Secret Witness program . . . the rewards for each case and all pertinent information.

If you have any data that would be valuable to the police department in solving these crimes--the procedures to follow are . . .

Call the Secret Witness telephone 436-2526 between 8 a.m. and 12 midnight Monday through Friday or, 3 p.m. and 11 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, or mail in your information using this Secret Witness code system:

This is how the last page of your "Secret Witness" letter should look after you have typed or printed your information about a crime.

DO NOT SIGN YOUR NAME. Instead, select a code name for yourself — any name, as long as it's not your own — and place it and a code number at the bottom of your letter. The code number should combine three letters and three numbers in any combination.
Tear off and keep a corner of the last page, with the same code name and number on it. Mail your letter to "Secret Witness," P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, California 90801.

Grand opening for East Nine

AVCO Community Developers celebrate the grand opening today of The East Nine with more than two-thirds of the first 88 condominiums marketed through advance reservations. The final increment of 80 additional two-story units is scheduled for completion in September.

Located on the eastern edge of championship El Niguel Country Club golf course, the homes were designed to meet the growing desire of families for recreation and escape from yard work.

Green fairways, lakes, trees, and carefully "manicured" greens form the front yard view from the private lanais of every unit. Ground-floor residents enjoy nearly 500 square feet of concrete patio while second-floor residents have more than 400 square feet of balcony. Both are covered and enclosed on three sides.

Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Cassle were among those who took advantage of advance reservation offers. Cassle, superintendent of the Irvine Post Office, said, "The thing that most attracted us to these homes was that they're close to the golf course and just a short walk from the new clubhouse." The 125,000-square-foot facility, costing $1.2 million, is scheduled for completion in August.

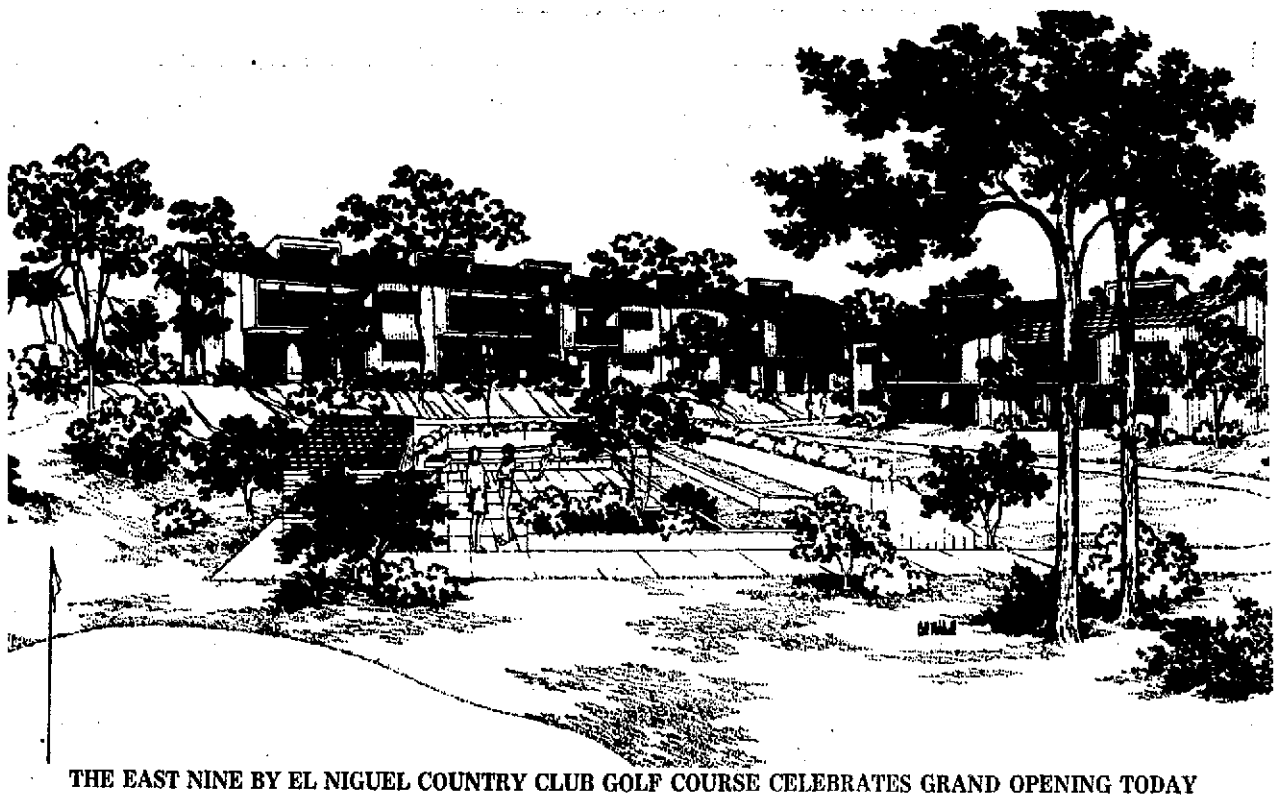

Mrs. Cassle said, "I like our home because it will require very little maintenance." All exterior upkeep, including grounds and greenbelt area, is provided for through an association fee arrangement. The interiors of these two and three-bedroom homes amplify their leisure lifestyle theme with step-saving floor plans, highlighted by a U-shaped kitchen. Clean-cooking General Electric double ovens, food waste disposals, and dishwashers are some of the standard features found in this East Nine.

Some model interiors capture the outdoors with vertical skylights. Although cooled by sea breezes, duct work and 220-volt power have been installed to handle air conditioning as an optional feature.

The sandy beach is less than two miles from this $6.5 million Laguna Niguel project. Just four and one-half miles south is Dana Point Harbor, "Homeport" for Laguna Niguel, with slips for 2,200 boats and launching facilities for 1,000 trailered boats a day.

Laguna Niguel is an 8,000-acre community in southwestern Orange County being developed by AVCO Community Developers, a major builder of master-planned new towns and residential communities, moderately priced housing, recreational developments and apartments. ACD is a publicly held company listed on the Pacific Coast Stock Exchange.

Four fully decorated and furnished models of The East Nine homes are open for inspection daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Prices start at $34,500. They may be seen by driving south on the San Diego-Santa Ana Freeway to Crown Valley Parkway, then west about four and one-half miles where direction signs clearly mark the route.

Bright profits for building product firms

Profits of building product manufacturers in the first quarter of 1972 showed a 23 per cent improvement over last year's depressed rate. The change, it was reported Saturday, was mostly a result of the still-continuing housing boom.

This bright profit picture emerged from a review of sales and earnings for a sample of 61 building products manufacturers representing 14 product categories. Contributing to the higher earnings reported by the group was a solid 12 per cent advance in sales during the opening three months of 1972, according to the F. W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems Company.

Latest results of the continuing quarterly analysis indicate that "the building materials industry has made an excellent recovery from last year's weak earnings level," commented George A. Christie, vice president and chief economist for Dodge.

He pointed out that the profit improvement was wide-spread, with nine out of every 10 firms surveyed reporting higher earnings. In particular, manufacturers in the forest products, gypsum, multiproducts, and coatings groups—all with a heavy commitment to housing — enjoyed a profit jump of 50 per cent or more.

The recovery of general business conditions was another important factor behind the improving profit situation. "Many firms in our sample are conglomerates with sizeable interest in areas other than construction," Christie said. "With industrial production now in a broad upswing, other product lines are again turning a better profit."

According to Christie, profits of building material manufacturers should continue to improve during the remainder of 1972. The Dodge economist believes that although the housing boom reached its peak rate in the first quarter, nonresidential construction is still below potential.

He expects contracting for nonresidential work to "move up nicely" in the second half of this year when commercial and industrial building will be showing stronger growth.

But it makes the grass green

Chlorophyll hazards studied

By C. G. McDANIEL

ARGONNE, Ill. (AP) — Chlorophyll — the stuff that makes grass green — produces large amounts of carbon monoxide, an odorless gas which can be fatal, scientists at Argonne National Laboratory have found.

But the homeowner mowing his lawn doesn't have anything to worry about, according to the scientists, not unless he's planning to fill a giant room full of decaying grass.

The scientists estimate that the naturally occurring chlorophyll produces 100 million tons of the gas throughout the world each year. This compares with an estimated 270 million tons produced by man-made sources, such as automobiles and factories.

The research at the Atomic Energy Commission facility here is designed to determine the total amount of carbon monoxide in the atmosphere as a step toward controlling it.

THE work is sponsored by the Coordinating Research Council, jointly directed by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, the Automobile Manufacturers Association and the American Petroleum Institute.

The two-year Argonne project, conducted by Dr. Henry Crespi and his associates, found that chlorophyll produces atmospheric carbon monoxide in two ways.

The greater part of the natural production takes place when plants and fresh and salt water algae decay and die. This is estimated to be responsible for 60 million tons of carbon monoxide annually.

The production of chlorophyll in certain kinds of fresh water algae also produces the gas.

In everyday terms, Crespi said, the homeowner who has an acre of lawn to mow cuts about 1,000 pounds of grass every two weeks. This amounts to about five pounds of chlorophyll.

As the grass dies, the decaying chlorophyll emits one-sixteenth of a pound of carbon monoxide, "or about the same as burning one-twelfth of a gallon of gas in a car without emission controls," Crespi said.

THE scientist said in an interview there is no danger from natural sources of carbon monoxide to human health. "It would take a tremendous room full of decaying vegetation in order to build up anything like toxic or lethal levels," he said.

In urban environments, the level of carbon monoxide is about 1 to 4 parts per million, he said, while in rural areas the level is well below 1 part per million.

A working person is considered to be inhaling carbon monoxide at a safe level if it does not exceed 50 parts per million during an eight-hour day, he said.

Chlorophyll is essential to photosynthesis, the process by which plants use sunlight to manufacture carbohydrates.

"The more we know about how nature produces and disposes of carbon monoxide, the easier it will be for man to work in harmony with her," Crespi said.

Forest Gardens' grand opening today

One of the most lavish mobile home communities in the Southland is celebrating its grand opening today in El Toro, according to Walter E. McKinley, director of mobile home operations for Sequoia Pacific, Santa Ana, a Southern Pacific company.

Forest Gardens, an ultra-plush, $5 million dollar development, "offers the absolute ultimate in luxury design, security, and recreational facilities," said McKinley.

The 500-space park, for adults only, is highlighted by five individual lakes and lavish landscaping. Trees, shrubs, and other green areas complement the gently rolling hillsides and natural terrains of the Lake Forest area. Some $35,000 worth of sculptured stone statuary and fountains from Guadalajara adds to the overall aesthetic appearance of Forest Gardens.

Space rentals range from $97.50 to $127.50 per month.

"More than a quarter million dollars was allocated just for landscaping," said McKinley. "We felt that the atmosphere and natural surroundings of Forest Gardens were equally as important as the recreational facilities and archictural design."

A $400,000 clubhouse, with an auditorium accommodating up to 600 persons, features a theatrical stage and an adjoining community kitchen.

Within the development's recreational facilities are: a large, heated swimming pool, therapeutic pool, saunas, shuffleboard courts, and patio lounge areas. Within the park grounds are tennis courts, archery range, and walking trails.

Security was one of the main factors contributing to the "walled community" concept of Forest Gardens. Street lights burn throughout the night. Park personnel keep vigil over non-resident visitors as well as prohibiting door-to-door soliciting.

Another feature is maintenance. All landscaping, street cleaning, plumbi and electrical work is done by Forest Gardens' staff.

Easily accessible via the San Diego Freeway, visitors to Forest Gardens should take the El Toro Road off-ramp, then turn left on Muirlands Boulevard to 24001 Muirlands.

Century Village cites comfort

Comfortable living areas comprise one of the biggest reasons people are buying homes at Century Village residential community in Cerritos.

According to the results of a buyer survey conducted by PBS Corporation at the community, more than 50 per cent of Century Village home buyers are former apartment dwellers who want more space than an apartment offers. Their most frequent comment seems to be that owning a home is the best investment for their money and the future needs of a growing family.

"There are three features that most new families look for in a first home purchase—style, space and location. At Century Village we've got all three," said John Parker, president of PBS Corp. "After one visit to our dramatic model complex, it's easy to understand why nearly one-third of our buyers are under 30. These homes are planned with the young look in mind. And; as for location — Century Village is within 20 minutes of major employment centers in the greater Los Angeles and Orange County areas, via the Artesia, 605, and Santa Ana freeways."

To make things a bit easier financially for new buyers, Century Village homes include a number of features in the basic purchase price.

These include patio kitchens with ash hardwood cabinets, disposal and dishwashers, cathedral ceilings, private master bedroom suites with separate bath, cultured marble pullmans, underground utilities and forced air heating.

Priced from $29,995, three attractive plans are available at Century Village offering up to four bedrooms and two baths.

"Century Village is only a five-minute drive from the new $40 million Los Cerritos Shopping Center offering a vast selection of major department stores and unique specialty shops," added Parker.

An 80-acre park and schools for all ages are within walking distance.

Fully decorated models are on display daily from 10 a.m. till dusk. FHA and VA financing are available as well as a new conventional program of financing that requires only a 5 per cent down payment.

To reach Century Village, take the 605 Freeway to the Artesia Freeway and proceed west to Carmenita Avenue and the new community.

Irvine Co. reports 1972 income at new high

The Irvine Co. for the fiscal year ended April 30 reported a net income of $7,687,510, which is $1.3 million above the 1971 figure, company President William R. Mason reported to shareholders this week.

The ranching, land-planning and development firm achieved a gross income in fiscal 1972 of $46,767,873, more than $11 million over 1971 and the highest in the Orange County company's history.

Mason attributed much of the company's increased income to an upswing of the region's general economy, a lowering of interest rates in the past year and the success of the company's industrial land development and agricultural operations. The agricultural division, he pointed out, expereienced an exceptionally good year, with heavy yields and quality in all row and field crops entering the market "at a time of good prices."

The financial picture presented at the annual shareholders meeting permitted issuance of a 46-cent dividend, 15 per cent over 1971. It was the sixth consecutive year, Mason noted, that there had been an increase. In 1967 the dividend per share was 18 cents.

Owner of some 83,000 acres in Orange County, the Irvine Co. distributes dividends on the basis of 8.5 million shares. More than half the shares (53.4 per cent) are owned by the James Irvine Foundation. The foundation is a charitable organization established by the late James Irvine II more than three decades ago. It distributes its income to youth groups, private colleges and universities, hospitals and other humanitarian service organizations that are not supported by taxes.

Mason's annual report also noted that the Irvine Co. paid federal income and property taxes during 1972 totaling $13.5 million. This was divided almost equally between income and property taxes.

In his message to shareholders, who met here in corporate headquarters at Newport Center, Mason cited an event that "will affect your company for years to come — formation of the City of Irvine."

"The new city," he said, "means more to us than just another governmental agency with the power to approve or disapprove our plans and zoning requests. The city is people.

"The direct and powerful involvement of the people," he emphasized, "is an important new ingredient in the planning and development of the Irvine Co.'s properties."

After tracing the 105-year history of the Irvine Ranch, founded by James Irvine, and now operated by a company established by James Irvine II, Mason spoke of the board of directors' commitment to land development through the process of master planning.

He called the newest chapter in this epic history — incorporation of the City of Irvine — "unique and exciting."

Mason said the creation of the nation's only self-governed "new town" promises to be a successful venture. "If the first six months are any indication, the relationship (between the new city and the company) promises to be all that we could hope for and expect. During that time hundreds of dedicated citizens have involved themselves, not only on the City Council and Planning Commission, but also on numerous committees that serve the new city. "These are dedicated, sincere, well-educated and reasonable citizens who want to help make their city a better place to live."

Evidence of the cooperative attitude emerging between the public and private sectors, said Mason, is the Irvine City Council's recently unanimously adopted resolution declaring it to be a municipal government policy to work closely with the Irvine Co. and other landowners "in creating a model urban environment."

"We are confident that our developments," concluded Mason, "are creating a better urban environment than people have known before, and we are willing to assume our share of the responsibility, along with the people and the governing bodies, to create this better environment."

Home sales bright, despite taxes

Despite excessive property tax burdens in some areas, the home purchase market remains exceedingly strong throughout the nation and will continue to be so in the months ahead, according to Fred C. Tucker, Indianapolis, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Basing his comments on the result of the annual market survey conducted by the NAREB Department of Research among Realtors in all parts of the nation, Tucker added that "our efforts as an association will not diminish as we seek to find substitutes for a portion of the real property tax, which has been allowed to reach too burdensome a level for too long a time in many areas of the nation."

He called for continued efforts by state legislatures to place a ceiling on such real estate taxes, affect a roll-back thereafter to a "fair level," and then to provide substitute taxes to fill the vacuum with a type calculated to be fair to all citizens, whether owners or tenants of real property.

Commenting further, Tucker said that "the mortgage money supply, now perhaps the greatest in history, will continue in availability and abundance throughout the balance of the year and that 1972 will see in total a record result in home purchases and sales throughout the nation."

Future's modular home

The future's modular home was described recently by a General Motors Division executive.

The house of tomorrow will be an automated mechanical marvel incorporating a series of computerized systems that will do everything from programming the family washing to itemizing monthly bills, income taxes and even recipes.

This was the prediction of Robert W. Fincher, of Dayton, Ohio, general sales manager of Frigidaire Division of General Motors when he addressed the Los Angeles group of home economists in business here.

"Houses of the future will feature all sorts of activity centers that will enable the homemaker to save time, energy and space." Fincher declared. "And, in some cases, even arrange modular appliances around to suit her taste and convenience.

"The cooking center, for example, may not be a kitchen as we know it today," he explained, "but rather in an area furnished in several appliance islands arranged to suggest a natural flow into the dining or family rooms as required."

He said that the kitchen may be furnished in free-standing appliance mini-modules that form functional centers. There might be a refrigerator center composed of four mini-modules, which do not resemble today's units. The dishwasher-sink might fold away into the wall, along wih other specialized cooking appliances.

The cooking center of tomorrow might feature built-in appliances that can be programmed together to cook an entire meal, or be used individually.

Designers already are exploring the idea of laundry center with a programming dvice that will furnish at readout with special washing instructions.

At another center, all of the cooking and dining cleanup chores can be completed. There might be a multi-level dishwasher, a food waste disposer and trash compactor — all combined into a single unit. A hot water heating and storage tank as well as dish and utensil storage would be incorporated into this clean-up combination.

Fincher said that a communications module would function as a kind of supercenter — a household computer that would accept and store information about recipes, monthly bills, income taxes and the like, then later publish that information to the householder at the touch of a button.

There might be a closed-circuit television screen for viewing the neighborhood — ideal for locating Junior when he's late for lunch or providing security information by showing the movements of intruders.

Such a computerized supercenter would even have its own provision for the programming of complete meals.

"No house of the future will be complete without having its own environmental control system," Fincher predicted, "with air purifiers, conditioning and all of the other basic comfort utilities organized in a single module.

"Undoubtedly there will be a separate refreshment center, disposable vacuum, water conservation devices and in short, a whole new coterie of life-support systems as superior to today's appliances, in their technology, as an Apollo Command space ship to a commercial jet airliner."

Fincher added that modular type homes are already a present and growing reality with kitchen, bathroom and utility modules having plumbing, electricity and heating systems incorporated into the walls.

Condominium securities

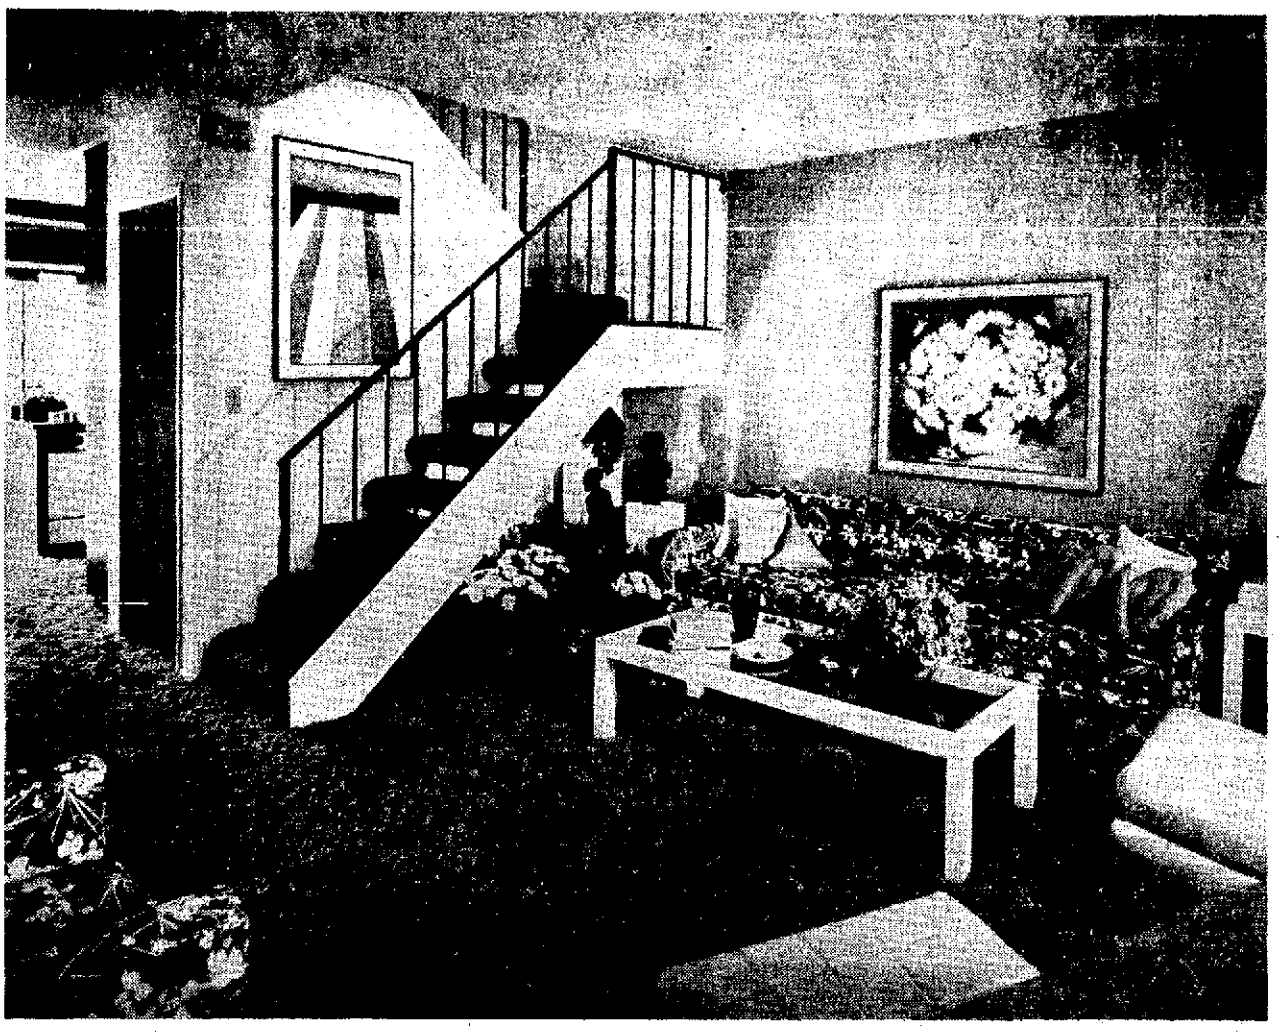

The first condominium housing units to be treated as securities rather than real estate in California under new guidelines established by the Securities & Exchange Commission have been offered for sale.

According to Stephen F. Santangelo, vice president of Blackfield Hawaii Corp., an increasing trend toward the sale of condominiums that provides a program of income as part of the sales package prompted the SEC to require such properties to be sold under the same procedures and regulations as stocks, bonds and other securities.

The initial condominium project to offer units for sale in California under the new procedure is a Hawaiian development — Blackfield Hawaii's 160-unit plantation Hale Condominium resort on the island of Kauai. Blackfield Hawaii is a subsidiary of Los Angeles-based Pacific Lighting Corp.

The $37,000 units are sold here to mainland residents seeking housing in Hawaii which they plan to use for short vacation periods, and then rent the remainder of the time.

Under new SEC guidelines, any sale of a condominium across state lines that includes an income-producing rental agreement must be handled through a registered securities broker. The SEC maintains that investment income from condominium rentals is no different from income produced by other securities and should therefore be governed by similar regulations.

CHEERFUL LIVING ROOM ATMOSPHERE CONTRIBUTES TO POPULARITY OF BRADFORD PLACE MODELS

Bradford Place scores with buyers

Sales of townhomes at the popular Bradford Place-Santa Ana have reached the $2 million mark in less than 90 days, it was announced today.

"Buyer response to our new community at Main Street and Dyer Road in Santa Ana has been just as enthusiastic as it was in Stanton, where last year we sold 496 townhomes in 11 months," said Charles Dreyer, vice president and marketing director for Grant Company of California, a subsidiary of Santa Anita Consolidated, Inc.

"Our original Bradford Place became the most popular townhome community in Orange County, and from all indications, the new Santa Ana project will continue the Grant Company's leadership in the development of moderately priced housing," he added.

The innovative land use plan by Grant Company has the townhomes surrounded by park-like greenbelts and landscaped areas. Four swimming pools, two clubhouses and special tot lots are being located within the community for the exclusive use of homeowners.

Bradford Place-Santa Ana townhomes are priced from $19,995 to $24,995 with two, three, or four-bedroom floor plans available. The homes may be purchased on 30-year conventional loans with only 5 per cent of the purchase price required as a down payment.

Included in the purchase price of all townhomes are such features as wall-to-wall carpeting, kitchens with built-in ranges, ovens, dishwashers, and disposers, closed two-car garages with laundry areas, and private rear patios.

Residents may devote more time to recreation because the time-consuming maintenance chores usually associated with home ownership are handled by the homeowner's association.

"A Bradford Place homeowner need worry only about his own private patio," noted Dreyer, "and this will afford him more time to pursue outside activities, many of which are practically at his doorstep."

The first unit of the $15 million community is located within five minutes of South Coast Plaza, one of Orange County's largest shopping centers, and is only a 10-minute drive to Newport Center, another major regional shopping center.

Four furnished models, decorated and furnished by Carole Eichen Interiors, are now open daily for inspection.

Thomas S. Carey has been named vice president, personnel, for The Larwin Group, subsidiary of CNA Financial Corp.

Truck terminal due in Irvine

A streamlined truck terminal facility, the first of its kind in the Irvine Industrial Complex, will result from the sale of three acres of land in that development to Sequoia Pacific Realco of Santa Ana.

Sequoia Pacific, a real estate development arm of Southern Pacific Co., purchased the land from the Irvine Co. Stuart Klabin & Co., Inc., of Inglewood, represented both parties in the transaction and concurrently negotiated terms of the 15-year lease between Sequoia Pacific and Sure Trucking Co., which has a total consideration of $850,000.

According to Sequoia officials, the firm will design and build an 18,200 square-foot, one-story facility at the site that will be used by Sure Trucking Co., to replace the latter's Costa Mesa plant.

The building is expected to be ready for occupancy Oct. 1.

Huntington attracting diverse buyer spectrum

Huntington Town Homes, now selling the second unit, are attracting a broad spectrum of buyers, sales agent Alex Graham reports. Young marrieds buying their first home, and mature couples who no longer need a big family home, are selecting the Huntington Town Home way of life, he said.

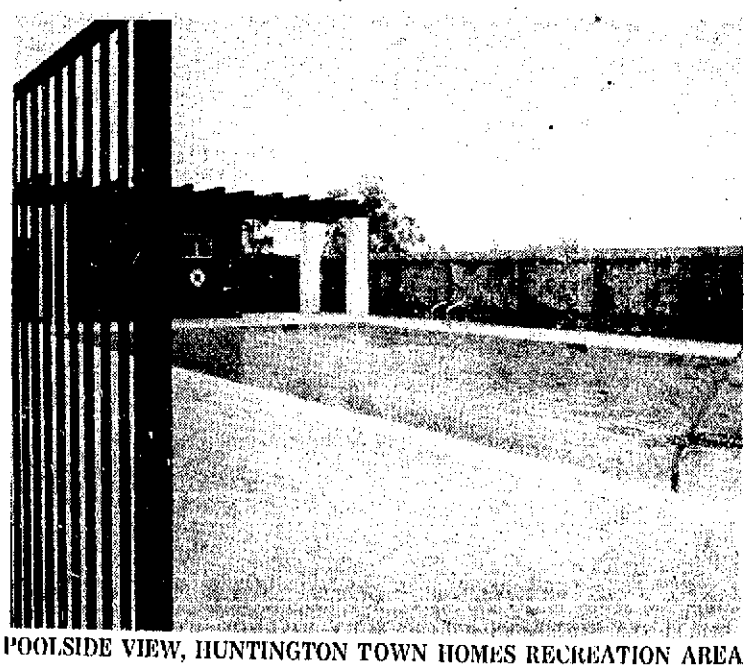

Prices begin at $20,650, with FHA, VA no-down financing. Payments as low as $138.38 per month, including principal and interest, give buyers the opportunity of acquiring equity at less than rent for a comparable home, Graham said.

Luxurious models offer choice of two or three-bedroom plans, single or two-story, with main bath, powder room, and private patio. Kitchens have range, oven, dishwasher and disposal, hardwood cabinets and space for laundry equipment. Living rooms and all bedrooms are carpeted.

The recreation area has heated swimming pool, shower and restroom facilities, an a grassy play area for children. All gardening and exterior maintenance is professionally cared for.

Schools are within easy walking distance. Shopping facilities and freeway ramps are close by.

To reach Huntington Town Homes, take Coast Highway to Warner, east to the first signal, left on Algonquin to Heil, and right to sales office. Or, take the Garden Grove Freeway to Bolsa Chica turnoff, south to Heil and right to Huntington Town Homes.

SONS CHRISTOPHER AND TONY WITH JOHN OSBORN
And Rolls Royce Phantom III Sports Saloon

WORLD OF WHEELS

By ART STEPHAN
Auto Editor

It's probably the largest Rolls Royce trading post in the country, but it's definitely right here in Long Beach.

Talking about John Osborn's Rolls Royce Rancho at 20th and Cherry here, long famed as a prestige car owner.

John Osborn, major domo of John W. Osborn Co., who runs the class car operation with his sons Christoper and Tony, is no Johnny-Come-Lately to the world of wheels. Celebrating his 25th year in the business, Osborn senior has seen quite a few pink slips change hands, and I'm not referring to ladies lingerie.

John handles a lot of prestige cars at his Cherry Avenue operation but the specialty of the house is the elegant Rolls Royce. He sells about 50 of these British-born beauties each year and is literally known around the world for his Rolls Royce inventory. While I was in his office for this interview telephone calls came in from New York and San Francisco with inquiries as to availability of certain models.

And if you want to see an elegant set of spokes, you should visit his showroom for a look at a 1937 Rolls Phantom III Sports Saloon. And spokes is the word, not mag wheels, because this is the original equipment on the Phantom. John got this car from a Texas airplane manufacturer who spent $50,000 to restore the noble beast to its original condition.

A look at the Sports Saloon will tell you where the 50 Gs went. The car was torn down completely, and every part of the machine was restored to mint condition. It's a beautiful yellow-gold color and immaculate from top to tires. Osborn explained it is a "100-point car" which means it has been 100 per cent restored to its original factory condition. He guessed there were only about 15 prestige cars in the state that could qualify for this title.

The Rolls Royce merchant calls the car his "Golden Anniversary" model in keeping with his 25th anniversary in the "previous owner" car business. (C'mon, now John; you know 25 years is the Silver Anniversary, but, go ahead). Osborn explained the car has been sold to a doctor who has left it at his agency while the MD has his garage remodeled to house the golden beauty.

In addition to an inventory of Jaguars, Lincoln Continentals, Ferraris and the like, Osborn Company is big in the leasing business. "We can lease you any kind of luxury car you could want," Osborn explained. "we specialize in new Cads, but we can put you in a Continental, Mercedes, etc., or if the need arises, we can lease you a new hearse."

Sorry, John, but when I go I'm going the ashes over-the-ocean route. Adios.

What's your problem?

Don't let those fences hurt you

By DON G. CAMPBELL

You're probably familiar with the old saying, "Good fences make good neighbors."

But there's a more pertinent saying. G. K. Chesterton said it: "We make our friends; we make our enemies; but God makes our next-door neighbors."

Blessed is the man, in other words, who has ended up with a neighbor who doesn't set his teeth on edge.

MR. CAMPBELL:

We have fenced in our back yard, and the fence company insisted on putting our fence two inches inside OUR property line, since neither of our neighbors would go in with us.

Now, one of our neighbors has fenced in his back yard, and insisted upon putting his posts right against our posts, which are NOT two inches inside his property line. The fence company said he could do that.

Does he get those two inches of our property? Our lot has staked out there, put up by the surveyors when we bought our property. This neighbor wanted to hook his fence onto ours, which we refused, since he did not want a fence up there in the first place.

What is the law on this two inches of our land? Who owns it? It doesn't seem fair that the neighbor gets it. We wanted our fence on our property line, but the fence company refused to put it there. Now, they've out his right up against ours, and said they could do that. — Mrs. S.R. (Indianapolis, Ind.)

ANSWER: This may be the first time in the history of this young country when a fence company has set itself up as both arbitrator and the final court of appeals between two neighbors.

You have to keep one thing firmly in mind, here — the fence has no bearing on who owns, and who doesn't own, the disputed two inches of land. It's clearly yours, and will remain yours even if you had to erect the fence 10 feet inside your actual property line.

The whole thing is a little silly, you know, and started going wildly awry when your neighbor arched his back and refused to share the expense of the fence. I don't know how anything very rational can come out of it. I suppose the best bet is to declare a truce and see if the neighbor won't share the cost of moving the fence onto the property line. This certainly makes more sense — and is a lot cheaper — than having parallel fences two inches apart.

Who's going to keep that two-inch strip of grass mowed?

MR. CAMPBELL:

A year ago we purchased a lot in a resort area from a development company which has a local office. Six months later we wanted to sell it back to them, got the run-around for four weeks ("I'll find out and call you back"), and gave up.

We tried again some time later and the salesman told us that he had listed it on their "resale program," a program which didn't even exist. After some discussion we were told to "just set a price on it and offer a commission" and any of their salesmen would sell it. Supposedly this was done. If it was that easy, why didn't they tell us the first time we mentioned our intention to sell?

My problem is this: how can I be sure that it is actually listed for sale and is being shown? No agreement of any kind was drawn up to this effect. After six months of stalling and deception, I just cannot trust their intentions.

Please fill me in on listing procedures of this type or advise me what I can do to make them buy it back (if this is possible). — Mrs. C.J.L. (San Diego, Calif.).

ANSWER: It's almost a lead-pipe cinch that your property isn't listed with the development company for resale. In the majority of states a listing agreement doesn't have to be in writing. But in your particular state (California), and some 14 others, it DOES have to be in writing. Therefore, since you haven't seen or signed any such document, it is pretty clear that you are being led down the primrose path.

Of course, there are a couple of unanswered questions here and the dominant one is: did the development company guarantee, in writing, that it would buy back (or resell) the property in the event you changed your mind? If the agreement stipulated that it would TRY to resell the property for you, did it specify how quickly, or how thoroughly, it would try to do this?

Why the development company is dragging its heels is pretty obvious. The sales commission on an original piece of property is a whale of a lot bigger than it is on a resale.

If the company guaranteed in writing to buy back, or resell your property in the event of dissatisfaction, then you should retain a lawyer, immediately, and force it to live up to its contract. If, on the other hand, it were simply an oral agreement — which it has no intention of pursuing — then you should retain a legitimate real estate broker and put the resale in his hands.

MR. CAMPBELL:

Please advise me of my rights as a wife in this matter.

My husband is past 60 years old and has a checking and savings account with his sister's name on them. Can she claim all his money if he should pass away? Mrs. E.S. (Buffalo, N.Y.)

ANSWER: Unless you move pretty fast in blocking it, she could, indeed. It's a strange arrangement. I suggest a heart-to-heart talk with the gentleman reminding him where his first moral, and legal, responsibilities lie.

(Campbell welcomes your letters and comments. Questions and problems of general interest will be answered in his forthcoming columns. Write him in care of this newspaper.)

Beachwalk 'makes waves'

A. J. Hall's new community by the sea, Beachwalk, is making waves among middle-income buyers.

Presented the Award of Distinction in the 1972 Gold Nugget competition, Beachwalk offers the prestige-conscious homebuyer an unusual and individual look in living, according to Emmet McKune, marketing director for A. J. Hall. Beachwalk was created to fill the gap between the luxury city condominiums and the suburban townhouse, he said.

"Our development is practically a rarity in this price range — offering the no-maintenance freedom of a condominium, yet with the style and space of a distinctive conventional home," commented McKune. "We are receiving strong buyer response from families tired of the responsibility of pool, yard, and home upkeep — yet desiring the latest look in modern living. Beachwalk has also had impact on young, active families wishing to upgrade to a newer home — with abundant recreation amenities such as those our community offers."

Located a quarter of a mile from the ocean, residents of Beachwalk enjoy a year-round, smog-free sea breeze environment. Priced from $36,000, Beachwalk patio homes are designed with five to seven units per building separated by sound proof common party walls. A total of five floor plans in one and two-story designs is available, offering up to five bedrooms and three baths.

Beachwalk homes feature generous use of rich ceramic tiles, 100 per cent nylon shag carpeting, electric kitchen built-ins with double self-cleaning oven and anodized sliding glass doors, wood-burning fireplaces with log lighters and ceramic tile hearths clerestory windows, private enclosed courtyards and forced-air heating.

"Besides being a short walk from the ocean, residents can ejoy Beach Houses Number 1 and 2 providing billiards, community game rooms and an entertainment area as well as six other swimming pools, play areas and cabanas that are scheduled for completion in the near future," said McKune.

Adjacent to the beach houses are the Beachwalk recreation amenities including a sand floored volleyball court, junior olympic-size heated pool, therapy pool and cabanas.

The cabanas offer saunas, showers and a locker room for swim suit changes.

"Beachwalk is situated directly across from the 18-hole Huntington Seacliff Golf Country Club and is adjacent to night lighted public tennis courts," added McKune. "Shopping, parks, and schools for all ages are within walking distance."

Designed by Walter Richardson, A.I.A., the homes feature landscaping by P.U.D. and interiors by Erickson and Associates. Furnished models are open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The community may be reached by taking the San Diego Freeway to Golden West Street offramp and proceeding southwest to Beachwalk, at 19751 Deep Harbor Drive, Huntington Beach.

Beachwalk is a joint venture of A. J. Hall Corporation and Mansion Properties, Inc. It is part of the Huntington Seacliff master-planned community.

What happened to the hot water?

Heater needs loving care

If no hot water is a common complaint in your household, it might be wise to consider the source.

According to Chuck Whitmer, sales manager for Southern California Gas Co.'s Southeast area, a chronic hot water shortage, puddles beneath the tank, and discolored or rusty water when the tap is turned on are indications of an ailing hot water heater.

"A water heater is the hardest working piece of equipment in the home," Whitmer said. "Approximately 80 per cent of all water consumed in the home is heated. This can amount to 100 or more gallons per day."

How much hot water you use depends on such things as family size, the number of appliances which use hot water — and even how long and how often one stays in the shower. Average requirements include: 20 gallons for every bath or shower, eight gallons for the kitchen sink, 18 to 40 gallons per automatic washer load, nine to 16 gallons per dishwasher load and about 12 gallons per person for miscellaneous needs, such as shaving and daily cleaning chores.

If your present hot water heater is falling short of the mark and a careful check finds it beyond salvage, or too small for your family, a new water heater will probably save money, not to mention inconvenience. Constant use of a too-small water heater is costly and inefficient, according to Whitmer.

He offers the following information to help you select a water heater tailored to fit your household's present and future needs.

First, determine the peak use load requirements and match them to a water heater which will supply those needs.

Water heater capacities range from 20 to 90 gallons. The key factors are tank size (number of gallons of water the heater holds) and recovery rate (the number of gallons of water that can be heated in one hour).

The exterior finish of your new hot water heater should be easy to clean with a baked-on enamel or porcelain enamel finish.

All glass-lined tanks and some galvanized steel tanks have a magnesium rod to attract the corrosive elements so the water heater lasts longer. The life of a water heater depends mainly on the tank's resistance to corrosion.

A water heater guarantee should promise repairs or replacement of parts, including controls, for the first year and replacement of the whole heater if the tank leaks within a specified period. The length of the guarantee — from five to 15 years — is a clue to the quality of the tank.

Water piping should be the smallest size capable of producing a satisfactory flow to meet hot water requirements. This reduces temperatures surface loss and saves fuel. Both gas and water pipes should have shut-off valves ahead of the connection to the water heater.

LOW MONTHLY PAYMENTS ARE EMPHASIZED AT CARMENITA VILLAGE IN CERRITOS

Carmenita presents easy package

The financial package offered by Carmenita Village Townhouse Condominiums in Cerritos is one that almost every family can qualify for, reports Alex Graham, president of Marketing Management Co., sales agent for the builder, DeRuff Construction Co. of Newport Beach.

"No down V.A. and low-down F.H.A. terms mean that veterans can move into one of our two-bedroom, two-story homes for as little as $150 down and with monthly payments as low as $131.50," Graham said.

"The beginning price on our homes is only $19,700, and only slightly higher for a larger two-bedroom home, so our down payments are extremely low."

Included in the full sales price of a Carmenita Village home is a complete move-in package: refrigerated air conditioning, wall-to-wall carpeting in all bedrooms, living room, halls and stairways; decorator selected drapes throughout; kitchens with all built-ins, including dishwasher, private fenced concrete patio, front yard landscaping and sprinklers and private parking and entryways.

Located midway between the Artesia and Santa Ana freeways in Cerritos, it is excellently situated for the employment districts of Los Angeles, Long Beach and Orange County, Graham said. Children of residents walk to both elementary and intermediate schools and there are many shopping centers within short drives of Carmenita Village. The 100-plus stores of Los Cerritos Mall is just a 10-minute drive from the homes.

Model homes are open daily from 11 a.m. on Carmenita Road in Cerritos.

Lan Ron transfers into Newport Beach

Corporate and administrative offices of the three Lan Ron companies have been moved to Newport Beach, said Ron Lane, president. For three years, offices have been at Fairmont and Yorba Linda boulevards in Yorba Linda.

The Lan Ron group includes Lan Ron Enterprises, Inc., developer of Yorba Linda Knolls, a $12,500,000 luxury home project; Lan Ron Properties, Inc., a land development company; and Lan Ron Construction, Inc., builders of communities in the Laguna Niguel area.

"Expansion of the three companies from Northern Orange County to major building in Southern Orange County requires a more centrally located headquarters," said Lane.

Projects under way include townhouses for retirement living in the Laguna Niguel area, a new country club luxury home development in Yorba Linda, and a country living home community similar to Yorba Linda Knolls in the northeast corner of the county. All will be under construction this year.

THE Lan Ron companies have had consistent growth since the firms were moved from Pasadena in 1968. Since that time, the companies have completed single family home construction totalling $10,000,000.

Growth of the companies will be accelerated in the coming year with additional activity in other Orange County and Southern California areas, Lane said.

Administrative offices, including accounting, purchasing, public relations and advertising and general construction departments will be based at 4120 Birch St.

Officers of the companies also include L. Vincent Mayell and Grover C. Brown, vice presidents.

Caspers seeks citizen support for tree planting

Orange County businessman Ronald W. Caspers said his firm is going to plant up to 5,000 trees in environmentally blighted areas in a program to get at least that many citizens personally involved in the county's ecology.

Caspers, who is also chairman of the Orange County Board of Supervisors, said his firm, Keystone Savings and Loan, has launched its long-planned efforts to plant a tree in the name of any Orange County individual willing to participate.

"All they have to do to get involved is send us their name," Caspers said, speaking as chairman of the board of Keystone Savings, of Westminster.

Working on conjunction with the State Division of Forestry, Caspers hopes to get things rolling by planting a variety of trees purchased from the state in several park sites.

Chief Forestry Ranger Ed Martin said the first trees will go into San Juan Creek near San Juan Capistrano, an area laid waste by fires and indiscriminate tree-chopping. The state is also rehabilitating the creek dam and restocking also rehabilitating the creek dam and restocking the creek with game fish.

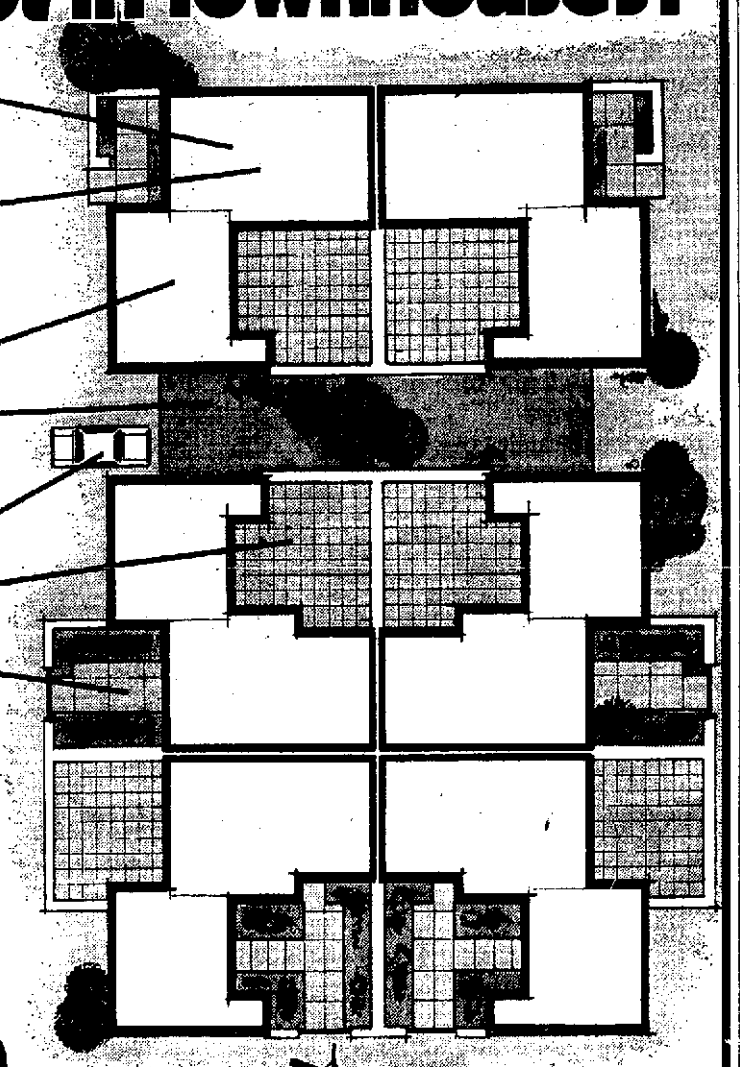

Martin said the two-year-old trees purchased in locations throughout the county between now by Keystone will be planted and September. These trees ordinarily would have been planted at the taxpayers' expense, he said.

College Park offers 1,200 homes

One of S & S Construction's newest developments — College Park Cypress — is enjoying a tremendous sales pace, the developer reports.

In just four months since its grand opening, the project has sold over 100 homes and is presently constructing its fourth unit.

"We're extremely pleased about the continuing traffic and sales pace at College Park Cypress," commented Mark Bader, general sales manager. "We never anticipated such a strong traffic flow to continue this long after our grand opening Jan. 23 — we're still averaging over 350 visitors to our model site each week."

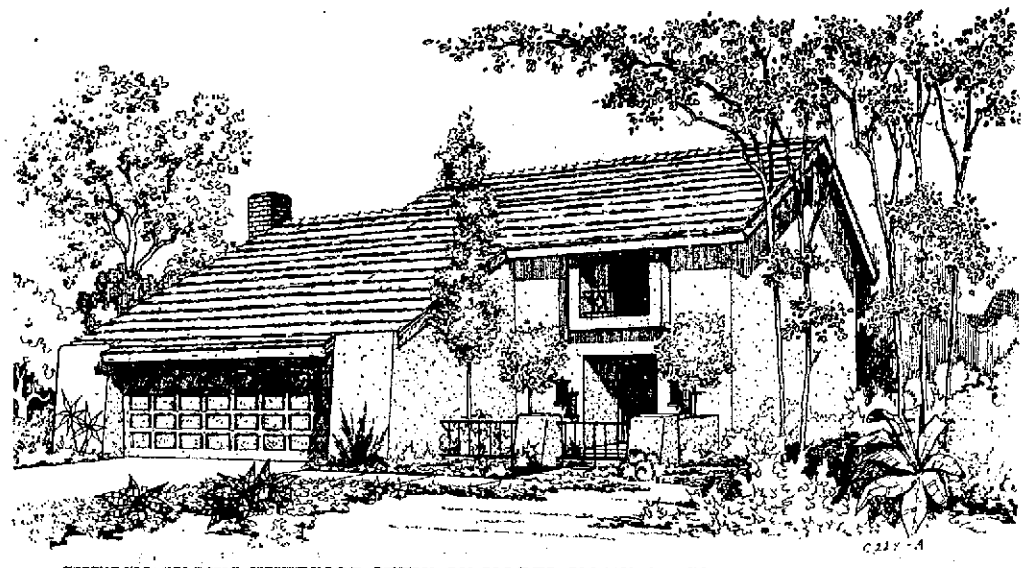

Located on Valley View between Orangewood and Katella, College Park offers 1,200 homes with six different floor plans. Eighteen varied exterior elevations allow the buyer to "customize" the exterior of his home to his individual taste. Heavy wood beam trim, natural stonework or brick is used extensively in College Park homes.

College Park offers three to seven bedrooms with 1,530 to 2,650 square feet of living space. The largest home, with 2,560 square feet, is a particularly adaptable floor plan which may be built with three, four, five, six or seven bedrooms, depending on the family's needs. If the buyer prefers three bedrooms, the home features a family room-kitchen area which extends the entire width of the home, including a sunken conversation pit with fireplace. All bedrooms are on the second floor, including split-level master suite . . . plus a huge recreation-hobby room.

College Park features included in the purchase price are shag carpeting throughout — including all bedrooms — decorator sheet vinyl flooring, cedar shingle roof, wet bars in many homes, completely equipped kitchens with self-cleaning ovens, cast iron tubs, ceramic tile in kitchens and baths, block-wall fencing.

"By offering our buyers the widest selection of quality materials in many different colors and design schemes, we not only enable them to 'customize' their home — but they are offered materials that will apply to any interior design motif they might choose, whether its contemporary, early American, Danish, or what-have-you," said Bader.

S & S Construction is the major operating subsidiary of Shapell Industries, Inc. listed on the New York Stock Exchange, and has built more than 16,000 homes in Southern California. Homes at College Park are priced from $37,450. The sales complex is located at 11800 Valley View and is open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Bank greets Hodges executives with flowers as they enter East-West center

When executives of Rex L. Hodges Realty moved into their new offices in Anaheim's picturesque East-West Shopping Center, they were greeted with an enormous bouquet of flowers presented by a Sumitomo Bank official. George Yamashiro, assistant vice president of the bank branch at the center, gave the flowers to Hodges vice president Bernie Jones and office manager Phil Konan on behalf of the bank manager, vice president Frank Omatsu.

The new Hodges location is at 2943 W. Ball Road on the corner of Beach Boulevard. There are several unusual businesses with an oriental flavor in the shopping center. Sumitomo Bank is offering Hodges customers conventional home loans with terms up to 30 years. There are no pre-payment penalties, no impounds, and interest rates as low as 7.25 per cent.

East-West Furniture, Inc., is also housed in the center. They have served Anaheim residents with imported oriental furniture and custom carpets and draperies for over six years. President Kimio "Butch" Tamura is a veteran of more than 25 years in the furniture business. The firm also offers a custom interior decorating service.

Nippon Foods, at 2935 W. Ball Road, specializes in foods from Japan, the Philippines, and Taiwan. Proprietor Shigeo Yamasaki is a native of Japan.

The Asaki Beauty Salon in the East-West Shopping Center is owned by Mrs. Nancy Inoue, who has won many professional awards for hair dressing. She is a member of the Orange County Coiffeurs Guild and the California Cosmetologists Association.

Kyoto Oriental Gifts, at 2947 W. Ball Road, sells Japanese stereo tapes and records, in addition to a complete line of oriental gifts. Masaru Morita is the proprietor.

Ann Takahama operates the Naris cosmetics store in the center, and Kiyoshi Ikai's Miki Tea House is a popular restaurant serving authentic Japanese foods. The tea house is open daily except Tuesdays for dining from 11:30 a.m. to 9:00 p.m.

Hodges offers no payment equity loans to sellers

Home owners who list their homes with Rex L. Hodges Realty may take advantages of an exclusive equity loan plan, wherein no payment is made on the loan until the property has been sold, according to president Robert C. Westmyer.

These equity loans are repaid out of the proceeds of the sale of the home.

Some owners use the Hodges loans to renovate their property so it will bring a higher price when sold; others need cash to complete the down payment on a new home. Occasionally, some pressing personal problem is the reason for requesting this loan service.

Because of their size, the Hodges organization is able to guarantee the sale of a home if the owner so desires. If the seller wants his money in full in as little as five days, Hodges will also buy a home themselves for all cash.

Complete information may be obtained from any Hodges office.

Rex L. Hodges Realty opens new Anaheim office:

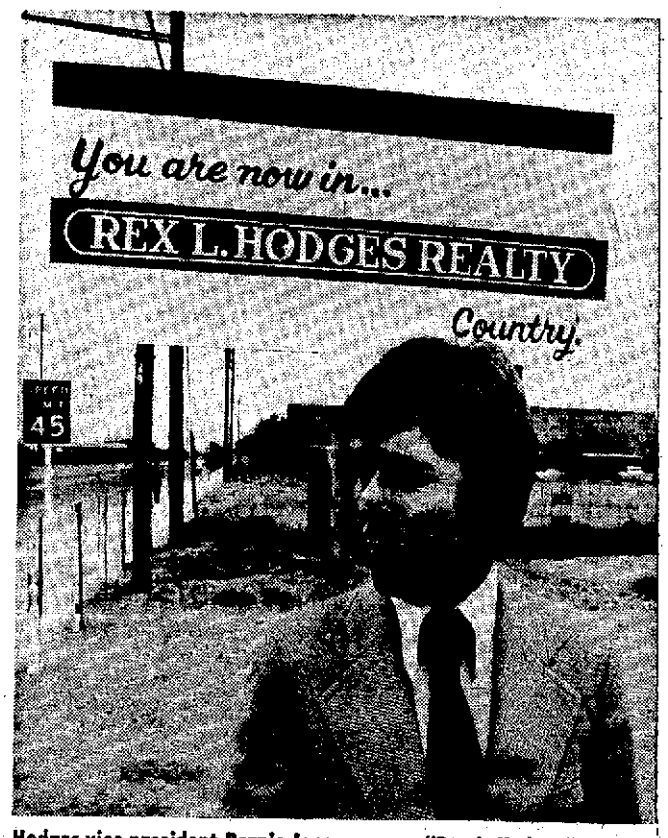

Sales people sought to staff 19 other locations

Another new office for Rex L. Hodges Realty has been opened in the unique East-West Shopping Center in Anaheim, according to Robert C. Westmyer, president of the rapidly expanding real estate firm. 19 more offices will be added as soon as qualified sales personnel can be found to staff them.

Manager for the new office is Phil Konan, who became a top salesman in the Hodges Cypress office in only one year. "We believe in finding people with potential," Westmyer stated, "and advancing them within the organization as rapidly as possible. Phil Konan is a prime example of a man who has worked hard and taken advantage of our exclusive training program to make a lucrative career for himself." Westmyer stressed that Hodges is "going all out" to attract sales men and women with real estate licenses. "We're advertising in newspapers and on radio. Applicants are told to contact our vice president and sales manager directly to learn about Hodges and what we offer. His name is Bernie Jones, and he wants to talk to each salesman personally." Jones may be reached at his office on his own private telephone lines. His special phone numbers are: (714) 839-5501 and (213) 435-6381.

Rex L. Hodges offices currently serve more than 45 communities. All existing offices have been recently refurbished or remodeled, and some have been enlarged in the past few weeks by as much as 2,200 square feet. Hodges also owns a complete property management company, an escrow service, and an insurance company. New sales people are trained in an ultra-modern educational division with closed-circuit television facilities.

Rex L. Hodges Realty was founded in 1929 and has expanded continuously for the past 43 years.

Hodges vice president Bernie Jones surveys "Rex L. Hodges" country as he stands in front of a large billboard in Cypress.

Aaron's outburst two-times Dodgers

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

For six games in 1972 the Dodgers somehow managed to corral Atlanta's slugging Henry Aaron.

But the greatest living home run hitter busted loose in a big way Saturday night in the second game of a twi-night doubleheader before 46,424 awed fans at Dodger Stadium.

Stymied on just one hit in 20 previous at bats against Dodger pitching this season, Bad Henry smashed a home run — the 13th this year and 652nd of his career — as well as a double and two singles to shoot the Braves to a 6-4 victory in the nightcap and a sweep of the twin bill.

Atlanta won the opener with less hitting but more pitching as Tom Kelley hurled his first major league shutout, blanking the smitten Dodgers 1-0. Felix Milan singled home the only run in the seventh.

Kelley's splendid performance was second fiddle to Aaron's slugging show.

Aaron homered off reliever Jim Brewer to lead off the eighth inning, a blow that tied the game at 4-all after the Dodgers had led from the outset. Then he singled home the tie-breaking run in the ninth.

The runs batted in left him just one shy of tying the fabled Lou Gehrig for second place on the all time RBI list, at 1,191.

"I've had two hits off Brewer in my life," Aaron said afterward, "and both of them were home runs."

Bad Henry's game winning single came off of 49-year-old Hoyt Wilhelm in the ninth, making Wilhelm a loser for the first time this season.

But Wilhelm's future must be questioned. In his last three appearances he's failed to escape without yielding a run surrendering five runs in those three games.

But it was Aaron's night as he followed a double in the ninth by winning pitcher Pat Jarvis and an infield single by Felix Millan with his fourth hit of the night, a crisp single that third baseman Steve Garvey couldn't handle.

"It's the worst slump in 18 years," Aaron said of his .242 average. "But I felt good and relaxed tonight."

Asked about the future, whether baseball has become boring, the 38-year-old Aaron smiled and said, "When you have something to shoot at like I have (Babe Ruth's home run record) it's certainly not boring. I know some guys say that but not me.

"When I got that homer and then got a standing ovation in another town when I went to rightfield, well, how can you call that boring?"

The Dodgers had produced a 4-0 lead for Bill Singer, scoring once in the first inning when Bill Buckner scored Manny Mota with an infield single and then added three more in the third.

Willie Davis tripled, the 98th of his career, and then Willie Crawford, Buckner and Chris Cannizzaro followed with singles and Garvey added a sacrifice fly.

But the Braves scored twice in the fourth, Aaron figuring with a double, and once more in the seventh to make it 4-3.

Aaron unloaded on Brewer to lead off the eighth and then won it in the ninth with his single. Oscar Brown drove home the Braves' second run in the ninth with an infield out.

In the opener, the Dodgers had just once chance against Kelley and they blew it.

In the sixth they loaded the bases with two out on singles by Buckner and Davis and a walk to Frank Robinson. But Wes Parker struck out.

Even more irritating was the way they missed a chance in the nightcap. With the game even at 4-all, Bobby Valentine doubled with one out in the eighth and then Mota got his fourth hit of the game,

When Wright's right, Angels tough to beat

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

OAKLAND — Clyde Wright, the realist, admits he has never given much thought to the Cy Young award.

Others have however, in his behalf.

In the wake of Wright's five-hit, 3-1 conquest of the league - leading Oakland Athletics Saturday afternoon, Angel manager Del Rice, a man who does not splatter superlatives round recklessly, said:

"Clyde Wright is one of the best in baseball today. He knows how to pitch."

In the home clubhouse, Reggie Jackson, the man who gave the A's their only run with his 15th homer of the year, remarked of Wright:

"If he were with us, he'd win 20 games each year easily."

Wright once won 22 with the Angels. That was in 1970.

His record now is 8-3 with a team that is three games below .500 and his ERA is a splendid 2.13.

Wright does not put much faith in figures — unless he is talking salary —but he says candidly, "I'm a better pitcher now than I was in '70."

In becalming the bats of the power - laden A's, Wright made only one miscalculation. That was when he permitted Jackson to reach the right field seats with a 415-foot drive in the third inning.

"My shoulder didn't hurt at all," Wright said, "but I felt it ache something terrible when Reggie hit that one."

Wright, who earns an estimated $55,000, was somewhat unimpressed with his performance in which he outdueled the heralded Vida Blue.

"I'm paid to win," he said modestly. "Besides, I want some more of Harry's (Dalton) money next year."

Blue, now 1-4, was pitching with the aplomb and mastery he exhibited in the first half of last season, until he suddenly wilted in the seventh inning.

Bob Oliver, the incredible hitting man, got a one-out single to center for

$125,000 Hollypark Invitational

Typecast, Lambert upset Cougar, Shoe

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Staff Writer

To say that jockey Jerry Lambert has Bill Shoemaker's number these days at Hollywood Park is the understatement of the racing season.

For the second successive week, Lambert upset Shoemaker's applecart in the feature race at the Inglewood track, but to make matters worse Saturday, the Kansas rider whipped Shoe with Typecast, a 6-year-old mare whom Lambert beat with Convenience in the $250,000 match race seven days earlier. Shoemaker rode Typecast in the match race.

Typecast scored a neck victory in the $125,000 Invitational Turf Handicap, but the place horse wasn't even Shoemaker's odds-on favorite, Cougar II, who had been expected to massacre a field of horses considered mediocre at best.

French-bred Violonor, who had only two victories in 10 starts this year, gained the second prize money, with Cougar II one and one-quarter lengths further back. Big Shot II was fourth.

Typecast's backers in the crowd of 40,261 almost shook the track's foundation when the distaff horse entered the winner's circle. The roar of approval was one of the noisiest reactions the Inglewood track has seen in years.

Typecast paid $13.40 for the victory.

The day didn't start out well for Lambert, who got rid of his bad luck early in the afternoon. He fell from his mount Up In The Balcony in the second race, while his fifth race assignment, Emerich, pulled up lame and had to be hauled from the track in the horse van.

While the longshot lightweights in the nine-horse field, King Chrisy and Hierarch II, cut out the early pace, Typecast and Cougar were content to bide their time in the mile and one-half chase, alternating between he sixth and seventh slots.

Violonor, meanwhile, was dead last most of the first mile, at one point nearly a dozen lengths behind the early pacesetters.

Turning into the stretch, Cougar moved into a half-length lead with Typecast right there alongside him. Lambert had his eyes on Cougar all the way and wasn't about to let Shoemaker's horse run away from his mare.

Laden with high weight of 129 pounds, 12 more than Typecast and 19 more than Violonor, Cougar apparently tired in midstretch when first the mare and then the French-bred caught and passed him.

Violonor finished fastest of all and would have nailed Typecast in a few more jumps, but the Euro-

Angel wins $87,700 Q Derby

Inky's Angel proved that her best qualifying time in the Derby Trials was no fluke as she captured the $87,700 Los Alamitos Derby Saturday night at Los Alamitos.

A crowd of 12,591 saw the three-year-old Inky's Rocket filly break about a neck behind the leader Tiny Bart, with Osage Rocket, the 4-5 favorite along with entrymate Jayhawker Moon, getting off a trifle slowly.

At the halfway point in the 440-yard event, the race developed into a three-horse affair, and the question was whether Osage Rocket could overtake the two leaders.

Osage Rocket, with leading rider Bobby Adair in the saddle, finally overtook Tiny Bart nearing the wire. However, she was still a neck away from Inky's Angel when they hit the finish line.

Tiny Bart wound up a head behind the second horse, and then in order came Jayhawker Moon, Be

Taylor, Musso lead East upset, 42-20

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) — The Eastern All Stars converted a blocked punt, a fumble and a pass interception into three touchdowns and employed the bullish running of Michigan's Billy Taylor and Alabama's Johnny Musso Saturday night to upset the West 42-20 in the Coaches All-America Game, the first football contest of the season.

The East stunned the West with two touchdowns in the first seven minutes, both thanks to West charity, and then countered each attempt by the West to get back in the game.

Taylor, a fifth-round draft choice of Atlanta, scored the first touchdown one play after Ron Curl of Michigan State blocked a punt by the West's Marv Bateman. The blocked punt was recovered at the one, from where Thomas scored.

Four minutes later a fumble by West quarterback Jack Mildren set up a 15-yard touchdown pass from East quarterback Paul Miller of North Carolina, who was not picked in the pro draft, to teammate Lewis Jolley.

The East got other touchdowns on a one-yard run by Musso late in the first half following a pass interception by Ray Easterling of Richmond: by Curt Watson of Tennessee on a 25 yard sprint up the middle in the third period and by Taylor again in the final period on another one-yard plunge.

Miller contributed a meaningless touchdown with 28 seconds to go on a 15-yard pass to John McMakin of Clemson.

The West's first two touchdowns narrowed the deficit to seven points, but each time the East quickly scored again to open the lead.

Mildren hit Bernard Jackson of Washington State with a six-yard scoring pass in the second quarter and then found Skip Thomas of Southern Eddie McEwen, skipper of the Pacific Queen, formerly of Long Beach, turned his boat from the yellowtail banks at the Coronados to the west and his passengers hooked eight fish. They landed four albacore, averaging 22 pounds each, and lost the four others.

The report late Saturday night that a Long Beach boat had caught an albacore on the 14-Mile Bank was not verified.

Britisher crushes Laura, 7-5

HUNSTANTON, England (AP) — Mickey Walker, 19-year-old defending title holder, retained the British Women's Amateur Golf Championship Saturday with a two-hole win in the final over French star Claudine Rubin.

Earlier, Miss Walker beat America's teen-age champion, Linda Baugh, 7 and 5 in the semifinals.

Nothing could stop Mickey, daughter of an English dentist.

She turned on full pressure against Miss Baugh, a 17-year-old from Long Beach, Calif., with a powerful display over the 6,070-yard, par 38-37-75 Hunstanton Course.

It was the match golfing fans here had been waiting for, featuring the champions of the United States and Britain. On their only previous meeting the two girls halved a game during the Curtis Cup two weeks ago.

Miss Walker turned comfortably five up while the American girl putted nervously and bunkered her drives.

It was all over at the 13th, where Miss Baugh missed the green with her second. Miss Walker chipped to 18 inches and the American conceded.

'WE'RE OUT OF THERE'

LADY UMP EJECTS HERSELF

GENEVA, N.Y. (AP) — Bernice Gera broke professional baseball's umpiring sex barrier Saturday night, then abruptly quit after officiating at her first game.

The 40-year-old Jackson Heights housewife's debut in the New York-Penn League was a somewhat stormy one as she made three disputed calls as base umpire, one of which led to her ejecting Auburn Phillies manager Nolan Campbell.

The rhubarb came in the top of the fourth inning as the first game of a double header, when Mrs. Gera at first called an Auburn player safe at second base, then quickly reversed herself.

Campbell stormed out of his team's bull pen and followed Mrs. Gera across the field, sprinkling his shouts with curses. After Mrs. Gera gave him the thumb and explained to him she had made a mistake in originally calling the player safe, he shouted: "Why throw me out be

Offers game plan on recruiting

McKay blitzing A.D. job

John H. McKay, USC's renowned football coach, didn't waste any time or let any grass grow under his feet when he accepted the double job as Trojan athletic director.

One of John's first duties was to issue a memorandum to his coaches in all areas.

The subject was recruitment rules and McKay asked his coaches to "please, carefully, review the following....the following two changes in official interpretations become effective immediately."

JOHN McKAY
Passes the word

Lest recruiters step on their own feet, McKay passed around the word on these two items:

"No. 1," said John, "is that no coach may conduct or participate in any coaching school involving students who have finished classes in the spring after their junior year in high school.

"Please note this very carefully."

John's added thought was that this was an official NCAA ruling. The Troys have been known to sponsor senior athletes, as if you didn't know. In times past, junior athletes who finished their spring classes, were classed by recruiters as seniors.

"POINT NO. 2," continued McKay, "is that when a prospect visits the campus at his own expense, he may be given three complimentary tickets to a campus athletic event."

Formerly the limit was two. Now, this second point is something else. Everyone is happy with it because it pleases everyone.

The mother, father and girl friend can attend, say, the Notre Dame-USC contest at the Coliseum, whereas formerly only the mother and father were eligible for tickets.

EVER-CAUTIOUS McKAY, who is five jumps ahead of his peers, pointed out the following eight items for the benefit of his coaches, who dare not stub their toes because they have been forewarned.

These items, all changes, will become effective next Aug. 1.

"1. A prospective student-athlete may make only one paid visit to the campus. (Note: Formerly, the limit was two.)

"2. No paid visit may be made by a prospect before the start of his senior year in high school.

"3. All entertainment for a prospect and his parents, or guardian, must be on campus. It is not permissible to entertain, other relatives or friends at any site.

"4. No institution nor its representatives may transport or pay for the transportation for relatives or friends of the prospect to visit the campus or elsewhere.

"5. On visits to a prospect away from campus, no institution staff member or representative may expend any funds other than necessary for his own personal expenses."

THIS MAY GRAB YOU, but it's another rule given the green light by the NCAA:

"6. Freshmen are eligible for varsity football. It is up to the conference and individual schools to rule on whether freshmen are eligible for varsity regular-season competition."

One Trojan coach, not McKay, made this stipulation:

"It's a rarity a freshman will make the USC varsity, especially in football.

"He could be a redshirt (a five-year student) or a frosh candidate, but it's highly improbable he would be a starter."

The continuation of McKay's memorandum:

"Point No. 7—aid may be graduated or cancelled at the end of the academic year if the recipient voluntarily withdraws from a sport for his own personal reasons."

Point No. 8 is one to digest thoroughly:

"The student athlete enrolled in a graduate school of the institution he attended as an undergraduate may participate in intercollegiate athletics provided he has athletic eligibility remaining and such participation occurs within four years after initial enrollment."

THE NEW RULES, especially items one through five as listed above, figure to work mightily in USC's favor.

"Now we'll be able to recruit on an equal basis with Colorado—one of our toughest competitors — Nebraska and Oklahoma," stated a member of the Trojan family after reading McKay's memorandum thoroughly.

HANK HOLLINGWORTH

"Those other schools now are limited to only one paid visit. They used to kill us with 'X' number of visits to their campus or town. We went through all kinds of hell trying to keep up with those people in the matter of finances."

THE TROJANS never were second fiddle in any sports field, but they did have to play the second fiddle in the recruiting department often because as a private school within a league blanketed by strange rules and restrictions, they couldn't compete recruiting-wise with the Nebraskas and Oklahomas.

These four changes approved by the NCAA certainly should jump the Trojans ahead of the now dominant Big 8 teams, which have gotten away with murder in recent seasons. It won't harm Notre Dame or the Big 10 teams, either.

These are the important changes which could change the college football dynasties:

1. Only one paid visit to a campus by an athlete.

2. A prospective athlete won't be entertained on campus unless the parent or guardian is present.

3. No paid visit to a campus will be made by a prospect unless he is in the senior class.

4. No relatives or friends of a prospect will be given pay or transportation money to visit the campus or elsewhere.

Items two and four don't conflict. They simply mean that the prospective athlete must be accompanied by a parent or guardian on his campus vist, but that the inviting school cannot pay for the elders' trip.

The NCAA changes sure as the dickens didn't register well with Nebraska or Oklahoma, but for once the NCAA is to be commended.

The alphabet body finally put things into parity. Perhaps the latest changes will kill 75-men redshirt squads, even though Nebraska and Oklahoma people will be screaming like Banshees.

WILL BATTING TIPS BACKFIRE ON ANGELS? Thelma Stanton and Bobbie McMullen get some hitting tips from their husbands, Angels outfielder Lee Stanton (left) and third baseman Ken McMullen. All four will see action Saturday night in Players vs. Wives softball game at Anaheim Stadium.

only the third hit off Blue. With two gone, Lee Stanton singled Oliver to third and Leo Cardenas' base hit to center tied the score.

The winning run was the product of Jeff Torborg's bloop single to center which fell in front of the desperately-charging Jackson.

"I've been practicing that stroke for some time," Torborg acknowledged. "Wasn't that sensational? But I'll accept it graciously and gratefully."

The Angels produced an insurance run for Wright in the eighth when Ken Berry walked, took third on Vada Pinson's single and scored on Oliver's sacrifice fly to deep right.

That gave Oliver 20 RBI in his last 21 games and 18 in 20 games this month.

Wright suffered through two tense innings.

In the first, he yielded a leadoff double to Campy Campaneris and then walked Sal Bando and Mike Epstein to load the bases with two out before he disposed of Dave Duncan on a ground ball.

In the eighth, the A's tried to come back with Campaneris opening with a walk and Joe Rudi following with a single. But Wright got the dangerous Jackson to hit into a force out and then induced Bando to ground into a double play.

"He's certainly not overpowering," said Jackson of Wright, "but he knows where to put the ball. He's a lot like (Dave) McNally and (Mickey) Lolich."

And that put Wright solidly in Cy Young company, whether he knows it or not.

ANGEL ANGLES: Jackson, one of the best talkers in baseball was discussing Nolan Ryan before the game . . . "He's the only guy I'm afraid to dig in against ... He's the hardest thrower I've ever seen and I keep thinking one might get away from him" . . . Sandy Alomar had to leave the game in the sixth inning when a muscle popped in his lower back . . . Trainer Freddy Fredericо popped the muscle back into place and said Sandy would be all right for today's doubleheader . . . Alomar's consecutive game streak reached 533 Saturday . . . In today's double dip, Rudy May (1-4) faces Jim Hunter (7-3) in the opener with Rick Clark (4-7) opposing Blue Moon Odom (3-2) in the after piece . . . Vada Pinson stole his 10th base in 11 attempts in the eighth . . . Bill Voss, the newest A, arrived in Oakland Friday after his trade from Milwaukee . . . Aaron won't forsake respect for HR mark

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

When Henry Aaron takes his place in rightfield this afternoon for the Atlanta Braves he will do so only after attending to his usual pre-game rites.

They include replying to all the questions from the inquisitive writers, having microphones poked in his face and the questions are all the same—Babe Ruth. Babe Ruth, Babe Ruth.

There was a time when a man laughed at the thought of reaching the moon. Cancel the Ed Sullivan Show? Unheard of.

Now, heaven forbid, here is Henry Aaron pursuing another impossible—Ruth's historic record for hitting home runs. He's hit 652 at the moment, more than any other living player. The only man to hit more was the Babe, who hit 714 and while the historians seem to think Bad Henry will one day top the record, fans are divided.

"I get more mail nowadays," Aaron was saying Saturday evening. "I'd say it was about even. Some want me to break the record, others don't. I accept this. Some people praise Ruth and tell me he'd be even a better player if he was around today. At least, none of the letters I've received are mean ones."

It wasn't until a year ago, after he'd reached another pinnacle—3,000 hits—that he began to seriously consider his chances of catching Ruth.

"I won't choose to punish myself," he said when it became clear he had more than an outside chance of overtaking the greatest home run record ever. "I don't mean just physically punish myself, but mentally punish myself. I wouldn't let personal ambition to go after another man's record cause me to lose the respect of the fans and the press. I couldn't stand to hear them say that I was hurting the team by hanging around going after that record."

Aaron, now 38, says he'll quit when he's 40. That coincides with the lucrative three-year contract he signed this spring calling for roughly $600,000. The Braves feel, quite naturally, that once Aaron gets close to the record they'll have a pretty good return on their investment.

Aaron, always a quiet-spoken individual, continues to pass out praise to others. He says if he breaks the record he won't do it alone.

"I've always been lucky to have tremendous hitters in the lineup around me. Pitchers have had to give me good pitches to hit because of the other guys. Look at us now. There's Carty and Cepeda, Williams and Garr, and they're all good hitters."

Aaron had done just about everything a man can do in baseball. He's played in the World Series. He's got a lifetime batting mark of .313. He's in the extremely rare circle of those who've collected 3,000 hits.

Therefore, the mere chance of overtaking another record, even of one of the magnitude of Ruth's can't complete motivation.

"Fifteen years ago I wouldn't have needed anything extreme," he said. "Now I do. I need an overwhelming responsibility to stay in the lineup as often as possible. If we don't get into the pennant race it will hurt my chances. But if we stay in the race, that's different. I might make it then."

What of the pressure, the persistent questions of the press and the fans? Can he handle it?

Said one teammate, referring to Roger Maris who did have numerous altercations with the media when he broke Ruth's single season homer record in 1961, "Maris created situations. Aaron knows how to handle them."

Says Aaron: "I don't see why it should pose any great problem. I'll have to ration my time and some people may not understand. You can't conduct interviews all day and night and then play baseball. But I'll devote as much time as possible to the media.

"Let me say this," he added with a grin, "I am much more worried about those pitchers who are trying to prevent me from breaking the record, than I am about the people who are going to write and talk about it."

The girls are serious this year and have scheduled a workout at Boysen Park in Anaheim this week. They've already had a closed-door clubhouse meeting at Anaheim Stadium to go over the hitters.

Pat Rice, who is managing the wives' team, has announced a starting lineup of Judy Kusnyer, catcher; Fran Spencer, first base; Joanne O'Brien, second base; Gloria Cardenas, shortstop; Bobbie McMullen, third base; and an outfield of Hazel Oliver, Judi Berry and Thelma Stanton. In the bullpen will be Sharen Allen, Betty Fisher, Carol Clark, Gail Queen, Pat Barber and Cathy Rose. Susie Torborg is a reserve catcher and Wanda Morgan, wife of Angels pitching coach Tom, will coach at first base.

In addition to Ruth Ryan's brick-wall stunt, there'll be numerous gags and surprises. Angels broadcaster Don Wells will be the emcee.

In Santa Clara swim carnival

Spitz continues record tear

SANTA CLARA (UPI) — Mark Spitz, swimming faster than he anticipated, missed his own world record by two-tenths of a second while setting his third meet mark Saturday to feature the Santa Clara Invitational swimming and diving carnival.

Spitz, who holds three world marks, clocked 55.4 in morning qualifying of the 100-meter butterfly and then beat the mark by two-tenths of a second in winning the final. He holds the world record at 55.0 and the meet mark he broke stood at 55.6.

Thus, he now has the four fastest times ever for the event.

The 22-year-old former pre-med student from Sacramento, won the 100-meter freestyle in 52.4 on Friday's opening program of the three-day meet for his other mark.

Gary Hall, another world record holder, led qualifiers in the 400-meter individual medley with a time of 4:40.9 and then took the final in 4:39.6. On Friday, Gary won the 400-meter freestyle in the meet record time of 4:04.9.

Shirley Babashoff of Huntington Beach, winner of the women's 100-meter freestyle in 1:00.3 Friday, led qualifiers in the 200 meter freestyle Saturday with a clocking of 2:09.4 and followed by taking the final in 2:08.0.

Ellie Daniel of Sacramento, Spitz' teammate at the Arden Hills Swim Club, was another who had the best qualifying time and also won the final.

Miss Daniel clocked 1:06.4 in qualifying for the women's 100-meter butterfly and then set a meet record of 1:05.5 in taking the final.

Jerry Heidenreich of Dallas, beat Steve Genter of Lakewood in the men's 200-meter freestyle, 1:57.1 to 1:57.3. Genter led the qualifying with a time of 1:57.7.

Leslie Cliff of Vancouver, B.C., had a faulty final turn in the women's 400-meter individual medley and it cost her the title. Terri Block of Long Beach, took advantage of the miscue to win the event in 5:07.8.

Miss Cliff was timed in 5:09.0 for a Canadian national mark. She held the old record at 5:10.2

American teen-agers win London tennis crowns

LONDON (AP) — American teenagers Jim Connors and Chris Evert played outstanding tennis Saturday and won the singles title in the London Grass Courts Championships at Queen's Club.

Connors, 19-year-old lefthander from Belleville, Ill., whipped Britain's John Paish, 6-2, 6-3 for the men's first prize of $1,300.

Cool little Chris, the 17-year-old from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., beat Karen Krantzcke of Australia 6-4, 6-0 for the women's title.

The triumph of the two youngsters came just two days before the start of Wimbledon and provided a bright hope for the future of American tennis.

This was the first time since 1947 that the two titles here had gone to Americans. Bob Falkenberg and Louise Brough won them that year.

Connors is unseeded at Wimbledon which starts Monday. Miss Evert is seeded No. 4.

Meanwhile, Pancho Gonzales, who was disqualified from the tournament, was reported to the British Lawn Tennis Association today — two days before the start of Wimbledon.

Dickie Ritchie, the club secretary, said a report had been prepared on the stormy scene which led to Gonzales storming off court during the men's semifinals Friday against Paish.

Graybeard in Tahiti lead

Houston back on top in wild, wild West

CEDENO DIERKER

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Cesar Cedeno drove home two runs with a single and a double and Lee May added a home run as the Houston Astros defeated the Cincinnati Reds, 4-1, behind Larry Dierker's seven-hit pitching to regain first place in the National League West Saturday.

The victory was the seventh of the season against four losses for Dierker who lost his bid for a fifth shutout when Tony Perez homered with one out in the ninth inning.

Cedeno's two hits made him 15-for-24 against the Reds in the season series and boosted the 21-year-old Dominican outfielder's league-leading average to .342.

A single by Cedeno, his theft of second and a single by Jimmy Wynn gave the Astros a 1-0 lead off loser Jack Billingham in the first inning. Cedeno doubled home two runs in the fifth inning and the Astros added their final run in the eighth on May's 12th homer of the season, a smash into the left centerfield seats off Pedro Borbon.

Brinkman sacrifice gives Detroit split

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Ed Brinkman's bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the 12th inning gave the Detroit Tigers a 2-1 victory and a doubleheader split with Baltimore that lifted the Tigers back into first place after the Orioles won the opener Saturday night, 3-1.

Brinkman's winning blow scored Norm Cash from third base after Cash singled and reliever Doyle Alexander made a bad throw on Mickey Stanley's bunt and then walked Aurelio Rodriguez.

Tiger righthander Joe Coleman, 9-5, was the winner with relief help from Chuck Seelbach, who claimed his fifth save.

Mike Cuellar of Baltimore had a two-hitter until the seventh inning when Bill Freehan blooped a one-out single into leftfield, took second on a groundout and scored on Stanley's single.

Coleman, who set down 17 straight batters between the second and eighth innings, had a two-hitter until the ninth inning when Marv Rettenmund walked with two out and Terry Crowley hit a drive that went for a run-scoring double when Wayne Comer slipped on the soggy outfield grass.

Coleman wound up working 11 innings before being lifted for a pinch-hitter and allowed just four hits.

In the first game, Andy Etchebarren and Paul Blair hit homers off Mickey Lolich to tive the Orioles the victory that temporarily moved them into a first place tie with Detroit.

Dave McNally, 8-6, needed relief help from Roric Harrison the last three innings to hand Lolich his fifth defeat against 11 wins.

Etchebarren's first homer snapped a 1-1 tie in the second inning

Red Sox get thumb, loss

MILWAUKEE (AP) — John Briggs homered and Bob Heise stroked a two-run double as the Milwaukee Brewers beat Boston 5-2 Saturday in an American League game, which saw Red Sox manager Eddie Kasko and two of his players ejected.

The Red Sox took the lead in the top of the second inning when, with one out, Danny Cater singled and John Kennedy hit his second homer of the season into the left field stands.

The Brewers tied the score in the bottom of the second on four hits, including RBI-singles by Rick Auerbach and Ron Theobald. Heise's two-out double in the third scored both George Scott and Dave May, who had singled.

Home plate umpire Hank Morganweck ejected both Kasko and center fielder Tommy Harper for protesting a called third strike on Harper as he led off the Boston seventh. Morganweck also thumbed out Red Sox starter Sonny Siebert, 7-4, when he argued a 3-0 count on Joe Lahoud in the Brewers' seventh.

Randle sparks Ranger rally

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Texas Rangers exploded for five runs in the eighth inning on Lenny Randle's three-run double and Dick Billings' two-run double and beat the Chicago White Sox, 6-1, in American League Saturday night.

Minnesota ace Kaat registers ninth victory

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Eric Soderholm cracked a two-run single to highlight a three-run fourth inning Saturday and Jim Kaat pitched an eight-hitter to lead the Minnesota Twins to a 4-1 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Rick Renick started the fourth inning surge by drawing a walk off loser Jim Rooker. Bobby Darwin followed with a double with Renick stopping at third.

Soderholm then delivered his two-run single and scored on Kaat's two-out double

Kaat recorded his ninth victory against two losses and was backed by four Minnesota double plays.

Mets wondering about ace Seaver

TOM SEAVER
KO'd once again

NEW YORK (AP) — What's wrong with Tom Seaver?

That question was thrown around the St. Louis clubhouse Saturday after the Cardinals pounded the New York ace for 10 hits and seven runs in a fifth inning knockout and went on to plaster the Mets 11-0 in nationally televised baseball game.

"It's hard to say if a man is doing anything different," said Ted Simmons, the St. Louis catcher, "but it's my opinion that he's not varying his fastball like he used to. He's always been the toughest pitcher to face day in and day out because his fastball has been consistently good."

Seaver departed on the short end of a 4-0 score with the bases loaded and none out in the fifth inning. Pinch hitter Luis Melendez greeted reliever Ray Sadecki with a grand slam home run, his first in the majors.

Seavers was gone when the game ended, taking with him a 9-4 record — no National League hurler has won more — but a most un-Seaverish 3.41 earned run average.

"That 9-4 record isn't too bad and that's what counts," said Joe Torre, the Cards' slugging third baseman. "But it does look to me like he's trying to throw the ball too hard. And he seems to be wild all over the place. I never saw him throw so many high breaking balls as the two times we've faced him."

Backed by a 17-hit attack, Reggie Cleveland breezed to victory with a six hitter, before a turnout of 45,334.

Coupled with Pittsburgh's triumph over Chicago, the defeat dropped the Mets 1½ games behind the victorian Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League East.

Seaver was charged with seven runs, the most earned runs he has ever given up in his career and his earliest knockout of the season.

In two games this season, St. Louis has belted Seaver for 18 hits and 13 runs in 11 innings.

The Cardinals, who scored 14 runs on 16 hits in their previous game, rapped out a season-high 17 hits, the last being Cleveland's two-out single in the ninth. Simmons and Lou Brock each collected two singles and a double while Ed Crosby, Matty Alou, Melendez, Dal Maxvill and Cleveland had two hits apiece.

Giants trip Padres in 11

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Chris Speier's two-out, bases-loaded infield single combined with a throwing error gave the San Francisco Giants three runs in the 11th inning and a 7-4 victory over the San Diego Padres in a National League baseball game Saturday night.

Speier stroked the ball down the third-base line where Padre rookie Dave Roberts fielded the hard smash, then threw wildly to first. Speier was credited with driving in one run and two runs scored on the error.

Great Western gains lead; Royse staves off Mary Star

Mike Hutton scattered five hits as Great Western Cardinals drubbed Hawaiian Gardens, 9-1, to take over first place in the Coast Connie Mack League Saturday night at Blair Field.

Hutton also contributed a hit and scored a run as the Cards picked on two opposing pitchers for 11 hits in a game which was called after six innings because of the eight-run rule.

Four of the Card runs were unearned, all coming in the fourth inning.

In the second game, Royse Insurance, with a brilliant relief job from Chuck Phillips, gained a 3-2 win over Mary Star. Rock Harmon went 2-for-2 and drove in two runs for the winners. Rich Whitaker pitched the first five innings but tired in the Dodgers pleading for protection

When the Dodgers repaired to their hotel following a recent cloudburst in St. Louis, the attending baseball journalists hastened hither and yon in search of an item known in the trade as a "rainy day story."

One reporter, strategically located behind a potted palm, chanced to hear Willie Crawford delivering an impassioned lecture on the subject of protection.

"OUR pitchers do not protect us enough," Willie lamented. "All they have to do is make the other hitters visit the dirt once in a while. They don't do it."

Translated, Crawford was suggesting that the Dodger pitchers are remiss in failing to aim baseballs in the direction of the heads of opposing batsmen on those occasions when such delicate actions are called for. Such intimidation of batters is appropriate after it is first practiced by the pitcher on the other team.

In the lexicon of baseball, the maneuver is known as "knocking him down" or "sticking it in his ear."

IT WAS ON an earlier road trip that Willie Davis appared before the Dodgers' kangaroo court to issue a grievance against the Dodger pitching staff for lack of protection.

"The only way we can get help," Davis pleaded, "is from our pitchers. If they don't protect us, the other guys will just keep on knocking us down."

Apparently, the presiding judge of the kangaroo court, his honor Maurice Morning Wills, elected to dismiss the charges. At least, he placed the case on the shelf pending further evidence.

"(Bill) Singer will protect you," Willie Crawford added, "and now (Don) Sutton is doing a pretty good job."

The others, presumably, lack noticeably in violence of a reciprocal nature.

"It's too bad," Crawford concluded. "The trademark of the Dodgers used to be for the pitchers to knock down the opposition."

Willie may have been making reference to such former experts in the art of ear alterations as Don Drysdale and Johnny Podres.

"It has been my experience," Drysdale used to say, "that I get along much better with opposing batters if I first let them know who is boss."

OF COURSE, several schools of thought exist on the matter of sticking baseballs into the nostrils or hearing instruments of human beings. For instance, doctors do not recommend the practice from a medical standpoint inasmuch as a baseball properly thrown often approaches speeds up to 100 m.p.h.

"If a batter does not wish to get hit by the ball," Johnny Podres would reason, "he should stand back from the plate and out of the way."

The umpires, as a group, frown on pitchers aiming at the heads of batters. Beanball wars have been known to get out of hand in the past and strong rules, involving automatic fines and suspension, have been introduced.

Of course, the batters are of the opinion the umpires are entirely to slow in enforcing the rules. It is the contention of the batsmen that a pitcher with a nasty gleam in his eye should be ejected from the game.

Still, there is a greater fear in the hearts of the hitters. More terrifying than the pitcher who would knock you down is the one without control who has no notion as to where the ball is going after it leaves his hand.

BILLY MARTIN, a recent visitor to Anaheim, was recalling the most frightening of all such wildmen. Ryne Duren, a former Yankee and Angel, threw as hard as any man who ever lived and completely without control.

"Nobody in the ball park was safe when Ryne was pitching," Billy Martin recalled.

Martin also reminisced about the time the citizen in the seats behind third base bellowed insults and obscenities at Duren for three innings. In the fourth, Ryne silenced the fellow, almost permanently.

Quite by accident, Duren stuck it in his ear.

First woman umpire

The lady in the blue suit

New York Times Service

GENEVA, N.Y. — Under the blue cap, the umpire's hair was a soft brown, not as long as that of some mod major league players. The blue suit fit smoothly.

"I bought it in a regular store," the umpire explained. "Off the men's rack."

The umpire was a lady, Mrs. Bernice Gera, a 41-year-old Jackson Heights, N.Y., housewife. She was about to make her debut Saturday night as the first lady umpire in the masculine history of organized baseball. She had been scheduled to officiate her first game Friday night but another lady, Hurricane Agnes, had created a postponement. Now, in this quiet Finger Lakes town, Mrs. Gera was awaiting a twinight doubleheader between the Geneva Rangers and the Auburn Phillies in the opener of the class A New York-Penn League season.

"You've come a long way, baby, I tell that to myself," she was saying over an afternoon cup of tea. "But it hasn't been that easy. I've lost patches of my hair."

That happened to Roger Maris in 1961 when the New York Yankees outfielder was chasing, and eventually breaking, Babe Ruth's home run record. The emotional strain apparently has been equally torturous for the lady in the blue serge suit, Joan of Arc with a whisk broom.

"I'D PRFERE to be Joan of Arc with an army behind her than what I am," she said, smiling. "As an umpire, when you make a call, you're all alone."

As a teen-age girl who often visited Ebbets Field, she once shook hands with Chris Van Cuyk, a left-handed pitcher with the Brooklyn Dodgers in those years. "I cause you made a mistake?"

Mrs. Gera, a 5-foot-2, 130-pounder, made two other calls in later innings that prompted milder protests from both the Phillies and the host team, the Geneva Rangers.

Immediately after the seven-inning game, Mrs. Gera walked into the Phillies' club house and told team general manager Joseph McDonough: "I've just resigned from baseball. I'm sorry, Joe."

With that, Mrs. Gera, still clad in her blue umpire's uniform, strode to a car and was driven off by friends. She offered no comment beyond what she had told McDonough.

didn't wash my hand for two days," she recalled, laughing. Her interest in baseball continued and a decade ago, she wrote letters to virtually all the major league teams, asking for front-office employment. Their rejections didn't dissuade her. Five years ago, she filed an application for Al Summer's Baseball Umpires school in Florida.

"He accepted my check," she said. "He thought I'd signed the letter, Bernie Gera, but I had to call him about something and that was my mistake. From my voice, he realized I was a woman. He blew his cool. He told me there never had been a woman in his umpire school, and there never would be."

She turned to the Florida Baseball School where "they wanted me to take a home course," she said. eventually, she was accepted, and was graduated. But in 1969, her contract with the New York-Penn League was disapproved by Philip Piton, then the President of the National Assn. of Professional Baseball Leagues, meaning the minor leagues. His reasons were that she was too old and too small. She is five feet, two inches and 128 pounds.

Six months ago, the New York State Court of Appeals disagreed with the minor league commissioner in a 5-to-2 decision.

"It's cost me about $30,000 in income I never made," she said. "I had been doing secretarial work until I started umpiring, so that's five years at a minimum of $5,000 a year, plus my phone bills and other expenses. My legal fees, I don't know yet. Mario Biaggi, the Bronx Congressman, took the case because nobody else would. He was doing it gratis but he and other lawyers working with him. Right now I'm broke financially and I won't get rich as an umpire. The pay here is ridiculous."

HER SALARY for the 70-game season reportedly is $100 a week, plus expenses.

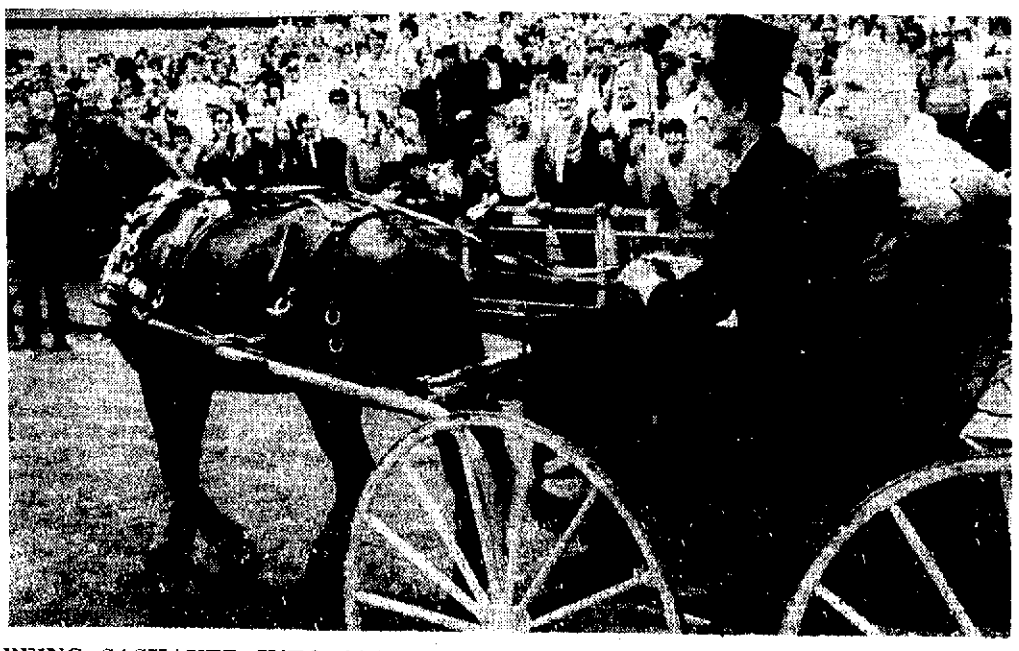

"I don't even know how the expenses work, whether it's a daily allowance or what," she said. "My husband's with me now, he took his vacation for these two weeks. He's with the Department of Highways in New York as a photographer. I've umpired in the Y.M.C.A. leagues, C.Y.O. leagues, semi-pro games in Bridgeton, N.J, and I was treated no different than any other umpire. When there's an argument, they storm out, they circle you, all I could see was their jugular veins."

In contrast, she has devoted much of her time to visiting children and wounded servicemen in New York hospitals.

"That's what baseball really is," she said, "talking to kids about the players and the teams. I even bought 5,000 little souvenirs to give away here to the kids at my first game. It cost me $50. Then I found out they only have 3,000 seats here. It came out of the $319 I got for being on the Mike Douglas show a few weeks ago."

Despite her fame, the lady umpire has no particular ambition to officiate in the major leagues.

"All through this case, my heart was broken," she said. "I've learned to take everything in stride. The majors? What are they talking about, the majors? I've always wondered if even this was worth it."

VIVA LA VISUALS!

Actually, I don't go for visual aids—like a quarterback who writes plays on his wrist. Let Tommy Nobis or Dick Butkus see 'em and he'll draw back a nub.

A man asked me if the tape on my left arm was a sort of "cheat sheet." Like it might be a reminder to "keep your v's straight" or "don't belch on a backswing." I carry my driver's license under that tape in case I drive into a little old lady on a blind hole. Okay, I'm kidding. But the only player I know who visually reminds himself is Art Wall. A strip of tape on his driver says one word: "Tempo." It cautions him to swing at the same speed. One or two words on a club or glove could help. But the cat who's looking at a bunch of do's and don'ts isn't visualizing what he should be visualizing, which is the next shot. When my mental "film" is on I don't see anything but my ball's proposed trajectory, anyway. Tony Jacklin opened his locker on the last morning of the 1970 U.S. Open and found a poster Bert Yancey had stuck in there. All it said was "Tempo." He didn't write it on his club, but he remembered and won.

OLD METS AGELESS; TIE ON NO-HITTER

NEW YORK (AP) — No pitcher has ever thrown a no-hitter for the New York Mets but six hurlers from the club's comical early days as National League baseball team combined for one Saturday in an old timers' game and they couldn't even win it.

The six were Roger Craig, who started the Mets' first game is 1962; Jay Hook, who was the victor in the first game the club ever won after losing its first nine starts; Al Jackson, Jack Fisher, Don Cardwell and Ken MacKenzie.

The only hit was a one-out double in the Mets' first by Johnny Lewis off Bob Friend. Lewis took third on a wild pitch by Satchel Paige but was left stranded when Joe Christopher lined to third baseman Mike Shannon and Frank Thomas popped to catcher Ed Bailey.

Jamieson closes in on first PGA victory

NORTHBROOK, Ill. (UPI) — Jim Jamieson, playing superbly while his challengers faded, moved to the brink of his first victory as a pro golfer Saturday with a four under-par 67 that gave him a whopping eight stroke lead after the third round of the Western Open.

Jamieson, the Moline, Ill., heavyweight who has been close to winning several times already this year, began the day with a two-shot lead, birdied the third and fourth holes in succession to run the margin to four and from then on he never was threatened.

He had an 11-under-par 54 hole total of 202.

One after another, the players who began the day with a chance to overtake Jamieson shot themselves out of contention and at the end Tommy Aaron, who began the tournament with 73, found himself in second place.

Aaron produced a four-under-par 67 that left him at 210 for the tournament, alone in second but hardly with a reasonable prospect of catching the leader.

There was a five-way tie for third place at 211, two under par, among Bob Lunn, Bobby Nichols, Steve Oppermann, Doug Sanders and J. C. Snead and five more players were tied at 212 including Billy Casper, a three-time winner of this $150,000 tournament.

Sanders, who started the round in second place, had a 74 including a double-bogey six at the 16th hole when he missed a one-foot putt. Snead, three behind starting the day, had a 73, while R. H. Sikes, who had been four strokes behind, shot a 74 and was at 213.

Jamieson, whose eight-stroke margin was the biggest 54-hole lead on the PGA tour in more than two years, again played his best on the easier front nine.

He made a 15-foot birdie putt at the third hole, had an easy two-footer at the short par-five fourth hole and then made a 10-foot putt for a birdie at No. 9.

On the back nine, Jamieson birdied the 11th hole before suffering his only bogey of the day at the par-three 15th when he pushed his drive into a sand trap to the right of the green. On each of the last three holes, however, he had short putts for birdies, barely missing at Nos. 16 and 18 and making it at 17.

"Of my three rounds, this is by far the best I've played," said Jamieson, who had earlier rounds of 68 and 67. "I felt a little more confident hitting my hots."

Jamieson, who has earned $47,603 on the tour this year and has finished in the top five times, was the 36-hole leader at the IVB Philadelphia Golf Classic two weeks ago before tying for the third and was within a stroke of Jack Nicklaus after 54 holes of the Masters in April but fell to a final 77.

The cheerful, personable young man said he had a plan for today's final round when he will seek his first tour triumph.

"There must be about 500 people here from Moline and the Quad Cities area," he said with a big grin.

"We're going to have a meeting tonight and I'm going to give them their orders. I'm going to have them packed around every green.

"If I ever hit one into the gallery, it's going to look like a handball court, banging right back on the green."

HOW TO TAKE FUN OUT OF GOLF

Texas NCAA's top golf team for second year

CAPE CORAL, Fla. (UPI) — Tom Kite of the University of Texas fired a four-under-par 68 and teammate Ben Crenshaw struggled to a 72 Saturday to tie for the NCAA individual golf championship and lead Texas to its second championship in as many years.

Kite bounced back from a third round 78 to finish nine-under-par. Crenshaw had to sink a 25-foot par putt on the final home to get the tie and his second individual NCAA title.

The two did not play off the tie and will reign as co-champions.

Texas finished six under par with a team total of 1146, 13 strokes ahead of the University of Houston's 1159. Oklahoma State and Florida, tied for third at 1174, Arizona State had a 1176, Georgia and Wake Forest tied at 1185, Southern Methodist 1193, San Jose State 1200, Maryland and Miami (Fla.) tied at 1207, Indiana had a 1210, Tennessee 1217 and Georgia Southern and Ball State 1223.

Kite finished 65-68-78-68—279 and Crenshaw 71-66-70-72—279. They were backed by teammates Brent Buckman with a 297, Tony Pfaff's 291 and George Tucker's 298.

Arthur Russell, who had a final round 70 and Bill Rogers had 285 for Houston. Corker Deloach had a 291, John Mills a 298 and Jim McLean a 299.

The Texas win was the 19th in the past 24 years that the team title has been won by a school from the Lone Star State. It was the third successive time the individual title has been won by a player from a Texas school.

'Soul Brothers' big choices over Quarrys

JERRY QUARRY

MUHAMMAD ALI

They looked like this after last fight

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — Muhammad Ali, a one-man happening, steals the spotlight wherever he goes and that's the way it is for Tuesday night when he battles Jerry Quarry, a rugged Californian, in a scheduled 12-round bout leading the way to a crack at heavyweight champ Joe Frazier.

The program at the Convention Center, which has a capacity of about 8,000, also features a 15-round title fight between light heavyweight champion Bob Foster and Jerry's young brother, Mike Quarry.

For the first time in boxing history, a world title fight takes second billing on a doubleheader program and that's only because the ebullient Ali dominates the card.

The Foster-Quarry fight goes on first at 6:30 p.m. PDT as a preliminary to the main event — Ali against the older Quarry.

Ali calls Jerry Quarry "the last of the white hopes" and has tagged himself and Foster, the black battlers, as the soul brothers.

"The soul brothers will whip the Quarry brothers," the former Cassius Clay intones.

Oddsmaker Jimmy the Greek rates Ali a 5-1 favorite over Jerry whom he stopped in three rounds at Atlanta in October of 1970 because of an eye cut. Foster, 33, a mature boxer and sometimes stunning puncher, is rated 8-1 over Mike, just 21 and with a 36-0 record over an unimpressive list of foes.

The bookies, legal here, will also give you even money, either way, on the two bouts lasting a total of 13 rounds.

Ali is guaranteed a half million bucks from live gate and television receipts. Jerry Quarry is to get $175,000, Foster $80,000 and Mike Quarry $45,000.

This is a net of $800,000. The house seats are scaled at $100, $50 and $25. All the higher priced seats are gone, the promoters say.

Still, to make money they must cut the mustard with the closed circuit television show which will have about 160 outlets throughout the world.

Interest seems high in the bouts here where there's a lot of big gaming and tourist money and it is perking up in such large population areas as Southern California.

Ali has drawn crowds of about 1,000 at $1 a pop for his workouts in the plush Colosseum, an auditorium at Caesar's Palace, a casino-hotel that features the boxing motif with Joe Louis, former heavyweight champion, as a greeter.

Ali's 1970 win over Jerry Quarry was his first fight after a three and a half year absence from the ring because of his opposition to Selective Service. He won the battle against the draft too.

Frazier decisioned Ali in their title fight on March 8, 1971 but Ali has won four in a row since then. If you listen to him long enough, he'll convince you he beat Frazier.

Ali, with his 36-1 record, puts Quarry down one moment and builds him up the next. He says of their 1970 fight, "I was dead tired and not at my best after the long layoff."

This would indicate he does not think too highly of Jerry but he also said in front of the television news cameras, "Quarry hits hard, he's determined. Quarry ain't no pushover."

Jerry Quarry, 27, with a ring record of 39-5-4, knows this is his big chance. Ali says, "He's getting a second chance against me. He has nothing to lose. I may lose everything if he hurts me.

"It's the biggest fight I've ever fought. It's everything. I've got to win this one to get a shot at the title."

Foster should not have too much trouble with young Mike. The champ first won his title by decking the late Dick Tiger with a crashing left hook in the fourth round of a bout on May 24, 1968. He got an undisputed claim to the title when he beat the World Boxing Assn. titlist Vicente Rondon in the second round. This will be his 10th defense of his title. He has won 47 of 52 fights with 40 knockouts.

CASE FOR THE DEFENSE

Linebackers John Arce (left) from Lakewood High, Drew Nosworthy from Wilson and Poly standout Larry Love will play key role in South's plan for battle against North in fifth 605 Kiwanis Game July 7 at Cerritos College. Arce earned second team all-CIF honors, Nosworthy and Love were all-Moore League and All-City stars this past prep season.

SOUTH 605 TEAM TAKES SHAPE

By KEN PIVERNETZ

Being a talent coordinator, not coach, seems to be the prime requisite for molding a cohesive all-star football team.

After three days of practice at Cerritos College, South 605 co-coaches George Massick and Dick DeHaven agree there isn't a lot of teaching involved when you have 28 of the best players from 15 different high schools together.

"You have to try and use their abilities to your best advantage," points out Massick, in charge of the offense that'll face the North July 7 in the fifth renewal of the Kiwanis charity contest.

"Coaching an all-star team is different from how you would approach the regular season," adds the coach of St. John Bosco in Bellflower. "It's a new situation for the players, but because they're so good, they pick up things a lot faster. They all have one thing in common, though, and that's a desire to hit and play football."

Millikan's DeHaven, in charge of the defense, agrees. "You don't teach them a lot. It's how well you can get them to work together."

Massick will have his first big decision this week when he divides his offensive backfield into two units.

"Timing will determine a lot on who runs with what unit," adds Massick who utilizes the triple option.

Although the South did lose Mike Worden, the St. John Bosco quarterback last fall who could have obviously been more familiar with the offense, Massick is confident Nef Cortez (Excelsior) or Jeff Kellogg (Jordan) can do the job.

The South, which exploded for 38 points last year in winning its first game in the series, will have Dirk Rogers (Bellflower), Don Muruin (SJB), Dan Bresnahan (Lakewood) and Dave Holland (Neff) as its primary receivers.

Running backs, who'll be split into units with either Kellogg or Cortez, are Carl Topps (SJB), Mike Mallet (Jordan), Mike Gillen (La Mirada) and Daryle Schatz (Norwalk).

The defense could have a definite Moore League favor with as many as seven Long Beach preps in the starting lineup, the most notable being all-CIF linebacker John Arce from Lakewood and Wilson linebacker Drew Nosworthy.

Three players DeHaven coached at Millikan — middle guard Tom Busse, defensive end Ron Woodring and safety Mike Kiley should start.

Tickets are on sale at Mutual agencies in the Long Beach to Whittier area and at the Cerritos College student center.

Riva Ridge heads West for Derby

Trainer Lucien Laurin was quoted by friends on both coasts Saturday to the effect that Meadow Stables' Riva Ridge, winner of the Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes, will be shipped to Hollywood Park Wednesday night for a start next Saturday in the $100,000 added Hollywood Derby.

Bob Wingfield, stabled at the Inglewood track, reported that Laurin called him Friday afternoon to ask if Riva Ridge could be located in his barn when he gets here. "I told him all my stalls were full, but I'm sure we'll work something out for him," said Wingfield with tongue in cheek.

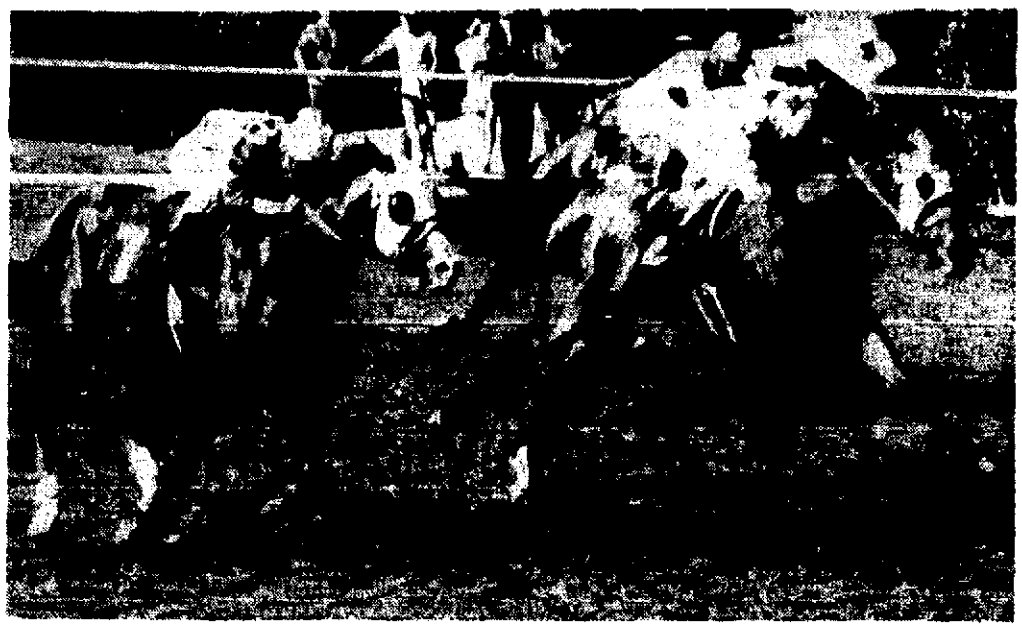

MEANWHILE, Teddy Cox, a columnist for the Daily Racing Form in New York, notified the Hollypark publicity department Saturday that Laurin told him the Hollywood Derby would be Riva Ridge's next outing.

The three-year-old son of First Landing, richest thoroughbred in training anywhere in the world today with earnings of more than $800,000, will be the first Kentucky Derby winner to race in the Hollywood Derby since 1955, when Swaps took both events.

TYPECAST THE UPSET WINNER

Jerry Lambert rode Typecast (center) to win over Violonor (7) and heavy favorite Cougar II to win Saturday's $125,000 Invitational Turf Handicap at Holywood Park.

LAMBERT HANGS IT ON SHOE AGAIN

pean colt simply ran out of real estate.

Typecast's trainer, Tommy Doyle, could hardly restrain himself after the victory, his first 100-grand triumph.

"I'm more excited over this than I was before the match race last week," bubbled the Irishman.

"This is a great accomplishment, beating a horse like Cougar, and, at 117, no one was giving anything away.

"We decided to wait several days after the match to see how she came out of it, but I guess there is no way to really tell until you run her back. But she was acting fine Wednesday and we decided to accept the invitation."

"It was a terrific race by an outstanding mare."

"She's too much mare," said Lambert, who was winning his third $100,000 race this month. "I don't know how a man could ask more of a horse and get it."

Lambert was reluctant to compare Typecast and Convenience, remarking merely:

"They both were great on different Saturdays."

Lambert admitted he was keeping his eye on Cougar all the way.

"I had him trapped on the inside, but going around the clubhouse turn Typecast acted like she wasn't handling the course too well and I didn't have enough horse to keep Cougar in there.

"When Shoe moved up with Cougar down the backside and then just took hold of him. I thought 'how is a man going to beat that horse?'

"When (Fernando) Alvarez moved up inside of me with Violonor going into the far turn, I wasn't expecting anybody to move up in there.

"But my mare was really running from there to the wire. I was worried that Cougar might come back on when I went to him, but he never did."

"I still hadn't asked him to run when I moved up with the leaders going into the far turn," said Shoemaker. "I felt pretty good about my chances there.

"I finally set him down at the head of the stretch, but when that mare came to him, he didn't offer much of a fight. I suppose the weight took its toll, but we really didn't have any excuses."

Apparently Cougar isn't destined to win under an assignment of more than 127 pounds, for this was his fifth loss at 128 pounds or more.

Meanwhile, Shoemaker's prospects of crashing the winner's circle in next Saturday's feature, the Hollywood Derby, seem remote once again. No matter which colt Shoe rides, he'll be facing somebody named Riva Ridge and the prospect of that three-year-old's defeat is highly improbable.

Icecapade sizzles at Aqueduct

Combined News Services

NEW YORK — Icecapade, involved in a bumping match with Tentam during a sizzling stretch duel, won the $57,150 Sananac Stakes Saturday at Aqueduct after withstanding a foul claim.

Ridden by Eddie Maple and owned by Locust Hill Farm, Icecapade completed the mile race in a stakes record 1:33 3-5, a fifth of a second off the track record, for a neck victory over Tentam with Traffic Cop another five and a half lengths back in Jorge Velasquez, aboard Tentam, claimed foul against Maple and Icecapade for interference in the stretch. The track stewards rejected the charge after viewing the race film, which showed Tentam lugging in on Icecapade.

ARLINGTON — Little-regarded Continental Fare, jumped with two others in the mutuel field at 20-1, won the $29,200 Laurence Armour Handicap by a nose over 45-1 shot Tribal Line. Jelnick pitches 13 innings, wins

Shua held onto first place and Alamitos Bay pitcher Jerry Jelnick emerged as the individual standout of Saturday's American Legion Harbor League games.

Jelnick toiled 13 innings as Alamitos Bay edged Carson, 2-1; Greg Gioia two-hit Lakewood as Shua won for the seventh time in eight outings, 1-0; Motor Patrol remained in second place (6-1) with an easy 9-1 victory over Peterson Post and San Pedro held off North Long Beach, 8-7.

Jelnick walked only two, struck out six and retired the side in order in six of the 13 innings he worked Saturday in the second game of a doubleheader at Blair Field.

Each team scored once in the eighth, then Alamitos Bay got the decider when Mike Lotta walked, moved to second on a sacrifice by Bob Russell, took third on a ground out where he eventually scored on a wild pitch.

Bob Hill went 4-for-6 and drove in the other Alamitos Bay run.

Lakewood attempted to squeeze in a run against Gioia in the last of the ninth who got the ball to Bob Minor in time to tag out Steve Brisbin.

Singles by Greg Airhart and Doug Stokke and an error accounted for Shua's only run off Doug Slettvett in the first.

Sheldon Gill had three hits in a losing cause for North Long Beach.

Inky's Angel, despite having won 10 of 14 starts in less than two years of racing, had only earned $29,460 prior to the race. However, the $48,235 first prize money for winning the Derby upped her earnings to $77,695.

The $19,732 which Osage Rocket picked up for finishing second increased her bankroll to $169,942.

Going off second choice in the wagering and running 440 yards in :22 seconds flat, Inky's Angel rewarded her backers with payoffs of $5.60, $2.60 and $2.40. Osage Rocket returned $2.40 and $2.20 while the show price on Tiny Bart was $3.

Oddly enough, the 1-2-3 order of finish is exactly the order in which the three horses had qualified in the Derby trials a week ago.

In the secondary feature, the seventh race at 870 yards for the top distance runners at the track, found Nercino scoring an easy 1¼ lengths victory over Gabby's Boy and Dawes Magic. The 2-1 favored Savannahs Reward was seventh in the field of eight.

Running the one-turn distance in 45.8 seconds, Nercino paid $8.40 to win. Frank Bone was in the saddle for his second winner of the evening.

The ninth race exacta paid $1,265.50 when Moraga Rocket ($28.20) and Fleet Copy finished first and second.

At launch ramp

Somethin' Fishy going on

Boaters and fishermen who launch their own craft from the ramp under the East Second Street Bridge will have a new service early in July. It will be a most welcome one — all kinds of tackle, sandwiches, soft drinks and specialty items will be available.

The store will have a catchy name—Somethin' Fishy—and will be owned and operated by George Hart III, son of George Hart Sr., one of this city's noted attorneys. Young Hart, still in his 20s, looked hard at the legal bit, but it didn't take because George was too fond of the sea and fishing, to be more specific.

After four years at Long Beach State University and some work at the old Pierpoint Landing, George started looking for a business of his own. He hopes that the small building will be placed the first week in July and that he then can stock it with rental rods and reels, terminal tackle, hats, sunburn lotions and the usual goodies that fishermen often forget.

The store will complete the finest launching ramp in the area. Young Hart hopes to add other facilities from time to time, with the ultimate goal of expanding the business to rental boats and motors, a type of service that Long Beach presently does not have.

The store will be situated just 50 feet from the ramp and will be open at 5 a.m. daily throughout the summer and early fall period.

JUST AS RECENTLY AS LAST WEEK I didn't know that we had an expert trout fisherman in the sports department. I always thought that Allen Wolfe only knew how to drive hot-rod cars and report on automobile races and bowling. He does well at both of those two beats.

Allen went with some friends to Dinkey Creek and Wishon Reservoir, in the mountains east of Fresno, and did so well with rod and reel that his buddies were ready to toss him in the lake and leave him there.

His friends were Steve Millette, Bellflower, Steve's father-in-law, Bob Whisman, and Freeman Metzger, who admits that he is 70 years young and ready to match rod and reel with anybody.

Allen caught 18 fish in his three days in camp. The party stayed at a cabin at Camp Fresno, right on the bank of Dinkey Creek. The camp, by the way, is operated by the Fresno Recreation Department. The four fished Wishon Reservoir and caught 17 nice rainbows in seven hours, with the fish ranging from 8 to 12 inches.

Allen says that it's a great place to go, with good weather, clear air and excellent fishing. Steve stayed there seven days and caught 22 nice trout. Earlier, his parents, Don and Gloria Millette, also of Long Beach, had spent a week on Dinkey Creek and had totalled 105 trout for a party of six.

Even Steve's wife, Lynda, caught a trout—and she only had her line in the water about 45 minutes.

SUMMER IS HERE AND JUNE is almost at an end. It's also family time for birds and animals, and the Department of Fish and Game hopes that the public doesn't get too carried away with the spirit of the season.

If you are out in the woods and find a small fawn, for heavens sake, let the poor little thing alone. All tiny deer look as though they have been abandoned by their mothers, but they have not. You can just bet that mama is around close and hiding from you. She's also hoping that you don't pick up her little one and try to take it home and put it in another location.

Just recently, a Napa County college student picked up a deer and took it home. He had to appear in a St. Helena justice court when it was learned what he had done. He pleaded nolo contendre to a charge of taking a live fawn, was fined $125 but the fine was suspended on condition that he work two days in the county's prison work camp.

The DFG points out that deer can not be reared in captivity. Even though they are real little "deers" in the early fawn stage, they can become vicious when older and hard to manage. Often, they are dangerous to people. After all, they are still wild animals.

There have been numbers of cases where children and adults were injured by supposedly pet deer. If you see a baby that looks as though it had been abandoned, notify the DFG, which will look into the report.

OUTDOOR MINIS — There will be another grunion run this week, starting at 10:40 p.m. Wednesday. The run, if it goes as predicted, will last for two hours, but grunion often have strange habits of not keeping the schedule that has been set for them. On the following nights (June 29 and 30 and July 1), the two-hour runs will start at 11:21 p.m., 12:03 a.m., and 1 a.m.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Two other four-night runs are scheduled in July and that will be it for the remainder of the year. There will be no other open seasons. Those July runs are scheduled for the 12th through 15th and 28th through 31st.

Armco Steel Corporation and Chaparral Industries have combined their know how and are putting a portable gas-operated grill on the market that weighs less than 25 pounds. It uses propane gas instead of natural gas, such as Bill Arnold was using at the recent Sportsmen's Show and the Los Angeles Home Show in his demonstration at the California Gas Appliance Sales booth.

Bill was broiling a chicken on one of those fancy Charmglow units. It looked and smelled good, especially when one was trying to digest one of those cold hot dogs that you get at most shows of that type.

In actual operation, gentle gas flames flow through permanent lava-type briquettes to proved the broiling heat. You never replace the briquettes because the gas burns off the grease. The Armco unit may be the answer for those who don't like to take chances with open campfires.

Mountains offer peace and healing

THEIRS IS AN invisible illness the youngsters are lovely to look at and quick to learn, but they have a problem — deep inside. Their mountain retreat home offers a new hope for getting well.

By PATRICIA QUINN
Staff Writer

Listen carefully and you can hear the laughter. Soft echoes of kids having a grand time. You've heard the sounds often enough before. In fact, now that school is out, the sounds will grow less sweet.

The noise will become a racket and your block will be reeling from it. So what's the big deal here?

Well up here, secluded in the San Gabriel Mountains near little Tujunga Canyon, the laughter takes on added significance. For Hathaway Village workers the childish laughter is a reward, a dimensional yardstick for their success.

For the children themselves, the laughter means their mental illness is beginning to dissolve.

Only 12 youngsters are now at the new village, a 10-year dream that cost $4,000,000 to finally construct as a pilot project of the National Institute of Mental Health. It is set on the famed old 300-acre Paradise Ranch of the late C. B. DeMille and is the experts' hope of things to come in the treatment of emotional disturbances of children.

THE VILLAGE PROPER is arranged on three levels and consists of a small school, the administration building and acute treatment hospital, a recreation building and gym, and five duplex cottages.

It is approached along six miles of winding rollercoaster roads and is heralded by two large stone gate posts at the entrance to another short winding drive.

In a few weeks, if plans hold up, a full complement of youngsters will be living and learning and playing here in an intensive attempt to capture love and security they've somehow missed.

Just up the hill from the main buildings along an older section of road, where the kids can get an expansive view of their village home and the wide-open land surrounding it, is the farm. Here the children will ride the horses, play with the dog, feed the pigs, chickens and cows or load the Sicilian burro. Here also, as envisioned, will be miniature farms: animals, vegetables, or flowers, for child participation.

And down the other side of the hill, in existing buildings leftover from DeMille's tenure including his famous old ranch house, about 20 vocational shops—radio, auto, carpentry and others—will be located. These will be tied in with the maintenance staff working with youngster's unable to attend regular school.

The surrounding hills and fields will be used for camping and hiking, both by children living at the village and those up for brief summer or weekend visits and treatment.

When completed the country's most unique and largest facility of its kind will work with 100 in-patient children—nearly doubling that of existing child treatment centers in all of Los Angeles County — 200 day care and brief treatment youngsters, 300 out-patient, and 1,000 children and parents through a community network. Cost will be $1,000,000 a year.

SHEILA POKRAS—

Changes council makeup

By JOANNE NORRIS
Staff Writer

Sheila Pokras, Lakewood's first city councilwoman, is the kind of person who keeps launching new careers.

First—right after her freshman year in college—she became a wife. Then, after graduation from Temple University, she taught school.

Next she became the mother of three. When the third offspring was eight months old, she started to law school. Four and a half years later, she began a law practice.

And, finally, this spring she ran for public office—and won.

Now housewife, mother, lawyer (no longer teacher), she is up to her petite shoulders in a number of plans for the City of Lakewood.

Bringing government closer to people is a major goal, one she's made some headway with, she says, since she was seated on the council in April.

One of the planks in her platform was a hotline from the public to City Hall. The city administration is now open to incoming calls, she says. And her own home phone number is no secret, Mrs. Pokras added.

The most exciting thing about her first try for public office was knocking on doors and listening to the people who answered.

She walked half the precincts in Lakewood and found a general disenchantment with the remoteness of government.

Mrs. Pokras scored an upset victory, along with two other councilmen, by unseating three incumbents who were favored to win.

The new council quickly approved a plan for a complete reorganization of city government including a city manager form of administration.

MRS. POKRAS wants more involvement of senior citizens and youth in Lakewood matters too. Next fall she hopes to start a plan for high school and college students to serve on an ad hoc basis on city committees and commissions.

"These will not necessarily be just the good students," she said. "Any student who is interested can have his or her name put in a hat. Names will be drawn and the students will serve on a rotating basis, probably for two to three month periods."

Although the young people won't have a vote, they will have a voice in shaping city policy. Mrs. Pokras sees it as an educational venture that may foster a lasting interest in government in at least some of them.

Lakewood Center is another concern of hers. She views it as a symptom of public complacency.

"It's dowdy looking . . . needs a shot in the arm," she claims. And she thinks the city council should provide it.

Federal money is available for refurbishing, she says. Gas revenues can be used to improve egress and ingress. She also advocates architectural planning to form a more cohesive unit.

Sales revenues from the center are vital to the city, she adds.

"If we lose $100,000 a year, we will have to raise property taxes. Thirty-eight per cent of our budget comes from sales tax."

MRS. POKRAS HADN'T really intended to run for a council seat, but she thought the group needed a woman. When no one else came forth, she decided to take the plunge herself.

She hired a student from the University of California at Berkeley to run her campaign and got her husband and children busy.

"I wouldn't vote for you just because you're a woman, mother," 13-year-old Allison told her.

"I had to win her over. But once I convinced her I had other qualifications, she was one of my most enthusiastic boosters."

"I wanted to put up a fight to give other women the idea," she said. "It's necessary for more than 50 per cent of

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

Theater tea a hit

By CAROLYN McDOWELL

LOVELY LAURA Killingsworth opened her lovely home for a lovely tea for members and guests of Long Beach Children's Theater.

As the accompanying photo illustrates, there was lots of fun when some of the cast members of the Theater's last production, "Aesops' Faloabels," came in costume.

Barbara Yahn was chairman of the afternoon affair and it was a success from the daisy punch down to the soft music flowing through the Killingsworth home, where, as those of you who have been there know, the outdoors lives indoors as well.

Past Presidents included Maggie McKinney, Gay McKernie, Virginia Artman, Charlotte Shuman, and Bernice Hurley.

Among other members and guests were Yvonne Record, Carol Crawford, Karen Rosenthal, Linda Wasserman, Kay Shuman, Alta Dixon, Nancy Jones, Vicki Montano, Rita Osborn, Karolyn Marr, Charmine Cecel, Mary Marsh, Dorothy Garland and Marion Kinley.

COUP OF THE year was scored by Pepperdine College.

Some months ago they booked a speaker for the "Great Issue Series," dinners with guest lecturers from all over the United States.

Men who are noted in their fields but not necessarily famous.

Last week's speaker was the Hon. Louis Patrick Gray III, who became famous a few weeks ago when he assumed the directorship of the FBI on the death of J. Edgar Hoover.

Pepperdine Chancellor M. Norvel Young and President William Banowsky co-hosted a cocktail party preceding the dinner at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel for such Los Angeles luminaries as Sheriff Peter Pitchess, District Attorney Joe Busch, Chief of Police Edward Davis, City Attorney Roger Arnebergh and Attorney General Evelle Younger.

Among Long Beach luminaries attending were Justice "Buck" and Donna Compton, Judge Mal and Joan Lucas, George and Pat Johnson, Dick and Pat Secord and Bob and Ellie Devitt.

CINDY NESBITT weds Loquell Martindale today and thereby hangs a sentimental story.

The couple will exchange vows in the gazebo in the garden of Bill and Kay Nesbitt's home. They are proud, though somewhat harried (as you will see), parents of the bride.

Bill built the gazebo for Kay on their 25th wedding anniversary so it has special meaning to the family.

Sighs of relief accompanied the tears as the Nesbitts watched their second daughter in a week change her name.

On Jun. 17 Kathy Nesbitt married Michael Menke in a ceremony at California Heights Methodist Church with a reception following in the Nesbitt home.

There were showers galore for both girls.

Cindy was honored at a bath shower given by maid of honor Cindy Wulfsberg and bridesmaid Linda Tavlin at Linda's home.

Dorothy Hartstein gave a come-and-bring-your-favorite recipe luncheon for Cindy.

Highlight of showers for both girls, one for Cindy hosted by Betty Wulfsberg and Jean Doody of Upland, and a luncheon at Audrey Romeyn's with Susie Driscoll as co-hostess was the presentation of memento-filled antique trunks, one for each of the girls.

Mother Kay had saved EVERYTHING from baby clothes, to teddy bears, to valentines and Christmas angels, wrapped each item lovingly and created a kind of "This Is Your Life, Miss Nesbitt."

Among guests present for each trunk opening were Betty Barden, Mary Brooks, Shirley Gillis, Deanie Conway, Barbara Clark, Neville Tibbett and Shirley McCune.

Other showers for Kathy included a pantry shower given by Betty Lou Ebright and a china shower co-hosted by Jerrie Smiley and her daughter, Jean Lovine.

MORE JOY MINGLED with tiny tears at the home of Mike and Lida Clancy.

They bid adieu to daughter Lida, who is off to live in Antwerp, Belgium, for 14 months.

Her sojourn is under the auspices of the Youth for Understanding program and she will live with a Belgian family.

Lida, a 1972 Millikan grad, was feted at a bon voyage at the home of her parents with such as Jan Kuencer, Sue Long, Cindy Hamilton, Terry Scott, Pat Scott, Mary Kelso, Mary Crawford, Angela Avery and Gary Napper coming by to wish her well.

Others included Bob Beaver, Pat Newton, Bob Reif, Don Grant, Jim West, and George D'Entremont.

Family bon voyagers included Lida's grandmother, Lida Ferris, and family friends, Ray and Lee Resner, Walt and Lois Kuencer, Jim and Lou Boyd, Don and Bev Carlson and Becky Goldwater.

Auxiliary meet

Catholic labor problems will be subject explored by the Rev. Thaddeus Schubsda at Tuesday's meeting of Carmelite Nuns Auxiliary, convening at 1 p.m. in St. Anthony's High School Cafeteria, Sixth Street and California Avenue.

OUTDOOR ACTIVITIES are part of therapy provided troubled youngsters at Hathaway Village.

Hathaway House is a haven for troubled kids

new setup will operate and what staff members hope to accomplish. Operation:

—The acute treatment clinic, which holds 25, will offer intensive short-term care for those severely disturbed. From here the child will either be sent home with continued out-patient therapy or placed in one of the village cottages. The clinic also will provide 24 hour emergency service with day, night or weekend hospitalization.

—The ten cottages will provide a family-like atmosphere for children who need to be removed from their environment. In each cottage a married couple will live and work with six youngsters on an around-the-clock basis.

—The school, with ten classrooms and playyard, is for youngsters who are too disturbed to attend one of the regular community schools and need specialized instruction. Although primarily for the live-in youths, there will be some room for those needing only day care.

Latch, who gives the appearance of a realistic man facing a persistent but increasingly more exposed problem, estimates there are upwards of several thousand Los Angeles County youngsters in need of this kind of facility, which if successful will be implemented throughout the country.

THE MAIN AIM of the Village staff is to get the children functioning in the community again as soon as possible. The key to achieving this, besides the intensive and specialized care, will be earlier detection of the mentally ill child.

Many emotionally disturbed children now either wander around the community undetected, going from place to place and eventually winding up in Juvenile Hall or a state institution, Latch said, or are inappropriately placed in adult units or the county probation department.

In illustration, he told of an actual case involving an 8-year-old girl who had been in 22 foster homes before finally coming to Hathaway Home in Highland Park, the village's parent facility.

The girl was quite disturbed. Her father had died when she was 4 or 5-years-old; her mother became mentally ill and was hospitalized. Of the 22 foster homes, one or two were adoptive possibilities that just didn't work out. She stayed at Highland Park for a year, improved enough to attend the community school and was ready for the transition to a foster home. But again this home was not working out, even though the couple was highly rated and well liked by the girl. She was waiting for her mother to return.

"There was no moving this girl until she saw that her mother was just not well enough to ever take care of her," Latch explained. The mother was a chronic schizophrenic and failed to recognize her daughter—a shock for the girl but with happy after effects. She went to the foster home and from there on to a normal adulthood.

A more typical case involved a 9-year-old girl whose father deserted home and the mother became ill and died, The grandmother took over but was simply too old to cope. The young girl went into a depression and refused to eat. The grandmother was not sharp enough to realize that the child barely ate for an entire month—she had given up on life. "This was the 9-year-old's way of committing sucide," Latch declared.

When discovered the child was only skin and bones and had to be tube fed.

After a brief hospital stay, she was transfered to Hathaway where she underwent treatment for over a year. There she blossomed out and subsequently was placed in a foster home.

THERE ARE FOUR children from the Long Beach area presently at the Highland Park facility who may be shifted to the mountain retreat.

But the primary geographic targets for the Village operation, particularly the out-patient care, are the nearby Pacoima, Sunland, Tujunga, Sun Valley, Lake View Terrace communities. More than 75,000 children reside within this boundary and the Village, as a requirement of the state and federal funding, will concentrate on curing or keeping these youngsters mentally healthy.

Latch said staff members will work with teachers from 20 schools, training them to determine earlier the more subtle signs of possible mental trouble. It's relatively easy to realize that an excessively aggressive hyper-active child is mentally troubled, he said, but extreme shyness, an inability to share, late bed wetting, reading backwards, and excessive lying are also some signs of deeper problems.

The aggressive child can be such a nuisance he won't be overlooked but the withdrawn or bedwetting child is likely to be tolerated or ignored until the problem is more ingrained, Latch pointed out.

The Village is also one-third supported by donations and the most prominent benefactor is actress-singer Julie Andrews for whom the administration and clinic building was named. Miss Andrews visits the ranch frequently and talks with the children.

Sheila Pokras: profile of active, concerned woman

our population to be represented on the council."

Mrs. Pokras and her oral surgeon husband, Norman, both grew up in the Jewish section of Newark N.J., where they went to Weequahic High School with author Philip Roth.

Roth wrote of the school, the neighborhood and a lot of their friends in "Portnoy's Complaint." And he captured it all well, Mrs. Pokras says.

"Everybody thought Phil was kind of strange. Everybody else wanted to be a doctor or a dentist. He majored in English."

The neighborhood ("Let's face it, was a ghetto") was not a prosperous one. But everyone was politically aware, Sheila Pokras remembers.

"On Sunday night when you walked down Leslie Street ("Phil mentions it in 'Portnoy"), windows would be open and every radio would be tuned to Walter Winchell.

"Everybody was terribly interested in the war. And Eleanor Roosevelt was always at our high school, talking about the United Nations, talking about a lot of things...

"In the early 50s Hubert Humphrey was my pinup boy. He and Montgomery Clift."

THE POKRASES started dating when she was a freshman in high school. After she was graduated, she enrolled in Beaver College, a small girls' school in Jenkintown, Pa., so she could be near Norman, who was attending Temple University Dental School in Philadelphia.

"I wanted to be near, but not too near, because I was going to date other people. I dated about three I think. That was enough."

The following fall the Pokrases married and she transferred to Temple, where she got a degree in secondary education.

She taught junior high school in Philadelphia and later in Newark. Allison was born about this time, then another daughter.

After Pokras completed his residency as an oral surgeon, he entered the service and the Pokrases left Newark for Travis Air Force Base, Calif.

On a trip to Disneyland, while he was recuperating from serum hepatitis, they fell in love with Southern California. After he left the Air Force, he got a job in Santa Ana.

But the couple didn't like that city and when they heard from a dentist friend that an oral surgeon was needed in Lakewood, they moved.

Mrs. Pokras, meantime, had involved herself in the League of Women Voters and other community activities.

THEN ONE DAY she said to her husband, "What am I going to do with the rest of my life?"

"You're going to law school," he told her.

Years before she had picked up a brochure at the Temple Law School, but hadn't really thought seriously about a legal career.

But Dr. Pokras was adamant.

"He said 'I'll babysit.' "

So she enrolled in the USC night law school.

"Then lo and behold I became pregnant with No. 3."

After a son was born the following December, Dr. Pokras started in again. The upshot was that Sheila entered Pacific Coast Law School, then switched to the Orange School of Law (now Pepperdine) and was graduated four busy years later.

She studied during the day in the midst of children, the PTA, the Blue Birds and housework.

"You know how women are. If you're doing something outside the home, you feel you have to do all these other things too, plus keeping your house spotless at all times."

The Pokrases had two college girls who lived in and helped with the children.

"But one of us—either my husband or I—was always at home," she said.

Now there's a full-time maid and all three youngsters are in school.

AFTER SHE PASSED the Bar exam, she turned down several job offers because the offices were too far from home and the children.

When attorney Dorothy Levin offered her a position with her, it was ideal as the office is not far from the Pokras' residence at 3960 Bouton Drive in Lakewood. And the job enabled the two women to establish what they think is the only all-woman law firm in Southern California.

Mrs. Pokras has a general practice.

"I want to learn as much as I can. Maybe I'll specialize later. Right now I take anything because I want to keep my mind open and learn."

She describes her husband as being "overly enthusiastic" about her career. "He thinks I'm brilliant," she laughs.

She's very active in the Long Beach Bar Association.

"It's a wonderful group. It's where the law is really made because it is always suggesting new laws,"

One of the first matters to come to her attention as a council member was whether she should be called councilman or councilwoman.

"It's not the most vital thing," she admits. "But some people thought I should be called councilwoman. I'd really prefer council member for all of the council, but if I can't have that, I prefer councilwoman."

Her nameplate, first identifying her as Councilman Pokras, is being changed. It's among the first of a number of new things Councilwoman Pokras would like to see in Lakewood.

"I WANTED to put up a fight to give other women the idea," says Sheila Pokras of her election to Lakewood City Council.

IRA CORN

The Aces

By IRA G. CORN JR.

Dear Mr. Corn:

With 40 on score, I held the following South hand and the bidding was as follows:

♠ Q x x
♥ x
♦ A x x
♣ K Q J 10 x x

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 ♣
Dbl.	Redbl.	1 ♥	2 ♣
2 ♥	3 ♣	3 ♥	Pass
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

Was my pass to three spades correct?

Major Over Minor,
New York City

Answer: With 40 on score your prime consideration should have been directed at the safest possible part score. On the bidding given it is quite likely that North may have been "testing" the spade suit, since he had already supported clubs. Rather than chance a shaky 4-3 trump fit, my emphatic vote is for four clubs—with 100 honors, partner.

Dear Mr. Corn:

In a recent game I fell in love with this hand and bid to slam:

♠ A K Q J 10 x x x x
♥ J
♦ A x x

This was the bidding:

6.25

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
4 NT	Pass	5 ♦	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

North's three-club bid showed the club ace. Should I have gone to slam?

Puppy Love,
Pittsburg

Answer: I would also have fallen in love with that hand. However, I would not have asked for aces after finding out that North had the club ace—a possibly worthless card opposite the void. Since the partnership was forced to game, I would simply rebid three spades (possibly three diamonds) in hopes that North could provide some illuminating information about his diamond holding. Without a good diamond fit (either K x, or Q J), you should have been prepared to stop short of slam. You may still have problems getting to dummy.

AT WIT'S END

Big crisis in Dallas

By ERMA BOMBECK

I have always admired women who can wear a one-size swimsuit. That is, either a size 12, a 14, or a 16. I wear all three sizes at the same time.

In the modern-day vernacular, I can't seem to get it all together. My friends tell me exercise is the secret. It's not how much weight you carry, it is how it is packaged and distributed.

I stood in front of the mirror the other morning and assessed myself. Imagine if you will the state of Texas. I look terrific at Amarillo, but by the time I hit Dallas and Fort Worth, I begin to blouse, and don't really thin out again until Corpus Christi.

I'VE EXERCISED. I really have. Once I signed up for a course at the neighborhood YWCA. The classes were held in a church and because of the popularity of the class, we were put in the church proper. One afternoon the minister visited and paused long enough to see me in a pair of faded pedal pushers trying to touch my nose to my bent knee which was resting on a pew and said, "You are desecrating the altar." I transferred to a cake decorating class and licked my way to six additional pounds.

For awhile, I used to eat my dessert at breakfast while watching a Swedish girl on television. She held me spellbound by winding her leg around her neck. I watched and listened to her for over a year and one day I wheezed, strained and gasped and finally got one of my ankles hooked over the other. I quit before I really hurt myself.

THE IDEA OF GOING to a spa really intrigued me. I thought how great it would be to splash around in the water and steam your pores and ride a bicycle to nowhere, but going to a spa is like having a cleaning lady. You can't go to a spa looking like you need to go to a spa anymore than you can have a cleaning woman walk into a house that needs cleaning. Somehow, I just couldn't get myself in shape for a towel.

For the last year, I have watched my husband faithfully execute his Air Force exercises (which could account for the decline in enlistments). If there is anything in this world more boring than a man who exercises regularly, I have not met it.

"You should join me," he keeps insisting. "A few pushups; a little jogging. It's good for the old body."

"Then why aren't your knees straight when you bend over to touch your toes?"

"I suppose you could do it better?"

"Sure, by letting my fingernails grow 14 inches."

He thinks he's fooling around with some amateur.

Peel your way to youthfulness with a new and revolutionary skin care cream now at Bullock's

Peel O Matique removes the layer of dry, dead skin from your face or hands, allowing the youthful loveliness of your complexion to come through. Crows' feet, lines over the lips, blemishes, crepey skin are locked in by this dry outer skin. Notice the lower part of a man's face. It is wrinkle-free because daily shaving removes that layer of useless skin. Peel O Matique subtracts age lines by peeling away the dead layer as men do in shaving. Peel O Matique minimizes smile lines, laugh lines and thought lines by removing the dead layer or temporarily moisturizing them. Peel O Matique will not replace your cosmetics—it will allow you to utilize their potential benefits. Peel O Matique is available for hands, too. Prominent veins recede as skin plumps out. Plaid, the most popular pattern for fall, comes in everything from suits to leisure wear, below left, to super-fit shirts and sweaters, right. Florals will also dominate the male scene—with collars longer and more 'to-the-point'.

Variety spice of men's fashions

By Mary Ellis Carlton

Fashion Editor

KNITS are beginning to show up in rainwear such as this wool and polyester doubleknit trenchcoat with epaulettes and belt.

NEW PALTZ, N.Y. — The man who never made it in Indian fringes, hippie beads, tie-dyed pants and headbands can heave a sigh of relief.

The male fashion revolution is over. Hopefully, we've passed the era when it's smart — even acceptable — for a fellow to express his degree of social dissatisfaction by the length of his hair and absurdity of his dress.

And we won't be seeing many of those costume-y male peacocks around any more, either. They've gone back to the Hollywood wardrobe department.

But, never fear, men's clothes will never be dull again. True, the man in the gray flannel suit is back. But he's not the old school, Madison Avenue type. This time around, Mr. With-It will most likely wear his gray flannels with a tartan pullover sweater, a coordinated knit shirt and a colorful scarf at the neck.

Dash, not flash, is the new mode of dress. Neat and discreet are the words for fall. A new refined elegance emerges as preferred plumage for the Man of Today.

THAT, IN ESSENCE, was the message at the Men's Fashion Association's fall-winter press preview at Mohonk Mountain House, an historic and exclusive resort hidden away somewhere in the Catskills.

More than 200 of the nation's fashion editors and broadcasters were on hand to spot the trends and report back to the American male on the varied fashion options open to him this fall.

And he has many. Variety is the big news. It will be a great season for the fashion innovator, a rough one for the man who can't make up his mind.

Casual wear will get more slicked up for fall, while business clothes will take on a less studied look, according to Ken O'Keefe, MFA fashion director.

Like in women's fashions the most important pattern for fall is plaid; the most important fabric, flannel. Also, like in styles for the distaff side, the layered look counts for much of the excitement.

KNIT SUITS are even more important than they were last season. Knits and stretch fabrics are more significant in sportcoats, making a splash this season in bold, rugged patterns.

Much of the news is in color; blues favored, but reds, greens and earth tones are of interest, too.

In overcoats: (if anyone wears them in California), look for the raglan sleeve. The more appropriate trenchcoat can be either single or double breasted. Knits are coming into this area, too; quilted styles will be a novelty.

In shirts, button-downs and rounded collars are added to the popular long points. Ties are still wide and knit ties will have another go-around. And now, Mr. Short can go a half inch or so taller and look more stylish being there. Shoes are on a higher heel kick. Ditto boots. The soft loafer with a minimum of hardware and the pachukka boot are also important.

ABOUT MOHONK HOUSE, where the showings were held. It's an Old World place that looks unreal.

It could almost be termed a phenomenon. It's style is a kind of casual continuity started more than a hundred years ago and, you might say, the buildings just grew.

It is an eighth-of-a-mile of wood and stone buildings — six or seven stories high and all connected — that have been called a cross between Charles Addams and Early Walt Disney. It's situated on the edge of a lake surrounded by dramatic, glacier-swept and tumbled rock, part of 4,500 acres of wooded beauty on Shawangunk Mountain.

Though only a couple hours from Manhattan in upstate New York, surprisingly few Gothamites seem ever to have heard of it. But the reservation list is almost always full. It's a step into nostalgia you shouldn't miss if you're coming to the East Coast.

FASCINATING FABRICS

Weight doesn't always mean warmth

By FRANCES DIETRICH

A reader asks: "Will you please do a column on fabric weights?" This is an intriguing suggestion. Weight of clothing can be real or illusory, affecting comfort and appearance. The degree of actual weight does not necessarily mean warmth, strength or long wear. It is an important consideration in our choice of travel clothes

When buying fabric by the yard, lift it in your hands and get the heft of it. Think how it will look in the pattern you've selected; how it will sew. What will it do for your figure? Depending on color, size of print, and texture, it may contribute a heavyweight look though it feels light.

WHETHER YOU sew at home or buy everything ready-made, you'll find fabrics are lighter in actual weight than ever. Only specialty fabric shops carry 12-ounce knits or 100 per cent wool worsted. There is little demand for them elsewhere.

There's a combination of reasons, including the passion for physical fitness and the youthful slim look. Comfort is a contributor. Lighter weight clothes are more comfortable in winter and summer where you live and work, and in cars and planes. Because of environmental changes and personal preferences, there is less and less difference among fall, winter and spring fabrics in weight, texture and color.

An important part of our lightweightedness is due to man-made fibers. Among familiar fibers in clothing, nylon is the lightest, yet strongest. This is one reason for the popularity of that great travel dress, the nylon knit. Acrylic is next, known for its buoyancy and warmth in sweaters. Spandex is close on the heels of acrylic, considerably lighter than rubber, more powerful and durable.

Cotton, rayon and flax (linen) in fiber form are heavier than man-mades. Interestingly, polyester and wool fibers balance one another on the scales, but in comparable fabrics wool will be heavier because more fiber is needed to make the yearn.

READER SERVICE. The right style as well as the right choice of fabric can minimize figure faults. Excellent points on slimming problem spots through pattern selection are in the free pamphlet, McCALL'S POUNDS THINNER, which describes the principles of optical illusion. CHEF OF THE WEEK

Bennett builds eggsacting dish

By MILDRED K. FLANARY

Were he to take a tour of Long Beach, he could see himself and associates in operation in many areas, i.e., The Bixby Knolls Towers, and the 11-story Plymouth West, now under construction at Third Street and Chestnut Avenue. Today's Chef of the Week is the "DEB" of Dwight E. Bennett and Associates.

This firm of architects also participated in the joint venture of the Pacific Terrace Convention Center. Bennett has been involved in its "build up" since coming to Long Beach in 1960.

Born in Sterling, Kan., he was graduated from Sterling High School, where he served as vice president of the student body, and from Kansas State University at Manhattan, with a bachelors degree in architecture.

His California degree was conferred in 1960, after completion of a five-year course in architecture and planning.

HE HAS SERVED the Long Beach Heart Association as chairman of the board, secretary-treasurer, and as policy committee chairman. He's also been a member of the board of directors and vice president of the California Heart Association.

A member of the Downtown Lions Club, he has served as president, secretary and director.

Bennett is, or has been, a member of the board of directors the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce, the YMCA, and the Downtown Long Beach Associates. He's a member of the Board of Trustees, St. Mary's Hospital, and a member of the Environmental Commission, City of Long Beach, the Long Beach Touchdown Club and of the Fine Arts Affiliates LBSU.

Professionally, Bennett holds a membership in the American Institute of Architects Corporate, and in the California Council, A.I.A. He is also the chairman of ethics and practice, Cabrillo Chapter, A.I.A.

He and his wife, Charlotte, have three daughters, Michele Malia, 8, Tracey Dawn, 6, and Nicole Suzzanne, 3-months-old.

When Charlotte learned that he was to be a "Chef", she immediately asked if he was going to give his recipe for Oatmeal Cookies, which he can put together during a football game time-out or a station break. He does them without ever missing a play, then proceeds to consume the whole batch himself.

DWIGHT E. BENNETT: A.I.A.

Instead, however, he's preparing a batch of Eggs Bennett. "It's a lazy man's dish", say Bennett, "which can be fixed the night before, refrigerated, then slipped into the oven in time for breakfast. Or it's great as a midnight 'brunch' — after the game, of course."

Until Charlotte took over, the recipe's measurements were rather hazy. "He's very precise about everything except cooking", she says. "He doesn't measure — just throws himself into it, as it were."

She's measured, tried and tested however, and finds it great. You'll want to do the same.

EGGS BENNETT

1 pound ham, cut in ½" cubes
16 shelled hard-boiled eggs, quartered
4 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
½ teaspoon paprika
1 tablespoon grated orange peel
Juice of ½ lemon
4 cups of milk
½ cup Parmesan Cheese
8 English Muffins

Lay the quartered eggs into a well buttered 9x12" baking dish, and sprinkle ham cubes evenly over the top. In a sauce pan, melt butter; stir in flour, salt, pepper, paprika, orange peel and lemon juice; add milk. Cook, stirring, until thickened. Add cheese. Stir until smooth and remove from heat. Pour sauce over ham and eggs. Bake 15 to 20 minutes in a 350 degree oven. Serve over split, toasted and buttered English muffins. Serves 8.

DEAR ABBY

Serve baked potatoes next time

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I recently married a widower with a 13-year-old son. Last night I served roast turkey with mashed potatoes and gravy. There were just the three of us. David (that's not his name) started to put his fingers in the mashed potatoes,. making "road maps, and rivers and valleys."

I told him it wasn't good manners to put his fingers in his food or play with it. He didn't talk back to me, but he looked at his father for support, and his father said, "It's okay to eat however you want at home, as long as you remember your manners when you eat out or have company over."

David brightened up and continued to make road maps, etc. in the mashed potatoes with his fingers.

You can see, Abby, my husband is the boss and what he says goes.

I told him I was going to write to you and ask how you felt about this and he said, "Go ahead. I'll bet she says I'm right."

Well, what do you say?

ANONYMOUS PLEASE

DEAR ANON: Your husband loses. First, David is much too old to be playing with his mashed potatoes, but more important he should not be allowed to play the "divide and conquer" game, which appears to be what's happening at your house. You and your husband had better get on the same team — fast.

DEAR ABBY: This is my first job and I am ready to climb the walls. I am in a one-girl office with 18 men including my boss. Everything I do or wear causes comments from the men. If I wear a colorful print, someone says, "Where's the party?" If I wear black, they say, "Where's the funeral?" If I wear a short skirt, I hear, "Wow, look at those gams!" If I wear pants, someone says, "Hi, Sam!"

The money is good and I have to work, but I get so nervous from all the remarks around here, I'm a wreck. Can you help me?

SENSITIVE

DEAR SENSITIVE: Learn to tune 'em out, or develop a thicker skin. Chances are, they're just being friendly.

DEAR ABBY: I have an explanation for your male reader who said women knit in company to give them something to think about while they're talking.

I learned to knit to give myself something to think about while my husband was talking, which he did incessantly.

DEAR MEG: Touche. You're great with the needle!

DEAR ABBY: I read your "Confidential to Feeling Guilty," who apparently found a lost pet and didn't advertise to find its owner. You said if a person finds a lost pet and doesn't make every effort to locate its owner, it's as bad as stealing it, or words to that effect.

Well, I disagree! I love animals, and whenever I'd find a lost pet, I used to advertise for its owner, but no more!

Pet owners who let their pets roam around might enjoy having a pet, but they don't really love them.

Why should I spend my good money advertising to find an owner when nine out of ten times the pet is left to roam and gets lost again?

JENNIE IN COLUMBUS

DEAR JENNIE: If you love animals, you know the heartbreak felt by one who has lost a pet. To some, it's almost as traumatic as losing a child. Even the most loved and cared for pets sometimes get "lost."

THE BEGINNING: small bead, left, given to Jessie Hardman on her honeymoon in Mexico whetted her curiosity about jade. Now she is an authority and for 35 years has been collecting the mineral in its many forms.

What triggers a collector?

What brings that one moment when you realize that pitchers or helmets or old musical instruments or Grandma Moses pictures or — for both brunettes and blondes — diamonds hold absorbing interest?

Silly question!

There are, of course, as many answers as there are collectors.

For Jessie Hardman of Long Beach, the answer is easy. She and her husband shared an interest in minerals even before they were married. On their honeymoon, they went to Mexico and there, in Taxco, she was buying some silver buckles.

The shop owner opened the safe to get more of the ornaments and among many other items were some jade beads. Seeing Mrs. Hardman's fascination, the owner impulsively said to the bride, "Take one! It's yours!"

That did it. From then on, jade was the object of the couple's special attention.

Shortly after their honeymoon, World War II began and the new husband went into service. In the course of time,, he was in China. There was no restriction on buying jade then, and there was much to be had. Some of the couple's choicest pieces were acquired at that time.

IN INTERVENING years, Mrs. Hardman has become a respected specialist and authority on jade.

At the National Gem and Mineral Show Thursday through next Sunday at Anaheim Convention Center, she will serve as a judge. Friday at 2 p.m., she will conduct a Thumbnail Workshop and at 5 p.m. that same afternoon will give a slide-lecture program on "California Firsts — the Man and the Mineral," discussing minerals and gems found in this state.

But it's jade that intrigues her most.

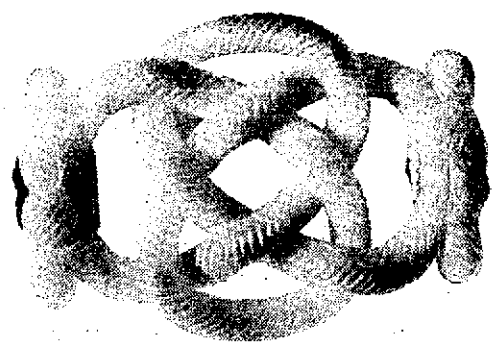

"Just think," she exclaims, "during the age of Pericles in Greece, 2,000 years ago, camel caravans were bringing jade from Turkistan through the Great Wall of China!"

Many of the pieces in her collection are burial jades. "When a person died in China, all orifices of the body were closed. The more wealth the family had, the more precious were the objects used. The most expensive substance was jade."

The Hardman collection includes jades from Wyoming, Japan, the Frazier River in Alaska, the Upper Amazon, the Caribbean and several areas in California.

Mrs. Hardman can explain the symbolism of the intricately carved pieces and is tolerant of the prevalent misconception that all jade is green or very dark. Much of the most valuable jade is white; many specimens are variegated.

JUI SCEPTER of nephrite jade, right, is carved from one piece, chain and all. The tassle denotes the scepter's use by royalty.

THIS BELT BUCKLE of nephrite jade, above, dates back to the Chien Lung Dynasty.

This vivacious and intrepid collector admits that acquiring excellent jade pieces is more difficult now than it was when she and her husband began. "It's harder to find good examples. Nothing is coming from China and hasn't for a long time. Art auctions are still a best bet."

Mrs. Hardman hasn't confined her collecting to jade and she's a skilled carver of many minerals and gems.

But jade? Carve jade?

"Not yet," she smiles. "Maybe — someday."

LONG BEACH area artists earned a share of the $10,000 in purchase awards that Home Savings donated for prizes in the Los Angeles free All City Outdoor Art Festival. This is the final day of the weekend event in Barnsdall Park, 4804 Hollywood Blvd., just west of Vermont.

To Joel Stearns, 759 Termino Ave., went $300 for his lithograph. "Bananas Like These Don't Grow on Trees."

Helen Lewis, 7820 Rose St., Paramount, won $500 for her polyurethane foam creation, "Stalactite," a work in grays and blacks. For an acrylic, "Silent Platform," Jerome Grimmer of 1360 Dittmar Drive, Whittier, received $825. No money, but a handsome honorable mention went to Walton B. Fosque, 4449 E. Fourth St., Long Beach for a serigraph.

AT AN ART SHOW at Allen Center, first event sponsored by the newly-formed Naval Station Fine Arts Committee, nine artists won prizes. Capt. Donald Smith Commanding Officer, Naval Station Long Beach, made the presentations. First prize winners were Mrs. Hugh E. Kilmartin for an oil and a delicate pencil drawing, and Mrs. Ruby Deal for a pastel.

Long Beach artist Pat Johnson headed the panel of five judges. There were 45 entries in oils, watercolors and mixed media. Only Navy dependents were eligible to compete.

ANOTHER winner is Pamela Delliquanti, 17, a student at Polytechnic High School. She took first state prize in the 10th annual Q-Tips Arts Awards competition in which entrants may use any media but must execute the work with Q-Tips.

Her painting now will be entered for final judging and is eligible for one of the three top awards of $50, $250 and $100.

AT LONG BEACH Jewish Community Center, 2601 Grand Ave., through July 16, will be an exhibit of new, original decorative tapestries and weavings by nine artists from the Southern Californa area. They are Linda D'Amico, Robert Guttman, Wayne King, Carolyn Dyer, Mary Ann Glantz, Lois Constantine, Mary Jones, Carolyn Potter and Mary Shaffer.

'Charlie Brown' will inaugurate company

JEFFREY BRANMAN
. . . Plays 'Charlie Brown'

To open its premiere season at Long Beach State University, the International Theater Company will present that lighthearted musical, "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown."

Performances will be Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m. and next Sunday at 2:30 and 8 p.m. in the Little Theater on campus.

Under auspices of the department of theater arts, the new company will stage three other productions: "The Trial of the Cantonsville Nine" July 6, 7 and 8 at 8:30 p.m. and July 9 at 2:30 and 8 p.m.; Noel Coward's comedy "Hay Fever," following the same schedule July 13, 14, 15 and 16; and "The Empire Builders" by Boris Vian July 20, 21, 22 and 23.

Under guidance of general manager Robert F. Eggers, associate professor of theater arts, the International Theater Company was founded to provide training in professional theater skills.

Individual and season subscription tickets are available at the new theater arts ticket office. Season tickets are $6 for general admission; tickets to individual performances are $2 on Thursdays and Sundays and $2.50 on Fridays and Saturdays.

"CHARLIE BROWN" deals with an average day in the life of that favorite character in the Charles M. Schulz "Peanuts" comic strip. Lucy, Schroeder, Snoopy, Linus and Patty help the plot swing from wild optimism to utter despair and back again.

"The Trial of the Cantonsville Nine" is a courtroom drama focused on the Philip and Daniel Berrigan and their seven confederates who entered an office of the Selective Service and burned draft records.

"Hay Fever" concerns the Bliss family, an ultra-Bohemian group that leads a free life.

Vian's "Empire Builders," translated from the French by Simon Watson Taylor, involves a bourgeois family in a play of mounting horror and darkest comedy, ending with a scene which has been described as one of the most terrifying in modern theater.

The new company's faculty will be resident LBSU members and specialists from other leading institutions. In addition to the theater productions, two professional academic courses and a master theater workshop will be given.

The department of theater arts will supply additional information.

Program reveals classic ballet method

"Ballet Beautiful '72" is more than an entertaining evening of dance, says Marga Lind-Columbus, who directs a dance center at 1009 N. Long Beach Blvd., Compton.

True, there will be a variety of dance styles in the show Friday at 7:30 p.m. at Jordan Theater, 6500 Atlantic Ave.

For instance, the program includes, among its numbers, "Mickey Mouse's Birthday Party," "March of the Peppermint Sticks," "The Grande Polonaise," "African Peace Waltz," "Sugarfoot" and "The Fan Dance."

But the highlight will be a demonstration, narrated by Miss Lind-Columbus, of the Vaganova method of training. This, she explains, is the method used in both the Leningrad-Kirov and the Bolshoi Ballet school in Russia. Rudolph Nureyev and Natalia Makarova were trained in this method.

Shown above are dancers Karen Rosser, 14; Kay Stayton, 22; Melinda Moraila, 19; and Juliette Fields, 14.

Tickets may be purchased at the dance center or at the box office.

New London tour: sights & suds

By HERB SHANNON
I.P-T Travel Editor

CATHEDRAL-LIKE HENEKEY'S AND NEWER SHERLOCK HOLMES PUBS EXUDE ATMOSPHERE

LONDON — Pomp, pageantry and pubs are what made Great Britain great, but not until this year has anybody thought of linking the tourist sights of the Empire's capital with their nearby nip and tuck attractions.

Maybe the problem was Britain's weird licensing laws, requiring the thirsty traveler to coordinate visits to public monuments with the opening hours of the public houses.

The diligent tourist could, by careful planning and fast footwork, find a pub operating somewhere in London every hour of the day except for a 45-minute period before dawn, but in the average neighborhood pub the drinking and eating lamp is lighted only from about noon to 2 p.m. and again from about 6 to 11 p.m.

THIS YEAR THE British Tourist Authority and the Egon Ronay Organization (which sounds like something spelled backwards, but actually is a reputable gourmet and hotel advisory service) have joined hands to organize combination pub and sightseeing tours, both in London and the countryside.

The joint effort, resulting in a book describing 11 London pub crawls and 32 different auto tours featuring famous old country inns throughout England, Wales and Scotland, is the travel industry's big winner in 1972. There is also one more auto tour, of Northern Ireland, but under present conditions, no one can take this as a serious suggestion. Better luck next year.

The book doesn't solve the basic problem of variable opening hours, but there are a sufficient number of interesting sights listed on the facing pages of the pub descriptions to keep the most lethargic tourist on the move from breakfast to lunch to dinner. The book also pinpoints the actual serving hours in the pubs for easier budgeting of time between meals.

The 608-page book, and the occasion of the British Overseas Airways Corp. recent inaugural of 747 jumbo jet service from Chicago to London brought a golden opportunity to revisit some memorable pubs discovered by accident or design on several previous visits.

THERE ARE MORE convenient and direct ways to get from Los Angeles to London than by way of Chicago, including nonstop flights, but the stopover en route gives the passenger a chance to stretch legs and results in less plane-weariness at the other end.

This is true even though this time the change of plane in Chicago added four hours to the total trip time. BOAC stresses the advantage of the break on their regular five-times weekly VC-10 flights from Los Angeles to London which includes a two-hour stopover in New York for breakfast. Passengers continuing on to London with the carrier also have the privilege of overnighting in New York if they wish.

THE FIRST revisitation in London was to a fixture of the Fleet Street area in high Holborn, called Henekey's. First-time visitors should be advised that the nearest underground (subway) station is Chancery Lane, midway between the pub and the new Daily Mirror building farther along the street. Other attractions in the area include Lincoln's Inn, a huge complex of legal offices and residences where Dickens worked as a solicitor's clerk, and the Public Records Office Museum, where the Domesday Book, Shakespeare's will, and a letter from George Washington to King George III are on display.

HENEKEY'S ITSELF is unbelievable. At first glance, and again at second, it is as though you are entering a cathedral. Beamed ceilings arch high overhead, with 1,000-gallon wine casks lining the wall above the bar. Catwalks where the wine attendants once walked above are still suspended from the ceiling.

Opposite the bar, a series of cubicles resembling confessionals make for intimate and secluded parties of four or less. Other artifacts preserved from former days include a triangular cast-iron stove or possibly free-standing fireplace, now used as a stand-up bar for snacks. Because Henekey's is in The City, London's central financial and legal district, it is recommended for weekday visitation only. The weekend population of The City consists of policemen and stray cats.

For lunch on Saturdays, the trip should be timed to leave Henekey's so as to reach The Salisbury, an ornate Edwardian pub in the busy theatrical district around St. Martin's Lane. Engraved, cut-glass mirrors everywhere multiply the gilt statuettes holding globe lamps against the red plush decor for the Gay Nineties effect to end them all. The traditional pub lunch snacks are available and good.

FOR SOMETHING more substantial, head for the Sherlock Holmes, an institution revered by the followers of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle since it was established in the shadow of Nelson's statue in Trafalgar Square a mere 10 years ago. Located in Northumberland Street just around the corner from the regal lions and fountains of Trafalgar, the pub is a living museum of supposedly genuine Holmes' artifacts.

Engraved glass windows facing the street depict the famed fictional detective, his faithful companion Dr. Watson, and the author of the books which started the legend. The downstairs bar is lined with small glass cases holding mementoes (actual and genuine, of course) of almost every case Holmes solved. There is the clue of the torn letter, the pen used to send false clues to Dr. Watson, even a terrifying, life-sized purple replica of the Hound of the Baskervilles.

UPSTAIRS, ADJACENT to a well-equipped restaurant, is a duplication of the fictional detective's flat at 221-B Baker Street, complete with pipe, magnifying glass and handcuffs on an oil-lamp lighted table. You really must believe after seeing this.

Hundreds more pubs are listed in the Ronay Guide, along with the sightseeing attractions which brought the pubs in the first place. But there is one in The City which is not listed, nor is it open to the casual visitor.

Yet it is open seven days a week during the regular lunch hour for the convenience of London's finest, the City Police of Snow Hill Station, who guard the judges and officials of the Old Bailey, the Central Criminal Courts, and the busy financial center during the week, and befriend stray cats on Sundays.

The pub is inside the station, in the canteen. And there's no regulation to prevent the Bobbies from bending an elbow during the standard opening hours.

The City is a civilized world of its own.

TRIP TIPS

Keep kids busy

By MARIE MATTSON

By the time you get the suitcases packed and the car loaded, you'll need a vacation. But with a back seat full of lively youngsters, will you have it? Consider ways to keep them entertained while driving — it can pay off in more pleasure for everyone.

Clip this list of games for the road. They require no advance preparation or equipment other than crayons and tablets — perhaps a pocket dictionary if your spelling is rusty. (Do not take pencils—they can become lethal weapons in the event of a sudden stop or accident.) Save the writing games for times when you need quiet—and then enforce a no-talking rule.

LICENSE PLATE COUNT. This is a game for one or several players. Start by finding a license plate that begins with number one, then a plate beginning with number two and so on up to 50, 100 or whatever goal is set. On narrow roads where oncoming cars are easy for all passengers to see, both directions of traffic can count; however, on a wide highway, restrict it to cars going only in your own direction.

LANDMARK SPOTTING. Mother and dad may want to join in this game. When you see a landmark some distance ahead, let everyone guess the number of miles and length of time it will take to reach the landmark. One parent keeps track of time and mileage to determine winner.

I SPY. Younger children especially enjoy this game. The player who is "it" sees something inside the car and gives a clue, such as, "I spy, with my eye, something gold." Other players take turns guessing.

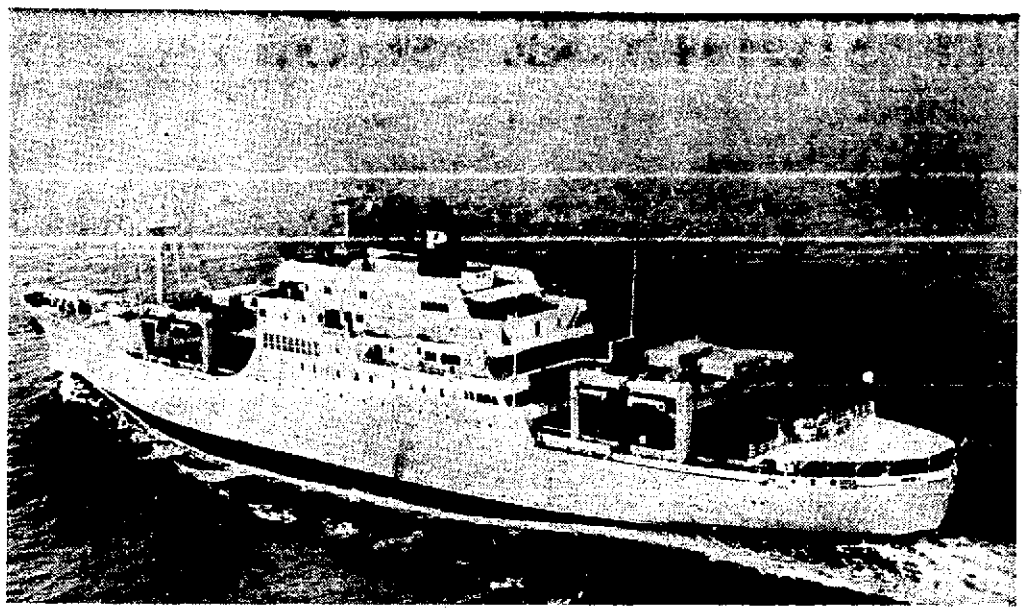

WHO AM I? One player pretends to be some individual — a friend or famous personality. Others must find out who he is in 20 questions that can be answered only "yes" or "no."

LICENSE PLATE SPELLING. This game is better for older children. The object is to make as many words as possible out of license plate letters, keeping them in original sequence. MNE, for instance, can spell MoNkEy, coMpoNEnt, deMoNstratE, etc.

GRAND MOTHER'S TRUNK. One player might start out, "I packed my grandmother's trunk and put in an apple." The next player would follow with, 'I packed my grandmother's trunk and put in an apple and a baseball," each player repeating the list and adding a new item in alphabetical order. When someone forgets, he is out until a new game starts. For variation, pack the trunk with items in numerical sequence, for instance: one orange, two turkeys, three trees, four frogs, etc.

TEAKETTLE. The child who is "it" thinks of some action—singing, cutting grass. By asking questions that can be answered "yes" or "no," others are to guess the action. "Do you teakettle alone?" "Do you have to pay to teakettle?" "Do you need special equipment to teakettle?"

ROUND ROBIN TALES. Each person gets to make up part of a story. Mother might be timekeeper, giving older children five minutes, younger ones two minutes. The first player starts off telling the story; when his time is up, the next child continues; mother and dad might join in, too.

REGULAR PASSENGER SERVICE between Los Angeles and South America will begin July 1. One of the three sister ships, the Santas Maria, Mariana and Mercedes,

South American cruises slated

A new American flag cruise service from the West Coast to the Caribbean and around South America has been announced, by Albert Wenzell, vice president of Prudential-Grace Lines.

The Santa Mariana, a 20,000-ton passenger-cargo-liner, will inaugurate the first 55-day "Leisure Cruise" on July 1 from Los Angeles, followed by the Santa Maria on July 25 and the Santa Mercedes on August 17.

The three sister ships, which will operate the only regularly scheduled passenger service from the West Coast of the United States to South America, will sail from Los Angeles every 24 days throughout the year.

The cruises will feature a daylight transit of the Panama Canal en route to historic Cartagena. Sailing eastward, the ships will call at Puerto Cabello, La Guaira (Port of Caracas), the Dutch island of Aruba and the Caribbean island of Trinidad.

Cruising southward along the east coast of South America, the modern leisure liners will visit Rio de Janeiro; Santos (Port of Sao Paulo) and Buenos Aires. Returning to the Pacific Coast via the Straits of Magellan, the ships will call at Valparaiso, port of Santiago; Callao, port of Lima; Guayaquil, Ecuador; and Buenaventura, Colombia, before returning to Los Angeles.

The Santa Mariana and her two sister passenger-cargo liners built in the United States, were expressly designed for South American cruises. They accommodate 125 passengers, offering the combined luxury of large cruise ships and the informality of a cargo vessel.

Each of the modern ships is fully air-conditioned and fin-stabilized for passenger comfort. Staterooms range from singles to delux doubles, all with private facilities and choice of tub or shower.

The "Leisure Liners," as they are called, provide passengers with a large outdoor tile swimming pool, current run motion pictures, lounges, game rooms and areas for deck sports.

The dining room which features American and Continental cuisine is located on the Promenade Deck with floor to ceiling windows, affording an unusual ocean view. Each vessel also carries a doctor and stewardess and offers the services of a fully equipped beauty salon.

In addition to the full 55-day cruises, Prudential-Grace Lines is offering a number of sea-air travel packages for vacationers with limited time.

For reservations or further information on the new Around South America cruise service, contact Prudential-Grace Lines' Pacific Division, One California St., San Francisco, CA 94106.

Le Metro

Don't leave Montreal before riding on the streamlined subway, Le Metro, which connects most of Montreal's downtown skyscrapers. Different architects designed its 26 stations. In fact, the 16 mile system has been called "the largest underground gallery in the hemisphere" because of the abstract mosaics and basketweave designs that decorate its ceramic walls. Besides being incredibly clean, the blue and white cars speed quietly along the tracks on rubber tires.

Cameras capture nature's splendor

Whether it's fishing, hunting, or hiking trip, an action-oriented camping vacation has attracted ever-growing numbers of people to the outdoors. And those who want to relive the fun and enjoyment of their outdoor experience consider packing a camera as important as a sleeping bag.

Memory is short. Camera toters know that they can recapture the beauty of unspoiled nature, the thrill of hiking to a mountain top, or the wonders of a child's first sight of woodland animals with pictures.

Too often though, the very same people forget that the most effective pictures are action shots. Once back home, the activity and excitement they most want to remember and share with friends from their pictures.

Why? They're still snapping those stiff, fixed-smile, stare-into-the-camera photos that make people groan inwardly when offered the family album.

Your pictures can be different. Put people into them! Get them moving and keep them that way. Nothing is more monotonous than viewing endless scenic views. Adding people in unposed situations will give your pictures meaning and perspective with lively personal involvement.

Successful action pictures are easy to take with modern aim-and-shoot cameras available to every budget.

Especially developed for a whole new generation of active vacationers, these cameras are perfect for people who want to take pictures with minimum effort and maximum results.

With camera in hand, only imagination limits the scope of the action pictures you take in the Great Outdoors.

Shots of the family climbing hills, riding horses, fishing, making camp, chopping wood or cooking are all natural action situations. Take pictures from several different angles to capture the full flavor of the scene. Closeups of facial reactions or hands working with equipment can add interesting detail.

SWIM AND SUN by day, dine and dance by night at Club Paradis at Jupiter, one of Romania's newest resorts on the Black Sea.

Zodiac resorts dot Romania's Riviera

For new adventure in sea-shore vacationing, Romania's Riviera on the Black Sea offers a wealth of attractions. Romania boasts of a 50-mile strip of dazzling sea, sun and sand with the most luxurious of hotel accommodations and a diverse choice of entertainment facilities.

Mamaia is probably the best known of the Romania sea resorts because its gleaming row of sleek, modern hotels strongly resembles the Miami Beach coastline. But Mamaia is but one among a number of different resort spots along the coast, each with a distinctive character and flavor of its own.

The newest and rapidly becoming the most popular stop for tourists is the recently opened string of "zodiac" resorts: Neptune, Venus and Jupiter. Accommodations range from the most futuristic of hotel architecture to intimate and picturesque villas accommodating one or two couples.

While the three resorts were built at approximately the same time, each sports a different atmosphere, and deliberately so. Neptune is the more quiet and intimate of the trio with gracious hotels, a gentle surf, sandy beaches — a perfect family resort. There are unique camping grounds with small cottages readily available for those who wish to vacation family style.

JUPITER and Venus cater to the vacation activists. Larger hotels, unusual camp sites, round the clock sports, amusements and entertainment, velvety beaches, superb restaurants. But with it all, the physical layout allows for privacy and relaxation for those who wish to bask in the best of both worlds.

For those looking for the college crowd, Constinesti is the spot to visit. The young people of Europe gravitate to this charming, informal resort with its student holiday village, comfortable villas on the sea, plus acres and acres of camping grounds dotted with gaily colored tents as befitting its youthful population.

While the days can be filled with sunning and swimming, the nights can be swinging along this entire coast. Nightclubs, casinos, musical theater, movies, amusement parks go full blast during the May through October season. There are dozens of restaurants offering cuisine ranging from native fare to international dishes. Even American-style bowling has its own emporium in Mamaia.

The prices throughout the area are another reason why over 400,000 foreign visitors flocked to the Black Sea shore of Romania last year. American plan accommodations at deluxe and first class hotels along the shore range from $9.50 to $15.50 per day in double occupancy. And vacation bargain hunters can do even better with the many charming small hotels and boarding houses readily available.

SINCE AIR travel is so remarkably inexpensive within Romania (only $9 for a round trip by jet between Bucharest and the Black Sea port of Constanza, as an example), many foreign visitors take one and two-day excursions to other parts of Romania while headquartering at the seaside. For the adventurous, there are the magnificent monasteries of Moldavia, the interesting Dacia, Greek and Roman remains in Dobrogea and the Olt Valley or the fascinating medieval cities of Brasov, Sigishoara and Cluj in historic Transylvania. Others may wish to spend an ecological holiday in the Danube Delta area in nearby Tulcea.

Car rental service is also burgeoning in Romania and costs are quite modest. Charges range from $6.50 per day for a compact up to $15 for the more luxurious Mercedes-Benz with package deals by the week. Modern roads connect all the principal areas and as a major oil producing nation, gasoline is available and most reasonable throughout Romania.

For complete information on the Black Sea area or the many other tourist attractions of Romania, write to the Romanian National Tourist Office, 500 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10036.

Airline lowers fares

American Airlines is offering a new lower fare for family mid-week travel on flights of at least 1,000 miles.

The revised fare calls for discounts of eight to 11 per cent below previous family fare plans.

Family groups of three or more are eligible for the lower fares which will be applicable June 27 through Sept. 14.

Under the new formula, only the family head will pay the normal coach fare. Spouse or accompanying children 12 to 21 will get a 35 per cent discount, and children two to 12 will get a 60 per cent discount.

The families must travel together on Tuesdays, Wednesdays or Thursdays, and return must be not less than seven days or more than 30 days later.

Camping best bet in Europe

By STAN DELAPLANE
Amboise, France

I drove through the warm, green valley of the Loire river — the scarlet poppies of France are blooming now — and took a look at the elegant camp grounds.

European camping is not American style. No man against Nature. No search for firewood. No sleeping on rocky ground. The French camp ground is a barbered, level lawn. French campers sleep on comfortable cots inside gay striped tents — many Americans think their equipment is better than ours.

They cook on a gas stove. Probably whipping up butter and shallots for a steak Diane. Most of the camps here had swimming pools. Laundries and bathrooms.

AMERICANS haven't gone in for camping in great numbers, but they're increasing. It is the cheapest way to do Europe. People who kept careful accounts tell me a couple can do it on $8 to $12 a day. For EVERYTHING — except the cost of a camper.

Rented VW campers — the most popular — run about $200 a week. For a couple of weeks that might be all right. But more than that it would be better to buy. Ship the camper home for resale. Resale on campers is excellent now. Hippie crowd wants them for living, traveling, staying loose.

There are also camper tours. Ten or so campers go on their own during the day. Rendezvous at camps (already reserved) that night. Lowest price: $499 for 21 days, round trip on PanAm from New York included.

Best source for info: Rajo Publications, Box 1014 Grass Valley, Calif. 95945. Arranges tours for Europe, Africa, Hawaii, Australia. Also handles independent camper rentals. Has GOOD books and brochures on overseas camping.

BEST book to read BEFORE you go: All About Camping in Europe, $3.50.

"We want to drive in southern Europe, staying at good, country hotels . . ."

Absolutely GREAT country inns belong to the Relais de Campagne (inns of the country) which acts as a control board on standards. They aren't cheap — about $30 a day WITHOUT meals is average.

Most have only ten to twenty-five rooms. Many starred by Michelin — a couple have three stars, the Nobel prize of the table. You get their brochure of 176 inns, services and prices and a color photo of each, by writing French Lines, 555 Fifth Avenue, New York City. After you map your trip, any travel agent can book it for you.

"We are past 60 and are afraid of 'jet lag' if we fly to Europe . . ."

Age doesn't seem to have much to do with it. The under-30s feel that time zone change. Sometimes more than someone older. Best I've found to combat it is break the trip with an overnight halfway.

Airport hotels have become quite elegant. Good service. Fine restaurants.

Rooms have been costing me about $22. International Hotel at Los Angeles airport, excellent. Airport hotel at Shannon good. Hilton Inn at Orly (Paris) one of the best. Top class Louisiane Room restaurant. (The bars murder you at $2.52 a drink! Bring a bottle for your room.)

Hotel rooms IN the airport building at Toronto were windowless cubicles. For emergency stop only. Mocambo at Nadi, Fiji (on the way to Australia) has good rooms. First-Class tropical bar. Mediocre dining room — but no more so than most food in Fiji. Hawaii is a good overnight enroute to Far East. But no point in staying at the airport with all the grand hotels at Waikiki.

Prepare for a BIG shakedown at ANY airport due to wave of skyjacks. French took me apart thoroughly before letting me on Air France at Orly. Shook out my flight bag. Had me unbutton and hold open jacket. Ran a steel loop over me, head to toe. (It buzzes when it senses metal.) United ran me through a scanning machine that does the same. All airlines running maximum check with sophisticated sensors.

"Can I carry a shotgun (in a case on an airplane down to Mexico?"

I don't know exact rules, but I think they'll make you check it. Anyway, you'd better tell them what you've got right NOW. Or every burglar alarm in the airport will go off automatically.

Seattleites celebrate Gold Rush anniversary

For one month this summer Seattleites will turn back the pages of history 75 years to the days when this community was a lusty young sawmill town literally carved out of a wilderness.

The occasion is the 75th anniversary of the Seattle-Alaska-Yukon Gold Rush which is being commemorated regionally by Alaska, British Columbia, the Yukon Territory and the State of Washington. Klondike Festival is the name of the two-year observance which is being celebrated in 1972 and '73.

It might seem strange that the Pacific Northwest's largest city would want to dwell in the past, but the days of 1897 have special significance for the Seattle-King County area. You see, Seattleites of today can find much in common with their forebearers of 75 years ago. Contemporary economic problems, which are currently the subject of an aggressive civic business reformation, pale alongside the depression which shrouded the late nineties here.

The news of the Alaska-Yukon gold strike ended the depression and signalled the start of an era of unprecedented prosperity. Gold-hungry prospectors from all parts of the globe descended on Seattle and the economy soared. Thus, it is not without reason that this community has chosen to salute the memorable days of 1897 and 98, and they will do it with gusto.

travel

SEATTLE'S observance is presently under way, but the peak of activities begins on Friday, June 30th and extends into August. The program includes a 10-day festival in Old Seattle entitled "Gold Rush '97." 1-10; a "Klondike Days" program in downtown Seattle, July 11-15; arrival of the replica of the Gold Ship "S.S. Portland," July 17; and an expanded Seafair celebration that starts with the ship arrival and lasts through August 6.

There will also be Klondike Festival activities in the Seattle Center, plus other events.

Historically, the significance of Klondike Festival this year revolves around the arrival of the ship. On July 17, 1897, the original Portland docked at the Seattle waterfront. Its passenger manifest listed 68 miners and a gold cargo in the vicinity of $700,000.

That added up to a "ton of gold" and the reports of the rich strike brought a subsequent deluge of starry-eyed men and women seeking equipment and passage north to the gold fields.

BECAUSE of its importance to Seattle the historical integrity of the reenactment of the ship arrival is a prime factor in the plans for the 1972 version of the "Portland" landing.

The ship chosen to "play" the S.S. Portland is a veteran steamer on local waters — the Virginia V. It is one of two passenger steam vessels still active on the nation's inland waters. The Virginia V bears a striking resemblance to the original ship and certain changes in the Virginia's super-structure are also planned to aid the likeness.

After several days of visiting other Puget Sound ports — all of which played important roles in the gold rush days — the "Portland" will leave Port Townsend, some 50 miles north of Seattle, and head "down Sound" on the morning of Monday, July 17. Aboard will be the "68 miners" plus officials from the participating regions, entertainers, and other personalities necessary to preserve the historical accuracy of the event.

About the half-way point in the cruise history will again come into play when the tug "Sea Lion," with a crew of news media aboard, intercepts the "Portland." That's the way it happened in 1897 when a Seattle Post-Intelligence reporter — Beriah Brown — brought the news back to Seattle ahead of the slow-moving Portland.

NO INFORMATION is available on the size of the original Sea Lion which was owned by Puget Sound Tug Boat Company, but the present day Sea Lion is a steel-hulled, 2800-horsepower modern tug currently used by the Crowley Red Stack Company in service between Miami and San Juan, P. C. It will be brought here to participate in the arrival reenactment.

When the "Portland" arrives in Seattle — about 12 noon PDT — the central waterfront will be waiting. Decorations, music, entertainment, citizens in apparel of that period, and a general atmosphere of gaiety will be the order of the day.

The "Portland" will be accompanied on its trip to Seattle by a huge flotilla of pleasure craft. Fireboats from Seattle Harbor will send fountains of water cascading into the air as an aquatic salute to the guest of honor. Overhead, an umbrella of U.S. Army helicopters will escort the vessel into port.

By comparison Seattle is one of America's youngest cities, but its history is no less significant to its development. If only for that reason Seattleites this summer plan to turn back the calendar in style.

Fun month in Canada

July will be a fun month in Canada's capital city of Ottawa.

The country celebrates its 105th birthday on July 1, and the party will be extended to four weeks of music, drama, sports, recreation and displays.

The festivals get underway on June 30 with a variety show and fireworks display on historic Parliament Hill in downtown Ottawa.

RICHARD THOMAS

TV's country boy from the big city

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

Just imagine that you are 21 years old, that you've had wide experience as an actor on the stage, in movies and on TV since you were 6, and that you have the key role in a new series that will open this fall on the CBS Television Network.

You'd be sitting on top of the world, right?

Well, Richard Thomas is just such a person. He turned 21 on June 13 and he's the young star of Lorimar Productions' new hour-long series, "The Waltons," which will be seen on Channel 2 on Thursdays at 8 p.m. starting in September.

"The Waltons" series grew out of a two-hour special movie, "The Homecoming: A Christmas Story," which was shown on CBS last December. The film, which starred Patricia Neal as the mother of a rural family in the early 1930s Depression era and young Thomas as John-Boy Walton, eldest of the seven Walton children, at 17, received so much critical acclaim that CBS program executives asked Lee Rich, executive producer, to start production on a series.

Richard will have the same role in the series as he had in "The Homecoming," and the other six children are the same, too. Miss Neal will be missing—and the actress to fill her place as the mother had not been chosen at the time I interviewed young Thomas. Ralph Waite will play the father, Will Geer the grandfather and Ellen Corby the grandmother in "The Waltons," based on the works of author Earl Hamner. Shooting starts Monday in Los Padres National Forest.

"How does it feel to be 21 and to be starring in a TV series?" I asked the slender young man as we dined at lunch on corbina at Musso & Franks Grill in Hollywood. "How does it feel to be sitting on top of the world?"

"I don't want to sound impertinent, but there have been so many things happening I'm not sure exactly how it feels," he replied. "It's great to be 21 (it was the day after his birthday)—now I can do anything I please. But I have a mixture of feelings. There is, for instance, the feeling of utter terror—of not being able to cut it. But in general I feel very good. I feel there is a lot to be done in a short time."

Richard is an unusually articulate young man—and seemingly quite sophisticated for a person of 21. Not exactly the type of young man you might expect to find on a farm in the Appalachians of the 1930s.

It turns out that he is indeed a big city boy—born in New York City, on the upper west side of Manhattan. His parents, Richard Thomas and Barbara Fallis, operate the New York School of Ballet and are both former ballet stars.

Young Richard says he didn't start studying ballet himself until he was 15—"but now I study six days a week when I go back to New York." He adds: "Most actors don't know how to use their body. But body economy is very important in acting, and nothing teaches you this as well as ballet. The least little movement can be very significant. Brando is one of the few actors who knows how to use his body. With him, the curve of his back is important."

Richard has a younger sister, Bronwyn, 12, and an older brother, Robert, 28. His sister, he says, is "a brilliant ballet student — she has unbelievable talent." His brother has never been a performer of any kind. "He was training horses on a stud farm, the last I heard. He used to breed dogs—in fact, our whole family does. I have three dogs with me in my apartment in Hollywood, and my father's bringing me another one soon."

A product of private schools of New York City, Richard writes poetry, collects art and has studied Chinese at Columbia University. No, not exactly a typical farmboy. But he is first of all an actor, and I have no doubt he is convincing in the role of John-Boy Walton.

And he does have links to the section of the country in which "The Waltons" is set.

"My father is from Kentucky and I have millions of relatives in Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia—in all of middle Appalachia," he pointed out. "I've visited there a lot and it's no problem for me to do the accent—I've heard it all my life.

"My father was born in Paintsville, Ky., and was raised between there and Muddy Branch. The latter town no longer exists—it was a mining place. My father is of Welsh descent and he is the first of the men in the family never to go into the mines.

"My grandfather has a farm in eastern Kentucky, and I've been there many times. He was once a mine foreman and later a judge."

How, I wondered, did his father get into ballet?

"One day when he was a young boy the circus came to town, and he became very excited about getting into show business," Richard replied. "It's a little bit like one of the episodes in our series. The carnival comes to town and John-Boy has wanderlust. He's a sensitive boy and wants to become a writer."

Richard's mother was born in Denver, "but then the family moved to London right after she was born. She was a soloist with the Royal Ballet at 16." His mother came back to America during the London Blitz of World War II.

"Both my mother and father danced with the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, based in New York, and with Ballet Theater and the New York City Ballet Company. Soon after I was born they went to Cuba for three years. Spanish was my first language."

Richard got his start on the stage at age 6. "It was in summer stock in New York state with my father in 'Damn Yankees.' I was one of three boys who sang 'Heart.' A little later I had a small speaking part in 'Anything Goes.'"

He was still just 6 when he began a year's run on Broadway in "Sunrise at Campobello." He played young John Roosevelt. Ralph Bellamy was FDR.

Since then, Richard says, he has worked "steadily through the years" as an actor.

He says he has had no formal lessons in drama, "but it was natural for me to go on the stage. I had been learning the discipline of the theater since I was born. And the discipline of the theater is the best training. There's nothing like learning by being on the stage."

After he just turned 8, Richard appeared in a "Hallmark Hall of Fame" TV show called "A Christmas Tree," and he later appeared in some other Hallmark programs. At 9 he performed in "A Member of the Wedding" on stage.

At 11 he appeared on Broadway again in the Actors' Studio revival of Eugene O'Neill's "Strange Interlude," and he later was seen on Broadway in Edward Albee's "Everything in the Garden" and "The Playroom."

He did Shakespeare both at Stratford, Conn., at age 13 and with the New York Shakespeare Festival at age 15. Both times he had roles in "Richard III."

Richard's TV experience, prior to "The Homecoming" and in addition to a few Hallmark shows, included roles in a number of programs, such as "Night Gallery," "The Defenders," "Great Ghost Tales," "1-2-3-Go!," "Bracken's World," "The FBI" and "Marcus Welby, M.D."

RICHARD THOMAS . . . John-Boy in "The Waltons"

The remarkable young man has been in six movies. His first, at age 16, was "Winning," with Paul Newman, Joanne Woodward and Robert Wagner. At 17, he played in "Last Summer" with Catherine Burns. His next film, at 19, was "Cactus in the Snow," — "I think it has been released in the South and Midwest but not out here yet." Then came "The Todd Killings," which he terms "a terrible film."

In 1970 he appeared in Hal Wallis' "Red Sky a Morning," with Catherine Burns, Desi Arnaz Jr., Claire Bloom and Richard Crenna. And his latest movie, which is due to be released this summer, is "You'll Like My Mother," with Patty Duke, Rosemary Murphy and Star Barbara Allen ("be sure to mention her, because she's my best girl friend.")

Richard says the last movie, completed in March, is Country boy from the big city

his favorite. "It's a Gothic film—terrifying, but with no violence. It's a classic horror story. I'm the villain. I always seem to be cast either as a nice guy or as homicidal. I can remember I played a kidnaper when I was 14 on Broadway. I also had kidnaper roles in 'Bracken's World' and 'The FBI.'"

Asked to name his favorite actors, the 21-year-old Thomas came up with the following names:

Marlon Brando—"my favorite actor," "a master of screen techniques."

Max von Sydow of Sweden—"a consummate actor."

Paul Scofield and Ralph Richardson—"my favorite British actors."

Spencer Tracy and Charles Laughton—"gods," "men like that will never come our way again."

Claude Rains—"an excellent character actor."

Charles Chaplin—"his earlier work."

Jean Louis Barrault of France—"very good."

Paul Newman—"A wonderful actor. "I don't think he has been given the opportunity to do what he is capable of doing"

Robert Duvall—"I'll watch anything he does."

Young Thomas says he doesn't watch a lot of TV, but he does like to watch movies on TV. For the last four years, he has divided his time between Hollywood and New York, "And I don't even have a TV set in my New York apartment — it would just get stolen. I had one once and it got stolen." He says he goes to one or two movies a week, and always has been interested in movies.

"A television series is not really my cup of tea," he said. "I wouldn't have accepted a part in most TV series, but I was impressed by the scripts I've seen for 'The Waltons.' Really, I envy myself. The cliches of television are monumental, but our series is something different. It's the first really new dramatic series on TV since 'The Defenders.' You can see a detective series or a western or a variety show any night of the week, but if you miss us you've missed it for the week."

The young star continued: "I think the American public can have a great romance with this series. The shows are applicable to everyone's life— everyone has had a childhood, a home life. We have everyone from a 6-year-old child to a grandfather in the same home. And it's not all lovey-dovey.

"Mine is the pivotal role, a catalytic role, a lovely, lovely role.

"The series is set in the depression—there's such a wealth of tensions. There are so many problems. And it's set in a primitive America.

"It was a very exciting period. There was an enormous political awakening in the 1930s. The series harks back to a time when people lived off the land—beautifully.

"This series is going to attract so many younger people. Our current move toward ecology will be mirrored faithfully. There was a love of the land then—the people didn't pollute.

"And there are such marvelous characters—an old reprobate, a storekeeper who's a little crooked, a black preacher and his congregation, two spinster lady bootleggers.

"There's a tradition in the United States for high morality—and yet also a sense of the ribald. Our series reflects the robust quality of American life. It's not anemic."

What are Richard's main goals in life after "The Waltons"?

"Hopefully I'll be with the series for two, three, four or five years. Then perhaps I can go back to the stage as a leading man, not as a juvenile. The series will give me the necessary exposure. I hope to play different types of roles. I want always to defy classification.

"I suppose my main goals are to play 'Richard III' —by the time I'm 25—and to play 'King Lear' when I'm about 40 or 50. No one should play Lear when he's younger than that.

"I want to become an excellent actor, and I also want to write. I imagine I also will want to produce someday."

An extraordinary young man, Richard Thomas.

And sitting on top of the world.

A PLANE CARRYING 2,000 pounds of marijuana crashed in a remote desert region, and it points up the fact that air smuggling is the major problem in coping with the flow of illicit drugs between Mexico and the United States. CBS Reports examines the problem in "The Mexican Connections" on Channel 2 at 7:30 p.m. Sunday.

A look at the Mafia in the United States

"An Essay on the Mafia," a look at the cultural and sociological roots of the so-called "Secret Society" of Italian - Americans that has once again been thrust into the public awareness by a spate of gangland murders, will be broadcast as a CBS News special at 8:30 tonight on the CBS Television Network (Channel 2).

With two of the world's leading chroniclers of the Mafia, Luigi Barzini and Nicholas Pileggi, as reporters, the broadcast will examine what is at the heart of what Pileggi describes as "the apparent end of the Italian Mafia." Time began running out, says Pileggi, slightly less than one year ago on the day when reputed Mafia chief Joseph Colombo was shot and seriously wounded at an Italian-American Unity Day rally in New York's Columbus Circle. Since then, there have been 13 other shootings that may be connected to the attempted murder of Colombo.

Law enforcement officials claim that the active strength of the Mafia is about 5,000 people, which as Pileggi says amounts to much less than one per cent of the Italian-American people. "But small as the percentage is, recently developments have left the Italian - American community in a state of shock," says Pileggi, "because the 99 plus per cent feel — and properly so — that the rest of America looks on all of them as somehow stigmatized by the Mafia."

Pileggi and Barzini and producer Perry Wolff spent nearly a year on this investigation of the Mafia which, as Wolff says, "will name names, show places and in nonfictional terms demonstrate the state of the 'honorable society of respected men.'"

Tracing the development of the Mafia from its origins on the Island of Sicily to the time when Mafia is a household word, Barzini and Pileggi will attempt to show how "families" can wind up in a gang war.

"The Mafia is fighting with itself," says Pileggi. "Americans like to think that the Mafia is like an American corporation, with a president and vice presidents and stockholders, but it isn't that at all. It's a group of loosely knit families with unwritten treaties between the families. Sometimes the treaties get broken."

Pileggi, a veteran of 16 years with the Associated Press and now a reporter for New York magazine, is one of America's leading reporters on crime, the Mafia and the Italian-American community. Barzini is the author of several best-selling books including "The Italians" and "From Caesar to the Mafia," and was a member of the Italian Parliament's Committee on the Mafia.

"An Essay on the Mafia" was written by Perry Wolff and directed by Howard Stringer.

EFREM ZIMBALIST JR. (center) and William Reynolds arrest underworld "fence," played by Hank Brandt (right), as they search for a million dollars worth of platinum in "The Buyer" episode of "The FBI." It's on Channel 7 Sunday at 8 p.m.

INSIDE THE TUBE

Film editor in fight for fewer reruns

By BILL MAHAN

A long-time film editor friend of mine named Bernie Balmuth has stuck his neck out and is one of the few film editors I know who is devoting his time, energy and money to help all employes in the television business. But, more importantly, he is helping you, the viewer, even more.

STOP stands for Save Television Original Programming and a suggested resolution has already been sent to the FCC. Some of the interesting things that STOP says are that television provides the major entertainment for the majority of the American public and that that public is being subjected to far too many prime-time reruns of television shows. Since the airwaves that television comes through are owned by the public, why is this public being subjected to more reruns than original programming?

About 12 years ago there was a summer rerun season of approximately three months, which proved more than sufficient in providing the public with a second opportunity to view the best of the year's programming. Today we have a tedious rerun season extending from March to September, in addition to an alarming increase of these repeats during what little is left of the original programming season.

The public airwaves are licensed to the broadcasters with their pledge that "more and more people will be better served," yet statistics show enormous increasing profits for the broadcasters consistent with increasing reruns at the expense of decreasing original programming.

It's interesting to note that personnel in the television world work sometimes less than six months a year. The rest of the time they're on unemployment and even welfare. This situation is directly attributable to the unrealistic amount of television reruns. It is something that can, and must, be corrected.

The petition asks that, "Reruns of any type of program in prime time on the three major network stations be restricted to a maximum of 25 per cent of the total allotted prime-time hours during a specified television year."

There is something that you can personally do to help this situation. Write a letter to the FCC stating that you support the STOP petition. State how you feel about pollution of the public airwaves with excessive reruns. Write to the advertisers and threaten to stop buying the products advertised if they don't stop showing reruns. Then do it. It's amazing what can, and will, happen once advertisers aren't showing the kind of profits they're used to.

Remember, it's you in the state of California who are paying higher taxes to support people out of work. And it's you all over the nation who are being bombarded with tired film that has been seen once, twice or God knows how many times before.

Also, it's you, and only you, who can get things back into proper perspective.

RIP TORN PLAYS the evil Spanish colonel who holds the lives of his lieutenant, Montserrat (right) and the lives of several innocent citizens in his hands in Lillian Hellman's powerful drama, "Montserrat," to be repeated Monday at 8 p.m. on Channel 28.

'Imagination' at tar pits

Mention Los Angeles' famed La Brea Tar Pits and people usually laugh. Actually, the Pits, designated a natural history landmark by the National Park Service, are no laughing matter. To scientists, they provide one of the world's most valuable sources of information and knowledge of life during the Ice Age.

But on "Imagination: Father of Invention," the new one-hour special hosted by Arte Johnson, to be seen Thursday at 7:30 p.m. over Channel 2, the Tar Pits do indeed provide the background for laughs galore.

One of the highlight musical and comedy numbers in the special is "the first invention convention." In it, Johnson, his special guest star Frank Gorshin, comedians Tom Patchett and Jay Tarses, and The Establishment, all appropriately costumed, play cavemen and cavewomen delegates to the world's first conclave of inventors.

Others in the cast include Carol Lawrence, Tom Smothers, Norm Crosby, Rosey Grier and Soupy Sales.

The Pits, despite being just a few yards north of highly civilized Wilshire Boulevard, provided executive producer-director Marty Pasetta the ideal location for the caveman number. In addition to the bubbling Pits, the background includes fiberglas reproductions of prehistoric animals which lived in the area thousands of years ago, and whose fossils were found in the Pits.

The Pits were first discovered at Rancho La Brea by Caspar de Portola, Spanish explorer, in 1769. They were then described as "springs of pitch," which, scientists now know, were mistaken by animals for water. Once entangled in the liquid asphalt, animals, as well as pollen and other forms of life, were trapped. Perversely, the asphalt which killed them also preserved them, accounting for successful retrieval of over a million specimens since digs began in 1913.

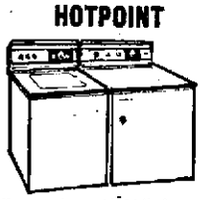

In 1914, workmen uncovered the skull and partial skeleton of a human. Scientists at the Los Angeles County Museum of Natural History, which is responsible for the Pits, using a new dating process, determined that the skeleton is 9,000 years old, one of the oldest ever found in the Western Hemisphere. It was identified as that of an Indian woman, between 25 and 30 years old.

ARTE JOHNSON plays the world's first inventor, a caveman, in "Imagination: Father of Invention" on Channel 2 Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

TV NOTEBOOK

CBS NEWS correspondent Dan Rather has many memories of the hours he has spent covering national political conventions, but there are two that are particularly vivid. And there's little doubt why — because the impact was physical as well as mental.

The best publicized, of course, was the incident on the floor of the 1968 Democratic National Convention in Chicago, when Rather was punched in the stomach by a security guard. The result was more bruised feelings than a bruised stomach. Rather noted that the guard "put me on the deck — I didn't do very well."

The other incident came close to resulting in real bruises at the Republican National Convention in San Francisco in 1964.

"The convention had ended one evening," Rather recalls, "but we were still on the air. They had turnstiles, and someone said on the headset, 'Get to turnstile X, some demonstrators are trying to get in.'

"It was the first convention that I worked as a floor reporter, and I was very eager and determined. I went there and got the microphone and took it out to where the demonstration was taking place. I stuck my hand through the turnstile to get a microphone close to the demonstrators.

"Then a policeman slammed that turnstile on my arm, and I started screaming at him, 'Listen, you've got to get that turnstile open for just a second.'

"Eventually he said, 'Why?'

"And I said, 'Because you are about to break my arm.' "

Rather, who is regularly assigned as CBS News White House correspondent, will be back for more again this year as a floor reporter for CBS News' coverage of the Democratic and Republican national conventions.

Joining Rather on the "floor" will be correspondents Roger Mudd, Mike Wallace, John Hart and Morton Dean. Correspondent Walter Cronkite will anchor CBS News' convention coverage, joined by national correspondent Eric Sevareid and Theodore H. White, a long-time political consultant to CBS News, for analysis.

CBS News will broadcast live gavel-to-gavel coverage of both the Democratic National Convention, beginning Monday, July 10, and the Republican National Convention beginning Monday, Aug. 21.

Robert Wussler is executive producer of CBS News' Campaign '72 coverage. Bill Leonard, CBS News senior vice president in charge.

BARBARA ANDERSON in her first role since leaving the "Ironside" series, has been signed to portray a dissolute woman out on parole who agrees to help Peter Graves and the Impossible Missions Force break up an illegal gambling operation in an episode of "Mission: Impossible," to be seen later this year on the CBS Television Network. Paul Krasny is directing for producer Barry Crane from a script by Sam Roeca and James L. Henderson.

The BIBLE Says

Question: Does every person have a right to his own belief?

It is often stated that this is so, but what does the Bible say? If the Bible teaches this, then it is so; if it does not, it is then wrong. We should remember that a Christian has the attitude of self-surrender and submission to God's will, for this was the attitude of Jesus (John 8:29). We must not be motivated in life or in religious matters by wanting to please ourselves; rather we should want only to be pleasing to God (2 Cor. 10:18). And the only way we can know what pleases God is by what is revealed in the Bible.

Does every person have a right to his own belief?

(1) Cain did not. (Read Gen. 4:3-5.) Cain did not follow God's instructions, and worshipped by opinion, by his own idea (Heb. 11:4). God refused his worship.

(2) Naaman did not. (Read 2 Kings 5:1-14.) Naaman wanted to follow his own ideas instead of the instructions of the prophet of God, but if he had done so he could not have been healed of his leprosy. Naaman, in order to be cleansed, had to submit to God's Demands to dip in the river Jordan as told.

(3) Paul did not. (Read Acts 26:9-10.) Paul thought that he had the right to be a Pharisee, oppose Christ, and fight Christianity, and all this he did with a good conscience (Acts 23:1.) But this did not make it right.

No, every person does not have a right to his own belief. Jesus Christ has all authority (Matt. 28:18) and we must believe and obey Him in order to be saved (Heb. 5:9). If every person has a right to his own belief, then man becomes his own standard and his own savior — and the will of God is ruled out and cast aside. Those who pride themselves in being "tolerant" about all religious beliefs simply bury their heads in the sand and refuse to take the Bible as the standard of what is right and what is wrong.

Carol Lawrence, Rosey Grier, Soupy Sales and the establishment also are featured.

HELEN HAYES (28), 8:30 p.m. — In an "NET Playhouse" reprise, Miss Hayes looks back at her 65 years on the American stage by reenacting some of her most famous roles— from Queen Victoria to Harriet Beecher Stowe — reveiwing changes in contemporary theatre, and reminiscing with such old friends as Marc Connelly, George Abbott and Maureen Stapleton.

CRITICS' CORNER

Any television series with a long title such as "The Jerry Reed When You're Hot You're Hot Show" immediately gives the veteran viewer misgivings. Jerry Reed, who's he? CBS must have been nervous to tag the show with his hit record.

The network, replacing the canceled "Glen Campbell Show" with a summer variety hour, seems to have found a reasonably exact facsimile of Glen Campbell. Reed sounds Nasvhville, looks Jack Armstrong-American and talks humbly. At the same time he seems to be an attractive country singer who has been bushwacked by a roving band of Hollywood variety show writers. He seems to have been too polite or ambitious to say he'd rather go along with his own thing.

It was not a bad show Tuesday night, the premiere of the series, but it did seem to be phony, very Hollywood and carefully designed to hold a little something for everybody. As often happens to formula-based plans, it may have irked more often than it enchanted.

Reed, who seemed at ease when he was singing worked like a stevedore on his weak comedy lines, faked breaking up and otherwise generally looked like a good country singer gone Hollywood.

Guest star Arte Johnson brought along his entire cast of "Laugh-In" characters, from Tyrone to the German soldier, almost any one of whom is overdue for Social Security.

There were also a couple of numbers by the wholesome Lennon Sitsers, and the usual scattering of quick appearances by familiar TV faces.

Reed may be a comparatively fresh TV face, but he was stuck with material as old as Joe Miller and as tired as Stepin Fetchit.

NBC'S TUESDAY night special on the works of Leonardo da Vinci may have beaten CBS's five-part dramatization of the life of the painter to the screens by a couple of months, but it hardly seemed worth it.

It was shot as an education film. And it was educational. It showed endless examples of the 15th century artist's work, to illustrate an elegantly phrased lecture by Sir John Gielgud. It was all very classy and dull.

The rather pedestrian photography focused on Leonardo's paintings, sketches and notebooks, with the usual closeups.

—Cynthia Lowry, AP

"The Perpetual People Puzzle," an hour special shown on ABC-TV Monday night and offering vignettes on the human condition, was described in advance like this by its executive producer:

"Our show is a celebration of the irrepressible, that indomitable portion of the human spirit which triumphs over rainy days, paper work and the wage-price freeze."

Alas — if only the hour had included one more major triumph: over its script-writers. The human spirit, depicted in forms ranging from music to comedy to documentary to animation, was willing, but the all-important words were weak, undermining a project difficult enough to begin with.

As a result, such performers as Lee Grant, Jack Cassidy and Gwen Verdon, as well as sports commentator Howard Cosell, were left in rather difficult straits, despite going all out as individuals.

The executive producer quoted above is Al Perlmutter, formerly associated with two of noncommercial television's well-known series, "The Great American Dream Machine" and "Black Journal." These credits undoubtedly helped him get the stars for Monday night's exercise, which also included James Earl Jones and singer Richie Havens.

You can, of course, do just about anything in television if the writing is there. Writers are more important to video than network vice presidents, or even Howard Cosell.

But since the writing wasn't there, the huge and essentially vague-sounding subject of the human condition never did seem to register with any particular point, despite Perlmutter's noble-sounding goals.

What can one say about the running gag in which Cosell narrated the race of three commuters to their jobs? What can one say about Miss Grant's Comedic diatribe on women's liberation (a heavy-handed writing job)? What can one say about comedian Robert Klein's monologues on tension and self-image? Or the sketch starring Cassidy in a tired spoof of commercial television situation comedies (with some political barbs thrown in)?

If you saw the show, you probably don't know what to say either. It was a perpetual puzzle.

—Rick Du Brow, UP

DARK HORSE
by Fletcher Knebel

Co-author of Seven Days in May and Convention, his books include Night of Camp David, The Zinzin Road, Trespass and Vanished. Edward Nicholas Quinn, an obscure New Jersey highway official, had suddenly become a Presidential candidate. Not a serious contender, of course. He was the compromise choice. With only three weeks left before the election, no one considered him more than an inoffensive figurehead. But Eddie Quinn was nobody's figurehead. If he couldn't win, he could at least shake things up. $7.95

THE COVER

Congratulations, Kathy Versteeg! The judges' unanimous choice to be our cover girl, Kathy was one of six finalists photographed over a three-day period. The photographer used outdoor background and lighting conditions much the same as possible for each "cover shot" so the setting would not influence their selection. Photo by Roger Coar.

Wells Report

Following the Political Polesters

It was almost midnight when I parked in the quiet street. The house was dark, and only the other cars parked outside gave evidence that the residents were not all asleep. Mindful of the neighbors, I closed my car door softly, moved to the house and rang the bell. The muffled chimes sounded almost strident in the sleeping street.

Inside, behind the drawn drapes the house was a blaze of light. Young men in work clothes and young women in slacks and bulky sweaters sipped coffee and waited. At a dining table, a young man in jeans and a black sweater that matched his disheveled black hair studied a map with another man.

The entire scene had a tenseness and a faint air of illegal adventure about it like a guerrilla command post.

"OK," the black-haired man whose name was Al said, "you take the north-south streets and we'll take the east-west."

He put the map down and came over to me. "Glad you could come," he said.

This was a sniping party, a form of political graffiti. Now the people in the room were counting out posters — "quarter-cards" in the technical jargon of politicians and printers — and issuing staple guns and small sledges for driving stakes.

"Why don't you drive and I'll go with you," Al said. "We'll start with Warner as far east as the Santa Ana River, and then go north."

We went out into the Orange County night. Al piled staked posters in the back seat, then took his place beside me with quarter-cards and staple gun close to hand.

"The later you start on a sniping job, the better," Al said. "Hopefully everybody else will have been out already. If you start out too early, your opponents' crews just come along behind you, tear down your cards and put up their own."

We drove east through Fountain Valley looking for likely spots. On a vacant lot at an intersection, candidates signs bloomed like sunflowers above the weeds. I pulled over and Al jumped out with his sledge and pounded in a couple of staked signs for our candidate. Then he stapled quarter cards to the legs of the other candidates' signs. We started out again.

We went through a residential area. On a concrete lamp post was a large poster for a supervisorial candidate.

"A half-sheet," Al said, "Pasted up, that makes it hard to take down."

On the wooden telephone poles across from the Mile-Square Golf course, a whole line of quarter-cards suddenly appear in our headlights. Al leaned forward to read the printing.

"Republican Central Committee?" he said incredulously. "Now they're quarter-carding for election to the Republican Central Committee?"

We reached the river, turned around and started back the other side of the street, stopping at the vacant lots. I asked Al if all sniping was done by volunteers.

"Naw," he said. "There are outfits that do it commercially. You see those paste-up sheets and those big signs on two stakes in the vacant lots. Those are probably done commercially. Guys with trucks and post-hole diggers and stuff."

We worked our way north, crisscrossing the area on the east-west streets. On one street, quarter-cards for a congressional candidate had been tacked on wooden telephone poles high above the roadway.

"Putting posters on telephone poles is illegal," Al said, "but everybody does it. Some guys try pasting them on freeway overpasses because you get really good exposure there, but the Highway Patrol keeps a pretty sharp eye out for that. You see how high the quarter-cards on those poles are. They came along in a truck, maybe with a stepladder and hung them high like that so they couldn't easily be taken down."

I asked Al if highway posters were really that important to a winning campaign.

"I don't know," he said, "probably not. I doubt if they get many votes, but it helps the morale of your campaign workers to see the candidate's name around the district. If the candidate hasn't much money, it's about the only way he has to publicize himself. And the kids like to go sniping. They think it's the most fun job in the whole campaign."

In Westminster a police car followed us for a few blocks, but since we were avoiding utility poles and sticking to vacant lots already well signed, they finally got bored and turned off.

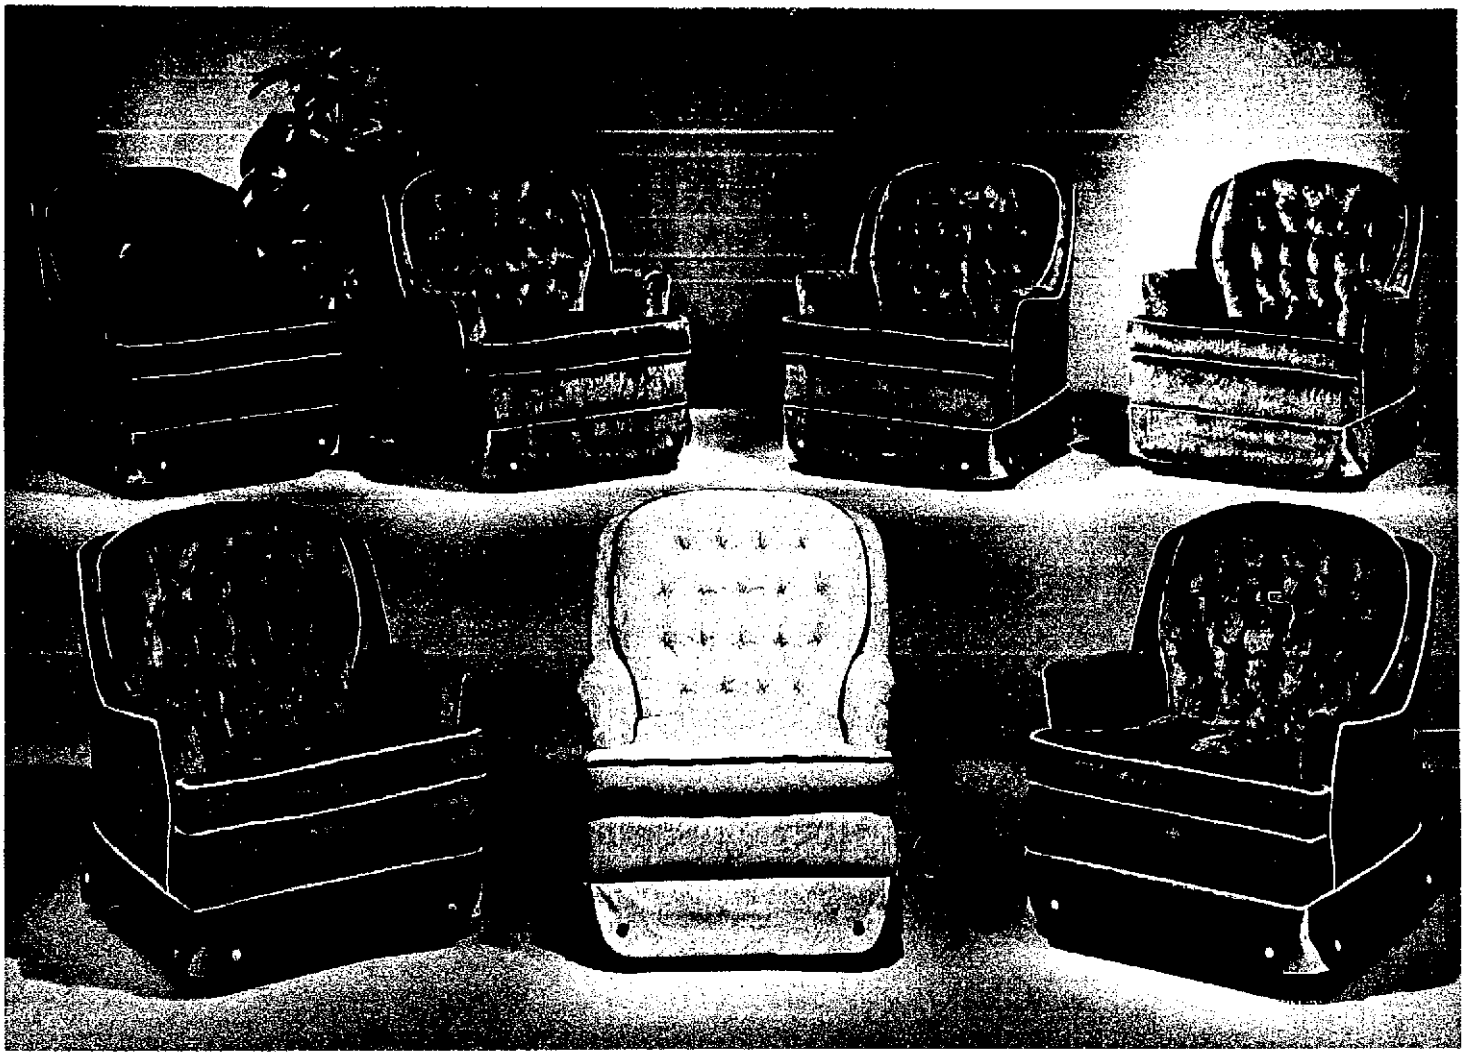

We began to run into the quarter-cards of one of our candidate's opponents. I noted it gave Al a great deal of satisfacton to tear them down.

"Ordinarily I say live and let live," he told me, "but this guy's crews have been tearing our signs down all over the district, so we go after his."

So it went into the early morning hours until we finally ran out of staples. I don't know if sniping helps a candidate, but it sure gives you a knowledge of all the vacant lots in your district. □

Glad you asked that!

By H GARDNER

Q: About all those so-called "massage parlors" openly operating in Manhattan — I read you can now get the "works" and charge it to Medicare. Since I'm 65 and rarin' to go — please tell me if this is true? — J.L.B., Brooklyn.

A: Sorry. You can't enjoy it on Medicare or even Blue Cross. But you can charge it on your Diners Club or American Express credit card.

Q: How much have the Paris peace talks cost the American taxpayers — Christine Coyle, Seattle, Wash.

A: $1,360,060 — for the first 47 months of negotiations. This includes per-diem, lodging and transportation expenses of delegations' members and staff. Also operating expenses such as overtime pay for secretaries and office supplies. It does NOT include the salaries of the 22 State Dept. employes on the delegation or staff. Nor costs for some indirect services rendered by the American Embassy in Paris. The salaries of our four diplomats taking part in the talks vary from $8,000 to $36,000. The pay of 18 supporting staff members is comparable to that of Civil Service and private industry. The Defense Department and the USIA are also incurring extra expenses in connection with the peace talks — albeit considerably less than the State Department.

Q: Last year, Mae West admitted to a torrid affair with a young boxer in Chicago. Can you name him? — J.J.L., Albany, Calif.

A: Not until I learn to box better than he can!

Q: Is it true that Michael Caine now prefers black women to white? — Mrs. Nicholas McC., Cincinnati.

A: "I'm fairly color blind," concedes Caine. "I've been out with blond ladies, dark ladies, medium ones, ladies with brown eyes, blue eyes, eyes that go up, that go down. Shakira (Baksh — his latest) is a Muslim and East Indian by ancestry. My girl friend before her was half-Spanish and half-Chinese. And then there was Bianca," Mike muses, "a Nicaraguan now Mrs. Mick Jagger ..."

Q: How come we don't hear of Martha Mitchell talking so much any more? — R. Peskay, Scottsdale, Ariz.

A: She's still talking. But for a fee — as one of the most sought-after personalities on the lecture circuit.

Q: I once knew Flip Wilson's ex-wife whom everyone called Peaches. Can you tell me where she is today and what, if anything, she's doing? — Louis A., Miami.

A: Peaches (nee Lovenia Patricia Dean) now works as a cocktail waitress in the Paradise Island Casino, adjacent to the hotel in which Howard Hughes made the ninth floor his "hideaway" — the Brittania Beach Hotel. Incidentally the ex-Mrs. Wilson is the sister of Sweet Richard, of the sensationally sensuous nightclub limbo dance act, Sweet Richard and Princess Kitty.

Q: I've heard that in all of his movies Rock Hudson favors working with actresses who are as tall as he is. Is this true? — Priscilla L., Pittsburgh.

A: No. In short, it's a tall story. Because Rock is 6-feet-4, and I can't think, offhand, of any well-known beauty who hits that height. Typical of the actresses cast to work with Hudson is Barbara Leigh, whom you saw in "Pretty Maids All in a Row." Barefoot, Barbara hardly comes up to his shoulder.

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That," care of Southland Sunday, P.O. Box 11748, Chicago, Ill. 60611. He will answer as many questions as he can in his column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible. □

rustic 'buy'way on the beach

Tucked away in a tiny pocket of Newport Beach is an area to intrigue the adventurous walker, browser and shopper. Sprinkled like gay poppies in a field of weeds, small shops and businesses beckon visitors who delight in the unexpected and are attuned to originality, atmosphere and character.

Cannery Village, as it is known, is no sleek shopping center, nor has it sprung anew from level acreage. Rather, shops and businesses have renovated dilapidated existing buildings without destroying the original charm. The rejuvenation process continues today as more shopkeepers are lured by the smalltown pace.

It has been likened to the San Francisco waterfront area as it used to be, or like Carmel with its picturesque shops, narrow streets and cracked sidewalks, if any.

Part of its unique charm lies in one's discovery of a shop surrounded by carefully tended flowering planters and greenery next to a scraggly weed patch or a marine industrial shop.

Cannery Village started out being marine-oriented. It still is, somewhat, for the Rhine Canal, its east boundary, is dotted with boatyards, marine equipment companies and rows of beached sailboats, their bare masts spiking the blue sky.

Busy Newport Boulevard is its western boundary, and to the south and north its limits are bounded by 26th and 32nd streets.

Some of the seagoing businesses resent the intrusion of Johnny-come-lately shopkeepers. They complain that new business will add to the already cramped parking situation. Joining with them in this complaint is an exclusive beauty shop catering to residents of Lido Isle who already are finding it difficult to park their Cadillacs and Continentals.

Their argument is legitimate. But as Bob Kausen, head of Cannery Village Merchants Association, points out, shoppers and lookers can be encouraged to park in lots off Newport Boulevard, then walk the short distance to the shops.

Walking is the best way, anyhow, to see Cannery Village.

In sun or fog, there's a saltiness in the air. Gulls wheel motionless overhead. The hum of marine machinery harmonizes with the buzz of bees conferring with a convenient potted azalea. The time seems unimportant as the browsing visitor discovers antique, dress, candlemaking, bikini, yarn, art, jewelry and gift shops, not to mention Delaney's long-established fish market and dining places as tiny as the General Mess and as large as the nautically decorated Sea Shanty. Even the sophisticated Paris Inn, which briefly had been the Pacific Dining Car and, previous to that, Karem's, considered for many years the 'in' mecca for diners seeking elegant fare off the beaten path, is there.

Back doors of some shops lead to tiny bricked patios filled with greenery. Above, Toonerville-like ventilation pipes jut to the roofline at sharp angles.

One senses a pride on the part of shopkeepers that is coldly missing in sprawling shopping centers. More often than not the customer is waited upon by the shop owner himself. Hurry is not in their vocabulary; interest in people is. Should a shopkeeper be absent, folksy notes are posted on the door: "Sorry, out on a job. Back Thurs. a.m." "My children have a dental appointment. Please come back later."

Urbane, charming George Bernique may be found refinishing an Old World table while he awaits customers at his immaculate whitewalled antique store. He and his wife comb Europe several times a year to find

CANNERY VILLAGE

By Jean Sanders

The old cannery is gone but a growing complex of shops set down in the waterfront atmosphere maintains a rustic charm.
Marine metal fabricator Ed Martindale (top left) started his business in 1953 and initiated his own beautification program.
Part of the new look in the village, Bette and Dick Komlodi (bottom left) offer decorations and greenery for the home at their Corner Store. Dick comes to shopkeeping after 22 years in the food service industry.
Jack Sherwood (top right) of the Guildsmerchant, like Komlodi, has done a "180-degree turnabout" ... an Annapolis graduate, Sherwood headed Philco-Ford's radar division before coming to the village.
Dan Levin's shirt (right center) belies his having been a San Pedro fireman before turning to metal sculpting fulltime.
Bob Kausen (bottom right) sparkplugs Merchants Village Association. Still working in Aerospace, he's associated with the Artisan's Bench.

antiques for their clientele who come from Los Angeles to Dallas to Phoenix to Washington, D.C.

Bernique gave up his thriving furniture manufacturing company in the San Fernando Valley to retire to his native France. When he wearied of the inactivity, he returned to the States and renovated the rundown Golden Anchor Bar. Now he walks to work from his home on Lido.

A cluster of single car garages later became small business offices. Second floors were added, providing low-rent space in the rundown neighborhood for struggling artists and architects.

Now the narrow shops with equally narrow stairs leading up to new discoveries for the browser house a dress and boutique shop called Foreign Intrigue; a candlemaking supply shop along with well-designed leather goods, pottery, weaving materials and other unusual giftwares known as The Artisan's Bench; the New Renaissance which features metal sculpture and handmade jewelry and the Guildsmerchant which displays high-quality arts and crafts.

Though many of the shops are now carpeted, there is a rustic, intentionally weathered look to them. Display shelving may be pine planks blowtorched for an antiqued effect, or bases of lava rock topped wth a driftwood plank. Those shops foregoing two-by-four or plank walls select quaint patterned wallpapers reminiscent of a less hurried age.

At least two of the shopowners have aerospace experience. Bob Kausen of the Artisan's Bench was prepared to be economized out of his job a year ago and began to sparkplug the Cannery Village image. He is still quality assurance manager of his plant (Narmo Materials Division of Whittaker Corp., Costa Mesa), but spends lunch hours and Saturdays in his shop where he engages in candlemaking and metal sculpture. Partners keeping the fragrant, waxy, leatherly smelling shop open are his wife and another couple.

Bearded, easy-going Jack Sherwood of The Guildsmerchant was one of the few aerospace employees actually to quit his job as a physicist before the layoffs began. He and his wife Betty handle handsome, whimsical works by artists in the area — handmade soft eyed "Little Women" cloth dolls, impressionistic models of Mexican and American Southwest churches and missions, cloth mache figures, batik, stained glass, macrame

Sherwood himself does string sculpture and metal work. His distinctive handtooled aluminum mailboxes resemble hammered pewter.

"We make three requirements of artists displayed here," he says. "They must teach what they do if asked, they must do special order work and, above all, they must be good."

Across the narrow street the Sherwoods' 21-year-old son runs the postage stamp-size General Mess where customers eat inside or dockside.

Betty Sherwood says: "They say the days of a family business are over. We hope to show them they're wrong." The Sherwoods are so wrapped up in their new venture they have sold their home several miles inland, moved to the beach area and bicycle to work.

A dreary, sagging two-story warehouse, once occupied by battered cars, neglected boats and plain junk has been remodeled into The Factory, a bevy of more than 30 cubby hole shops offering living green plants, antiques, leather goods, photgraphy, crystalized minerals and fossils, paintings, custom rugs, Indian jewelry and artifacts, nautical accessories, clock and lamps, custom-made home furnishings, ethnic clothing and quality sportswear.

Around the corner a rundown boat repair shop has become the Corner Store, sea blue and gray with a whopping blue flower painted on the yellow front door. Thriving potted plants in a white trellised area vie for attention with tasteful and unusual greeting cards, stoneware, ceramics, clothing from Mexico and other gift items with a non-mass-produced look.

Off on a nearby street The Plum Tree holds forth in a former private bungalow. Its consignment gift items and clothing are by artists from age 17 to 70.

Antique dealers and artists are not the only ones attracted to the village. Scattered here and there among the eight square blocks are an advertising agency, law offices, architects, yacht brokers, an open air fresh produce market and an independent filmmaker for large corporations.

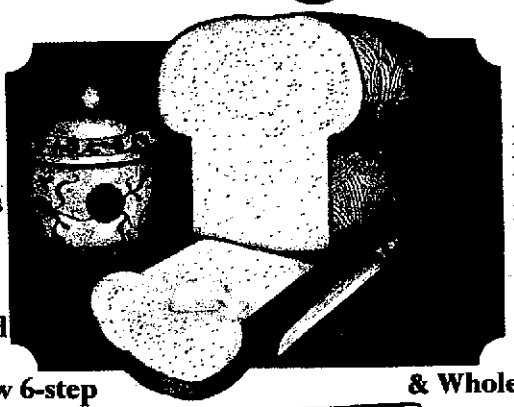

Cannery Village, just a whisper away from Newport Beach City Hall and a stone's throw across the canal from Lido Peninsula, derives its name from Western Canners Co., the last survivor of Newport's once thriving cannery row and a fishing industry that lasted almost 100 years.

Now, after 42 years of operation, the cannery no longer exists. It was torn down more than a year ago. Intention is to rebuild its replica, ⅜-scale, to house a restaurant. Land has been cleared and the bulkheads are in, but financial stresses and other problems, including seating capacity, has delayed its opening date.

Cannery or no cannery, Cannery Village itself offers hospitality, unique merchandise and a charm hard to come by in a mechanized age. □

PECK

PECK-ING AWAY

AT THE ESTABLISHMENT

By Robert Berkvist

"The time is past when good men can remain silent."

—Father Daniel Berrigan in "The Trial of the Catonsville Nine"

Gergory Peck, a thoroughly establishment figure, has produced what may possibly rank as the year's most anti-establishment movie: Father Daniel Berrigan's hymn to civil disobedience, "The Trial of the Catonsville Nine."

During a brief visit prior to the film's premiere here, the 56-year-old actor, lean and graying and looking much more like a Lincolnesque chunk of Presidential timber than a political firebrand, told why he had joined with with other investors to put up $250,000 for a movie he knows will yield him little in the way of popularity and even less in the way of profits.

"I first saw 'Catonsville' in play form at the Mark Taper Forum in Los Angeles," said Peck, choosing his words with care. "It was stimulating, emotionally engaging. I found that my wife and I discussed it on and off for several days. We found it quite moving that a group of people would put their freedom on the line, would perform a symoblic act which involved breaking the law, knowing they'd be arrested.

"And that touched a chord. I couldn't help but make an association between their act and the Boston Tea Party, where actually what they did was rather trivial, throwing barrels of tea into the harbor. And what these people did at Catonsville was to burn paper. The physical act involved in the crime was rather undramatic in both instances, but the far-reaching significance of the act and the immediate result — a dramatic public hearing for their views — well, I found that stirring, and admirable.

"So I decided I would like 'Catonsville' to be seen by a wider audience, because I see the 'Nine' as patriots of a sort. I don't put them on a pedestal, I don't agree with everything they stand for, but I certainly agree with them in their attitude toward our continued involvement in Vietnam.

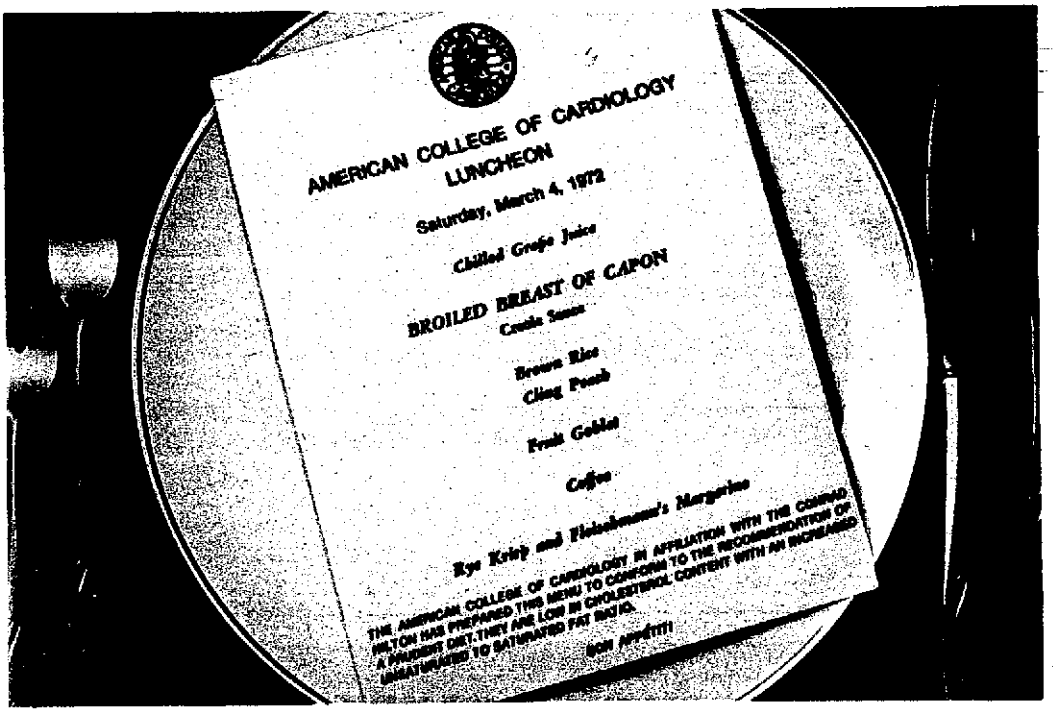

"I also admire them as people. There seems to be less and less of their kind of commitment, their willingness to be involved, even to give up their freedom. In addition to that, I find myself increasingly stimulated by the ideas of the Catholic left and the reforms that have been taking place within the Church. Yes, we're Catholics, we go to church quite often, we're fairly good practitioners, and we've watched this new attitude take hold, watched the young people get involved. Take the ceremony of the Mass and how it's changed. It's now what I'm sure it was intended to be in the first place, a celebration of life."

And so "Catonsville" was made in that spirit? "It was a labor of love," said Peck, stretch-

When 3,500 cardiologists met recently in Chicago, they ate just what the doctor ordered.

At their 21st annual meeting, The American College of Cardiology requested that The Conrad Hilton Hotel prepare meals low in saturated fat and cholesterol. And at the request of The College the spread served was Fleischmann's Margarine.

The American College of Cardiology: heart specialists who practice what they preach . . . that eating meals low in cholesterol and low in saturated fat is better for us. All of us.

That's why The College requested low saturated fat meals and Fleischmann's® Margarine.

Fleischmann's Margarine is so delicious. It's sensible, too, because Fleischmann's is high in liquid corn oil so it's low in saturated fat.

You may not be a cardiologist, but you can eat like one. Fleischmann's offers you this booklet: Dietary Control of Cholesterol. It's packed with important facts and 75 delicious, "easy to prepare" recipes for low saturated fat, low cholesterol meals for your family.

Preliminary judging was accomplished by Southland editors. A total of 30 entries was submitted to judges comedian Paul Lynde, actor Dennis Cole and radio DJ Frank Jolle of station KNAC, Long Beach. Details about judges, page 2.

RATTAN

Primitively simple and simply practical

By JUDY HAZLETT
Home Furnishings Editor

Rattan furniture is a natural for leisure living . . . not only because of simplicity of style, but the fact that it's a product of nature herself.

It has been popular in the Orient for centuries. Broad use in the United States dates back only about 40 years — but it's being rediscovered and is again hitting the home furnishings scene with impact.

Most furniture is created from wood or synthetics (plastic, glass, chrome and metal). These materials are all processed to meet the needs of the particular manufacturer.

But, rattan is different.

It's made from a vine that grows only in the Phillippines.

A member of the palm family, rattan has a hard outer shell and a tough fibrous center core.

It's cultivated and harvested by "farmers" on the Philippines, much like sugar cane in Hawaii.

The standard pole rattan grows vine-like to lengths up to 600 feet. When it reaches maturity, it is cut to usable lengths 15 to 30 feet long, then stored on end for curing.

Buyers from the various United States manufacturers bid on each harvest for their respective companies.

Before shipment to this country the rattan poles are "rough skinned" by hand to a precise depth so the skin of the solid pole is not destroyed in any way.

The removed surface becomes rattan peel (usually known as wicker) which is extremely tough and used for weaving seats and other pieces of furniture.

Rattan, or wicker, however, should NOT be confused with bamboo. Although segmented like rattan, bamboo is a member of the reed family with a tough outer shell and hollow center. Bamboo is almost impossible to form, splits easily and cannot be satisfactorily finished.

Rattan forms readily, holding the desired shape, will not split, can be joined with nails, screws or glue, and finishes as ordinary wood.

Interestingly, except for cutting the poles with power saws and painting with modern spray equipment, the making of rattan furniture is little changed from early times.

According to Ray Potter of 20

Bradston Rattan Products, Inc., National City, after a rattan shipment arrives in the plant, the skinning process is completed so only the best of the core remains.

Because the poles are very porous, they are put into large vats and steamed under pressure.

"This is the one and only time rattan can be bent into the shapes needed to form the furniture pieces," Potter explained.

After the parts are assembled, it's time for the finishing process.

Pieces are coated with sealer then four coats of finish are applied — dark walnut, pecan or the natural look are most popular.

Designers have found that rattan possesses qualities that result in a look achieved with no other raw material.

The latitude of design applications range from quaint Victorian Wicker to a contemporary parsons look. It's adaptable to formal or informal interiors and mixes or matches with other styles and periods of furniture with ease.

Use of rattan furniture extends from individual decorator pieces to entire furniture groupings.

Although primarily for indoor use, some rattan and wicker can be used on the patio when weather permits — no rain.

Some of the new pieces for '72 are nostalgic items that are reproductions of pieces so popular on porches, summerhouses and garden rooms around the turn of the century.

The charm of oriental rattan and peel, coupled with a compact design, has resulted in this attractive and practical dining group. Designed by Lawrence Peabody, it blends the primitive simplicity of the past with the current needs of the present.

Wicker has been woven together in new ways to create some ultra modern designs including chunky low back caster chairs, "colonial" wicker groups with shell seats, solid woven modular furniture over steel frames plus a Victorian rocker, daybed/sofa with cushioned back.

Rattan manufacturers are featuring such popular pieces as bars, swivel rockers, etageres, hutches, buffets and a wide variety of tables and other seating pieces.

Another point in rattan's favor — in addtion to style — is easy care.

Dusting is the only cleaning needed on a day to day basis. Then, once a year, frames should be washed with a cloth dipped in mild soap and water solution, rinsed and dried, then polished with a liquid furniture wax. That's all there is to it.

Today's designers who know rattan want a special look that results from hand crafting, and they are taking full advantage.

They're achieving a goal in furniture that is impossible with any other material. It's only natural. □

Rattan is the star performer of this leisure look in furniture. It has adaptability to formal and informal interiors — and — has ease of care. Shown here are a rattan bar, stool, occasional chair and ottoman, each by a different manufacturer, but each showing the clean lines of design inherent in the material.

BAR-B-Q

By Virginia Heffington

WHAT THE BLAZES!

The ancient art of barbecuing is as much a part of today's outdoor living scene as highway billboards. But with more attractive results.

Food cooked over an open fire has been around since the cavemen when there was no other way. The most primitive equipment was probably the skewer which was likely a sword. Ancient Arabian warriors are given credit for this as well as for the first fuel container — their steel helmets.

Then, as now, there's a spirit of adventure and camaraderie around an open fire. Though modern technology eventually brought the stove into the kitchen, outdoor cooking never died — its coals were just banked awhile until barbecuing moved out of the necessity class and became a luxury. Now it's gone almost full circle and is a necessity again.

Yet it's amazing how many people are intimidated by this simple method of charring meat.

If you are new at the barbecue game or not satisfied with your present equipment, here is a rundown on what's available.

The petite portable units are tailored to "outdoor" cooking inside, preparing appetizer-size morsels atop a table or a meal intended for just one or two.

There are heavy metal hibachis or ceramic Mexican braseros for traditionalists. Braseros come in terra cotta or hard-fired black Oaxacan pottery. Too hot a fire will crack either kind. It's smart to build a fire of no more than 10 briquets at the start, slowly adding more when the pottery is hot. The upper bowl holds the fire and the lower decorated bowl is the draft chamber. Braseros seldom come with grills — you often need to buy one separately.

Hibachis range in size from one to three grills, each being large enough to hold a good-size steak. They're square or rectangular in shape and the accompanying grill is adjustable. Hibachis have a hole near the bottom for draft. Though usually inexpensive, they do an excellent cooking job — with the help of the chef.

Next along the line of complexity is the bowl-shaped barbecue known as a brazier. This has three or four legs and two wheels so it can be scooted easily across lawn or patio. The most primitive brazier is a shallow metal bowl topped with a grid. These are fine for a simple burger, hot dog, steak or cut-up chicken. But for more hefty hunks of food, you need a brazier with an adjustable grill, wind screen, half hood and rotisserie. The half hood can be turned into a smoke oven with a cover of heavy-duty foil.

A barbecue with its own cover drilled with damper holes to control the fire makes cooking big chunks of meat less risky. The dampered lid means you have control over the heat even on a wet or windy day.

The simplest covered equipment is the kettle-shaped grill. The deep fire bowl comes with a damper — the dome-shaped lid has a damper, too. Meat is cooked in the covered grill by heat reflected down from the dome — the top of the meat is browned just like in your kitchen oven. Of course, to slow down the cooking process, close one of the dampers. Closing both dampers will smother the fire — a fine idea if the food is cooked before the charcoal is gone. Then you can relight the coals another time.

A little more sophisticated is the covered wagon. This is a barrel or rectangular box mounted on what amounts to a wagon. These often come with a thermometer in the lid to take the guess work out of controling the heat. Distance between food and coals can be adjusted by raising the grill or lowering the fire grate. There are often dampers top and bottom in this style of equipment.

WHAT THE BLAZES!

Newer on the scene, but coming up fast, are the gas barbecues. Though the amateur may think this takes the fun out of barbecuing, once you get used to one, you'll never trade. (How many people do you know who would exchange their modern washer for the old wringer kind?)

Gas units are less expensive to use than the ones that burn briquets and they heat up so fast, they're ready to use in minutes.

Gas barbecues heat ceramic or volcanic rock instead of regular coals. The rock produces radiant energy to do the cooking. And with fine charcoal flavor, we might add. This is the result of the fat dripping down and flaring or smoking as with briquets.

When using a gas grill, never rush it by turning heat to high — the high position is only for preheating the rock or for occasional short periods of time when you need to bring the meat up to normal barbecuing temperature which can happen with large chunks of meat — especially cold ones.

Medium settings are for cooking. Whether medium high, medium low or plain medium will depend upon the food and the outside temperature — experience will soon teach you. The low position is strictly for holding cooked food at a warm temperature or for heating barbecue breads.

Gas units may be permanently installed with a natural gas hook-up or they can be portable by connecting onto a liquid petroleum tank.

Now that we've explored assorted styles of equipment, let's discuss how to build a charcoal fire because that's still what most people use.

The beginner at the barbecue is often too generous with briquets. You need just a few more than the area of the meat you plan to cook at the moment. Of course, roasts require more charcoal than thin steaks. Don't start cooking till the charcoal burns down to a gray ash — it glows red at night.

It's a neat idea to line the firebox with foil for easy cleaning. Pour a layer of sand or gravel over the foil for better draft.

To hold down flare-ups, keep a squeeze bottle full of water handy. Or latch onto Junior's water gun. But don't use more water than needed to douse the flames — don't soak the coals or the fire will go out.

Though many outdoor chefs feel a thick steak is the only thing worthy of a charcoal broil, three billion hot dogs are sold yearly; many of which distinguish themselves on the outdoor grill.

There's a vast horde of other cuts that thrive over charcoal. But the same principle of cooking applies outdoors as in — only tender meats withstand the trauma of dry heat, whether from briquets or the heat of your kitchen broiler.

That's why steak and burgers lead the parade of beef to the outdoor grill. Prime steak choices are sirloin, club, T-bone, porterhouse or rib (sometimes called Delmonico). Though a tougher cut of meat, flank steak, is popular, too — especially when marinated London-broil style. The secret to tender flank is to cook it to no more than medium well and to carve it in thin strips across the grain.

Not-so-tender cuts of beef are sometimes barbecued, too. These include chuck or round steak, brisket or corned beef and short ribs. The best bet here is to use a commercial meat tenderizer before slapping the meat onto the barbecue grill. (Of course, a smoke-oven has a tenderizing effect because of the steam enclosed by hood or cover.) Beef roasts like standing or rolled rib and eye or round are great rotisserie choices.

When it comes to pork, spareribs are the all-time favorite followed closely by thick loin chops. Ham steak and Canadian-style bacon are other good bets. So is a big bologna — that giant sausage you can turn into a budget barbecue for rotisserie cooking in a matter of minutes. Try a pork loin roast or whole Canadian bacon or pork tenderloin for more elegant spit-roasting.

Lamb is often overlooked for the barbecue. What a shame because a thick loin chop or rack of lamb is delish broiled over charcoal. As a change of pace from the ubiquitous burger, try patties of ground lamb. A slice of bacon wrapped around the edge adds juiciness. A leg of lamb with bone in or out is aristocratic indeed on the outdoor spit. A favorite flavor trick is to make small gashes in the meat every few inches and poke a clove of garlic into each.

The secret to rotisserie roasting is balance, be it beef, pork, lamb or that big bird, the turkey. Evaluate the size and shape of the meat then estimate the center and insert the spit there. Test by cradling the ends of the spit in the palms of your hands — if the spit tips, try again. Roasts that are not balanced will limp unevenly instead of turning smoothly on the spit. Then anchor meat securely with holding forks. Also check manufacturer's directions as to the maximum size your rotisserie motor is equipped to handle.

Chicken can be grilled by the piece or the whole bird can be whirled rotisserie-style. Either way, chicken is a bargain. And its bland flavor takes tastily to a host of basting sauces.

Worth fishing for is a variety of seafood for the barbecue. Try fish steaks or fillets brushed generously with rich sauce. Turn only once or not at all, depending on thickness. Even seafood like shrimp, lobster and scallops are as at home on the grill as they are in water — provided you don't dry them out with high heat enthusiasm.

The newest wrinkle in barbecue cooking is a kabob of pork, orange chunks and (you guessed it) prunes. Pitted prunes straight from the package are an interesting addition to skewered cubes of marinated pork and wedges of fresh juicy orange with the peel left on for added flavor. And to keep it skewered. Because prunes are small, string them two by two on the skewer.

The marinade for our pictured kabobs is a blend of soy and Worcestershire sauces, wine vinegar and lemon juice quietly countered with orange juice and oil. The flavor of the prunes soaks into the meat with the aid of the heat and the peel of the orange chars wondrously.

Also included is a recipe for roasting corn on the grill that's still in the husk — a legacy from the Indians.

A bonus is a basic barbecue sauce that takes to any barbecue thing from pork to poultry, including beef, of course. It's even tasty on fish and there are even some who might like it on lamb. This is an expert blend of catsup, chili sauce, prepared and dry mustard, brown sugar, pepper, wine vinegar, lemon juice and soy, steak and Worcestershire sauces spiked with beer. Most chefs will add garlic. This recipe makes gobs which is great because the sauce keeps for weeks even out of the refrigerator. And it needs no cooking.

PRUNE PORK KABOBS

- 1½ cups salad oil
- ½ cup red wine vinegar
- ⅓ cup lemon juice
- ¼ cup soy sauce
- ¼ cup Worcestershire sauce
- 2 tablespoons dry mustard
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 2¼ teaspoons salt
- 1 tablespoon coarse-ground pepper
- 2 teaspoons chopped parsley
- 1 teaspoon ground ginger (optional)
- 2 pounds boneless pork loin or shoulder, cut in 1½-inch cubes
- 1 pound pitted prunes (about)
- 2 to 3 oranges, quartered

Combine liquids and seasonings for marinade. Arrange meat, prunes and oranges in single layer in shallow baking dish; pour marinade over fruits. Cover and refrigerate overnight or let stand at room temperature 2 hours; turning meat and fruits now and then.

Fill skewers, alternating meat cubes with prunes and orange wedges and adding prunes two at a time.

Broil over medium heat till meat is well done, turning frequently and brushing often with marinade. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

GRILLED CORN IN THE HUSK

Buy corn on the cob with husks on. Husks should be green and silk should be soft and damp. Gently peel down just enough husks to remove silk. Pat husks back into original position and soak corn in cold water about 30 minutes.

Remove corn from water and place over medium heat; grill about 20 minutes or till done, making quarter turn every 5 minutes for even cooking. (If husks were snipped off at the end when you bought the corn, you may need to anchor husks by tieing string around ends.)

Let guests peel back their own husks. Serve the corn with the usual butter and salt and pepper.

WEST COAST BARBECUE SAUCE

- 2 bottles (14 ounces each) catsup
- 1 bottle (12 ounces or 1½ cups) chili sauce
- ⅓ cup prepared mustard
- 1 tablespoon dry mustard
- 1½ cups brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons freshly ground coarse black pepper
- 1½ cups red wine vinegar
- 1 cup fresh lime or lemon juice
- ½ cup bottled thick steak sauce
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- 2 tablespoons salad oil
- 1 can or bottle (12 ounces or 1½ cups) beer
- 1 or 2 cloves garlic, minced

Combine all ingredients except garlic, mixing well. Pour into pint or quart jars to store. This sauce will keep several weeks at room temperature, several months in the refrigerator and almost indefinitely in the freezer. Add the garlic just before using. Use to baste your choice of meat the last 15 to 30 minutes of broiling on the outdoor grill. Makes about 3 quarts. □

WORKSHOP

FOR THE FIRING SQUAD

By Steve Ellingson

Barbecue pits continue to flourish. Not since the burning of Rome has there been greater interest in outdoor fires. Because of the severe winter, this summer people are more eager than ever to cook outdoors.

It makes no difference whether you live on a miniature lot or on a large estate, you yourself can build a barbecue pit — right in your own backyard. It will expand your living and at the same time enhance the value of your home.

The easiest and most inexpensive type of barbecue pit to build is one made with cement blocks. We built the one pictured here with actress Linda Williams in one weekend. Pictures were made as we went along. The first picture shows the bare ground. The second, getting ready for the first row of cement blocks. From then on we took pictures of each step as the work progressed.

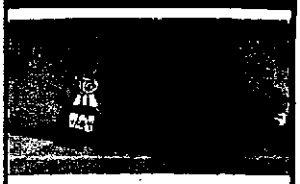

These pictures (about 50 of them) were assembled and made into a complete set of directions for building the barbecue. They show how to mix the cement, what proportions to use and all other details you will need. Linda is holding the pattern so you can see how complete it is. The door in front of the barbecue opens into a storage area which may be used for charcoal, dishes and other barbecueing supplies.

This type of barbecue pit will last a lifetime, and it gives the same warmth to your outdoor living room that a fireplace gives to your den. You will find this to be a grand way to entertain. Patio parties are easier, more fun, convenient and varied.

To obtain the easy-to-follow picture pattern No. 162 for building the barbecue pit pictured, send $1 (add 25c per pattern for airmail delivery) by currency, check or money order to:

MAXINE WILLIAMS
Rediscovered

There are people living in Long Beach who don't drive to the top of Signal Hill more than once a year. Some, living less than two miles away, haven't been up there for a decade or more.

On the other hand, there are people living in Los Angeles who drive to Signal Hill at least once a week. They don't mind the rather long trip to the hill, because they happen to know what awaits them on top — beautiful steaks, luscious prime rib au jus and incomparable views of what makes Southern California so beautiful.

The attraction is the Hilltop Steak House and Star Room, 2300 E. 23rd St. The food is so good and the trio's music is so danceable that one Los Angeles couple dropped in every Friday night for the better art of a year — a total of 40 or more visits in succession.

"It's so different up here," they told owners Reed Williams and his wife Maxine. "Life is pretty dull for us the rest of the week. But our Friday nights are wonderful because of what we've discovered up here."

In the past year or so, more and more Long Beach residents have rediscovered the Hilltop, telling Maxine and Reed: "We could kick ourselves for not coming up sooner. Your dinners are terrific — and Reed's music takes us right back to the 1940s and 1950s."

The Hilltop, which serves from 6 o'clock on every night except Monday, when it's closed, emphasizes such thick, pamperd steaks as the top sirloin, king-sized, $5.25, and the filet mignon, king-sized, $5.95. Other beauties include two six-ounce choice lamb chops, $4.50; broiled halibut, $3.50; tender eastern scallops, $3.50, and the royal steak-lobster combination, $7.95. All are with tray of fresh, crisp, iced relishes, soup du jour and top-notch salad, baked Idaho potato, hot cheese bread and beverage.

Two extremely popular choices are the New York-cut steak sandwich and the generous hot prime rib au jus sandwich, both $3.95. with salad and fresh French fries.

GUIDE by Tedd Thomey

The Hilltop attracts many young adults as well as more mature guests because Reed — formerly a top bandsman with Freddy Martin and Tommy Dorsey — plays the newest hits as well as the nostalgic melodies of yesteryear.

WHILE VACATIONING a few summers ago in western Canada, my family and I visited an immaculate halibut processing plant at Prince Rupert, a small but scenic seaport town.

BERNIE MOSKALENKO
Halibut with Almonds

Caricatures by Bill Buerge

Normally I am not impressed by fish when they are in that unhappy state between the water and my plate. I must say this, however, about the halibut in that factory. Even uncooked, it look very good. It was unfishy, clean and smooth.

I was reminded of our Canadian stopover one evening not so long ago when we visited Anderson's Tally Ho, 5829 Lakewood Blvd., just north of South Street. This olde England-style restaurant, long a distinctive landmark in Lakewood, serves a beautiful halibut steak, grilled to perfection. It is a thick slice, utterly scrumptious, topped with crisp slivered almonds and accompanied by small glass cups of creamy tartar sauce and coleslaw as well as a wedge of fresh lemon. Anderson's is one of the few local restaurants which follows the tradition of serving coleslaw with many of its sea foods.

The halibut is $3.75 on Anderson's dinner, which includes a large metal bowl of fine relishes, soup or salad, large baked Idaho potato, hot cheesebread and beverage. The soup, served in a generous bowl, is always outstanding, such as vegetable with big pieces of beef. The salad is equally outstanding, consisting of the freshest mixed greens with croutons topped with chopped egg and a rich dressing.

Manager Bernie Moskalenko, a continental gentleman with European manners, directs a staff of superb waiters, noted for their coutesy and helpfulness. They enjoy their work because they know that Anderson's choice entrees invariably bring comments of pleasure from the patrons.

The menu has dozens of attractions, ranging from $2.75 and $2.95 (spaghetti with meatballs or fried chicken) to $6.95 (steak-lobster combination.) Listed are thick, juicy, savory prime rib au jus, veal Oskar with crab, asparagus and rich bearnaise sauce, T-bone steak, N.Y.-cut pepper steak, double French-cut lamb chops, roast duckling a l'orange, roast turkey, chateaubriand, crown rack of lamb, steak sandwiches and scads of ocean delicacies.

Open every day, Anderson's serves dinner Sundays from 3 p.m. Luncheon is served on weekdays. Two banquet rooms are available for parties and meetings. □

Medicine & You

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Researchers continue to investigate a rare, mysterious disease of children called subacute sclerosing panencephalitis (SSPE).

The disorder is a chronic, progressive disease of the central nervous system. It is characterized by lethargy, regressive speech, incoordination, rigidity, inability to speak, coma and death.

As to the disease's cause, the theory now is that it is caused by an abnormal response to measles infection (rubeola). This response is most likely to occur when the infection takes place during the first two years of life. The average interval between infection and onset of SSPE is about five years.

Still perplexing the researchers is the concentration of SSPE patients in the southeastern part of the United States. There also is a high male to female ratio which cannot be explained.

Details about new research concerning SSPE appear in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

If a doctor prescribes birth control pills for a 15-year-old girl, he may be stunting her growth, says an authority on hormones.

Dr. Herbert S. Kupperman, associate professor of medicine at New York University Medical Center, has warned of other troubles which may be produced by oral contraceptives. He spoke at a meeting of the American College of Osteopathic Obstetricians and Gynecologists.

For example, a patient may start to have problems with acne or experience excessive hair growth. Or there may be increased skin pigmentation.

On the other hand, Dr. Kupperman says that it has not been proved that The Pill can induce cancer or dangerous blood clots.

A report of his talk appears in News Review, a periodical of the American Osteopathic Association.

Two new studies in Belfast confirm an earlier study in the United States implicating oral antidiabetes drugs in an increased death rate from heart disease.

The new reports are in the journal Lancet, a British medical journal.

Doctors at Royal Victoria Hospital say their study shows a higher frequency of cardiac deaths in diabetic patients treated with tolbutamide or phenformin compared to a group that did not take the medications.

Another study indicates that among persons taking antidiabetes drugs there is a high incidence of cardiovascular deaths.

Nitrous oxide can successfully curb fear and pain without loss of consciousness in podiatry (foot) patients, a foot doctor reports.

Dr. Mark H. Feldman of Cleveland, Ohio, reporting in the American Journal of Podiatry, says the procedure does away with the need for sedative drugs as pre-operative medications.

Patients readily accept the procedure when it is explained to them in advance. It also involves fewer risks than general anesthesia, Dr. Feldman says.

Human knee cartilage is proving to be an ideal substance for reconstruction of bony canal walls in the middle ear.

The ear tissue may have been destroyed by past mastoid operations or by disease.

Dr. Roger E. Wehrs, ear specialist of Tulsa, Okla, says knee-cartilage grafts have been used in 15 patients.

In a report in Clinical Trends, a medical newspaper, Dr. Wehrs tells how the operation can improve hearing.

The knee cartilage is easily obtainable, the doctor says, and can be preserved in 70 per cent ethyl alcohol until needed at surgery.

In addition, it can be sized and shaped to fit the defect to be corrected in the ear. A pattern is made out of compressed gelfoam, and then the cartilage is cut according to the pattern.

Skin changes in drug addicts can serve as an early warning sign for physicians.

A New York University dermatology professor says a study of 1,000 addicts (various drugs) showed almost every one had a scar of some sort. Four of five had highly pigmented scars.

A significant number also complained of itching sensations — suggestive of the allergic nature of many reactions to addictive drugs.

Methyl methacrylate, used as a cement in total hip replacement surgery, may cause a skin inflammation known as contact dermatitis.

Dr. Alexander A. Fisher, clinical professor of dermatology at New York University school of medicine, cites the case of an orthopedic surgeon who became sensitized to the substance. The surgeon suffered a skin eruption after each time he performed a total hip replacement.

If a person is allergic to the substance, the ailment can be treated with a cortisone-type drug, the doctor says. □

Q. What's the real story on the mysterious divorce of Sen. Bob Dole, Republican National Chairman? The story in Kansas is that he has a girlfriend in El Dorado, Kans. True or false? Please don't use my full name.—H.S., Blue Rapids, Kans.

A. Kansas law provides for an immediate divorce in an emergency. This past January, Judge Adrian Allen of the Shawnee County District Court designated the divorce case an emergency after Mrs. Dole's attorney said it would be a hardship for his client to appear for trial. The "emergency" aspects of the case gave rise to a drove of rumors, none true. Dole and his wife were divorced after 23 years of marriage on grounds of incompatibility. She is the former Phyllis Holden of Farmington, N.H. It was she who performed the physical therapy that restored partial use of Dole's right arm which was withered by one of two wounds he received in the Army. They were married after he was discharged in 1948. They have one child, a daughter of 17. Dole who shakes hands left-handed almost always holds something in his right hand to give it a more natural look.

Q. I understand that Gov. George Wallace has always been against gun control, even though it was a hand gun which felled him. What is his real reason for being against gun control?—Albert Bennett, Montgomery, Ala.

A. Governor Wallace explained many times prior to the attempt to kill him that a man intent upon assassination would not permit any type of gun control law to stop him. Many authorities disagreed vehemently with Wallace and still do. As a result of the assassination attempt on Wallace a more strict gun control law will undoubtedly be passed.

Q. Betty Grable was scheduled to go to Australia to star in No, No, Nanette. Her doctor said she was seriously ill and refused to let her go. He declined to give any reason. Is it the "Big C"?—Manny Farber, Los Angeles, Calif.

A. Miss Grable does not suffer from cancer, just a duodenal ulcer which calls for treatment. Her place in Melbourne, Australia, will be taken by Cyd Charisse.

Q. Napoleon's first wife was Josephine. Do you know who his second wife was?—Ruth Pulasky, Jersey City, N.J.

A. Marie Louise, archduchess daughter of Francis I, Emperor of Austria and the Holy Roman Empire.

ACTRESS JANE FONDA AND DIRECTOR ROGER VADIM.

Q. Is it true that Jane Fonda is still in love with her ex-husband, Roger Vadim, and is in fact paying his income taxes so that he can return to France?—Michelle Haskell, Portland, Oreg.

A. Vadim, until recently, lived in exile in the U.S. because of income tax difficulties in France. To help Vadim, his ex-wife, Jane Fonda, sold the country house she owned outside Paris and gave the proceeds to Vadim. Thus, Vadim can again live and work in France where he plans a new film to be called Don Juan with another ex-wife, Brigitte Bardot, playing the female Don Juan.

Q. Who said: "The ultimate result of shielding men from the effects of folly is to fill the world with fools"?—Milton Niemans, Hempstead, N.Y.

A. Herbert Spencer, British philosopher (1820-1903).

Q. I have been told that Sammy Davis Jr. was in Vietnam entertaining our servicemen but never received any publicity. Was this intentional?—Clara Malone, Roxbury, Mass.

A. Davis was entertaining our troops in Vietnam at the same time President and Mrs. Nixon, accompanied by the press, were making their historic tour of the People's Republic of China. Hence, Davis received little or no publicity.

Q. They say Nixon is thinking of three Vice Presidential candidates: Agnew, Connally, and Sen. Edward Brooke (R., Mass.). If Nixon goes with Brooke, wouldn't he capture the black vote in this country? —Helen Lang, Somerville, Mass.

A. Not necessarily.

Q. Is Prince Charles of Great Britain scheduled to go to school at Harvard University? If so, when?—Lee Metcalf, Indianapolis, Ind.

A. Prince Charles, now in the British Navy on a three-year hitch, may eventually attend the Harvard Business Administration School. But nothing has yet been firmed up.

Q. I see that Mrs. William O. Douglas, 29, wife of the Associate Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, who is 73, has become a lawyer. If and when she argues cases in front of her husband, won't he have to disqualify himself?—E.T., Washington, D.C.

A. Presumably.

Q. The identity, please, of Robin, Adams, Sloan who imitate your column in our local afternoon newspaper.—Mrs. Orville Hildebrand, Los Angeles, Calif.

A. Robin, Adams, Sloan are Patricia Newcomb, formerly Marilyn Monroe's press agent, and Roberta Ashley and Liz Smith who write for Cosmopolitan magazine.

Q. How long will Ron Ziegler remain White House press secretary?—Ann Ballentine, Hanover, N.H.

A. Says Ziegler: "I like my work and I plan to remain as long as the President wants me. I expect him to be reelected in November."

PRESIDENT NIXON AND PRESS SECRETARY RON ZIEGLER.

Bugler Gail Belmont from Gustine, Calif., is a symbol of WAC life. Her wake-up message, however, is prerecorded on tape.

This Is the Army

by Ilene Barth

FORT McCLELLAN, ALA.

"Some day I'm going to murder the bugler. Some day they're going to find him dead."*

Only in this case the bugler is a her, for this is the Women's Army Corps Training Center, and nobody wishes her ill.

For one thing, reveille blares over the base's loudspeaker system at 6:15 a.m. —which is at least an hour and a half after most basic trainees are up and working. Secondly, this is the modern army: bugle calls, except for special occasions, are prerecorded on tape. And thirdly, believe it or not, most WAC trainees say they don't mind getting up at 4:30 or 5. But that's because they go to bed at 9.

All together, the 13,000-strong Women's Army Corps is a friendly outfit, perhaps because it's non-violent. No rifles are issued to Wacs and all arms training is optional. It's also an all-volunteer force, though ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment could mean that women will no longer be excluded from the draft.

But what is much more likely is that the entire Army will become a volunteer force with an increased proportion of women.

Why would a girl join the Army? Mostly, the female soldiers say, for the job training and experience of the world. Many are impressed, too, by the Army pay scale. Enlistees sign up for three years, starting at $288 per month, with almost no expenses.

'Who am I?'

"I think I'm immature and I joined the army to find out who I am," says 21-year-old Pvt. Kathy Tocco from Logansport, Ind.

Pvt. Donna Harrison, an 18-year-old from Plattsburgh, N.Y., says, "I wanted to get away from home and I was too scared to take a job. And the Army gave me a choice of occupations and a way to save money."

Patriotism is also a frequently cited reason for joining up. But even that plays second fiddle to recruits' vision of the Army as a giant job training center. The question is: training for what?

During much of both the enlisted women's eight-week basic training and the college-educated officers' 18-week basic course, it looks as if what the Army is training is a battalion of fanatic charwomen. Recruits scrub bathroom floors, wash miles of pots and haul garbage cans when they pull KP, and make their own beds so a quarter could bounce on them. There is also a detail in the modern army known as "ecology patrol." Formerly called "lawn police," the job consists of picking up carelessly strewn rubbish from the grounds of the training center.

Work details aside, basic training is a busy period. Recruits practice the military version of a pirouette, the perfect about-face. Then they limber up from drill marching with calisthenics. They also learn how to administer first aid. And they spend hours in reading workshops preparing for the onslaught of Army forms most enlisted Wacs will have to fill out as their basic military job.

Gas mask practice

Field training—only a two-day stint —is most recruits' favorite activity. Girls learn how to don gas masks; tear gas is used for practice. Nerve gases are internationally outlawed, of course, but like Girl Scouts, the Wacs must be prepared. In fact, the Women's Army Corps shares Fort McClellan with the awesome Army Chemical Corps.

During field maneuvers the young women are also taught how to pitch and camouflage tents. Personal camouflage is accomplished by protruding twigs and leaves from sleeves and helmets. Artistic types craft rather fantastic Easter bonnets this way. The less vain also slap mud on their faces the better to blend into the surroundings. Then everyone jumps into the woods and hides. Those found by field training officers become "prisoners of war." The rest, summoned by horn, emerge from the forest as jubilant baggy-pants Eves. Break time is full of circle dances and songs.

For everyday grooming, the WAC eschews the mud pack. Polishing and ironing are the mainstays of military chic. Uniforms are ironed as many as Calisthenics class goes through running-in-place exercise. Despite the exertion many girls gain weight during basic training, due to calorie-loaded army food three and four times a day. Novices may spend two pre-bedtime hours polishing their shoes and brass to a high military gleam.

And yet the Women's Army Corps is changing. Lt. Col. Ann Fisher, commander of WAC Training Battalion, says, "We stress the perfectly made bed or polished shoes, not in and of themselves, but to teach discipline and self-confidence and create esprit de corps among 40 girls who are living [in one room] and working together.

"If we give an order we expect it to be followed immediately. But we do have training seminars during which girls can question the reasons."

Rainbow troops

Discipline starts early in the WAC—even before a girl has a uniform. "Rainbow Troops" is the name given to women so new to Army life that, still in civilian clothes, they look like peacocks next to their uniformed sisters. One group of rainbow troops misunderstood an order to board a bus. As a consequence, all privileges like soda pop, smoking, or receiving mail were canceled.

The fledgling soldiers took this in stride. "When you see a nine-foot lady walking toward you with all those stripes on her arm, and you realize she has the authority to punish you further, you suddenly know you can live without a cigarette," explains Pvt. Gloria Perry who only three days before left civilian life in St. Louis.

There is also kindness in the Women's Army Corps. Trainees may tremble as they stand at attention before Lt. Col. Fisher's inspection. But she will look over a girl in a slightly crumpled uniform and say, "Your ironing needs work. I always had trouble with that myself."

The rigidity, of course, eases up after basic training as recruits pursue advanced training courses. The battalion of cleaning women becomes an army of clerk-typists, instead. Or medical corpsmen. Qualified enlistees can choose other occupational specialties, but most end up trading in their mops for typewriters and hypodermic needles.

Eighty-six percent of enlisted women complete basic training. And almost all cite a new sense of pride and the friends they have made as the best things about Army life.

"I was a nervous wreck my first three weeks," recalls Pvt. Marcia Bernasink of Buffalo, N.Y. "Army life was a shock to almost all of us. But now I feel proud I could match up to the standards. And I'll never forget the friends I've made here."

continued

Wacs find field training fun. This Wac isn't creating a new hat design, she is learning to camouflage herself in case enemies ever surround her in the jungle.

Trainees get fitted for dark-green all-year uniforms. Each fit must be perfect so that every Wac looks her best. Outside clothing depot a captain grows tomatoes.

College-educated officer trainees echo these sentiments and generally endorse the results of WAC training: discipline and camaraderie. But they can also be articulately critical about what they perceive to be Army shortcomings.

Lt. Kay Hatch, a tall blonde from the University of New Mexico, was won over by the financial incentives. Because she was accepted for officers training before her senior year, the Army paid her $505.50 per month during her final two terms at college. Now she makes $530.70 per month, and housing and food are free. Unlike an enlisted woman who has over 30 roommates, she, as a training second lieutenant, shares her room with only one woman, and has only a two-year commitment. But she still has to meet Army inspections standards. Reflecting on this she says, "You feel like a fool when you realize you've been re-ironing the sheets while they're on your bed.

Final result: The military occupational specialty of most enlisted Wacs is clerical. Here they take advanced training for clerk-typing.

"And some of the classroom instruction insults my intelligence. I think many of the girls agree with me that political teaching tends to follow an outworn formula. But there is a willingness to listen to your suggestions for change here."

Trainee officers, many of them recent witnesses of the anti-war scene on campus, faced the disbelief of friends when they joined. Lt. Carolyn Toynes, a pretty black graduate of the University of Texas at El Paso, signed up because she wanted responsible experience behind her. "My friends, especially men, didn't like my decision," she says. "But I'm still the same person. Let's put it this way—I wouldn't go to a peace demonstration in my uniform."

Changes wanted

There have not yet been any women's liberation demonstrations on base, but a surprising number of the young WAC officers' suggestions for change have to do with the status of women in the Army. There are 469 military occupational specialties of which 149 are open to women. Some of the closed ones are combat positions, and women aren't pleading for them. But others which were open to women during World War II are now closed to them: like airplane maintenance, aircraft warning specialist, and carpenter.

Many of the female officers feel they would like to join directly, after training, non-combat military divisions like Intelligence. However, when a woman is detailed to such a division she remains within the limited female hierarchy of command. The Army has 534 generals. Only two—Brig. Gen. Mildred Bailey, head of the WAC, and Brig. Gen. Lillian Dunlap, head of the Army Nursing Corps—are women.

Other significant issues include the stipulation that an under-21 woman needs parental consent to join the WAC, all women must be single until basic training is over, and a woman cannot draw automatically a dependency allowance for her husband. A man receives an unquestioned allowance for his wife, even if she works.

But women soldiers are mostly content, even enthusiastic. And Vietnam seems very far away from the green rolling hills of Fort McClellan.

The young male soldiers who come, sometimes from other bases, to Fort McClellan's Officers' Club on Saturday night, are much more concerned with the war. But when a Viet vet, slightly in his cups, recalled his combat experience, a good-looking WAC lieutenant gently told him, "Let's forget about all that and have some fun."

Parade Space Idea Adopted

by Lloyd Shearer

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE PRESIDENT

Can We Get These Two Space Men Together?

Dear Mr. President:

On the anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution last November 7, the Russians displayed in Moscow's Red Square a new missile that they boasted could hit a rocket weekend from orbit. Though our experts doubt the weapon's effectiveness, it poses a heavy peril.

For it is a dangerous first step toward militarizing space. Once the step is taken, the precedent is set for nations to bind the heavens with death weapons that are now only the wildest fantasies.

The Russians have since claimed that the weapon does not violate the 1963 United Nations resolution which requires all nations to refrain from orbiting weapons. They argued that the resolution "does not apply to the production of these weapons." The Soviets also said they do not intend to violate the resolution.

Nonetheless the time has come to affirm once more that space is an area for peaceful exploration, not a battleground. On January 27, when the Geneva multinational disarmament conference resumes its discussions, I believe we should do an extra-special thing to underscore our determination to explore space and other topics. It is my conviction that we should display our dedication to this objective.

I believe we could do so with a single bold gesture—by inviting a Russian cosmonaut to join an American astronaut for a ride in space. The two-man capsule, developed by both countries with eminent success, makes such a journey possible.

Soaring high above the propaganda and politics that divide our nations, two brave men would have the eyes of the world upon them. Importantly, they would appear not merely as a symbol but as positive proof that Americans and Russians can work together while agreeing to disagree on how they want to live. This would be a dramatic gesture indicating that we are prepared to live in peace and together explore the worlds beyond this world for the good of all men on earth.

For those people who say that the United States and the Soviet Union cannot co-operate in space, the fact is that we and the Russians have already worked together in taking scientific soundings in space.

Admittedly, we have reached only the first cautious agreements on joint space ventures. Following John Glenn's orbital flight in February 1962, President Kennedy and Chairman Khrushchev exchanged correspondence relating to past U.S.-Soviet efforts in space. A bilateral space agreement on June 4, 1962, provided for an exchange of satellite findings on the weather and the earth's magnetic fields and joint communications experiments. The communications project is the first to be completed. In 1964, we bounced signals off John T. in Goriz University and received back helpful reports from the Russians on the reception.

In the early days of aviation, there grew up a fraternity of flyers that united in this day. They were the first men to rise above this earth and the navies. Even when they found themselves at war in the skies, they never lost the basic regard for one another's skills and courage.

This same affinity, I believe, exists between the gallant handful of Americans and Russians who have made the first ventures into the uncharted space above us. Regrettably, there have been few direct contacts between the astronauts and cosmonauts. But on those rare occasions when they have met, there has been an immediate rapport.

For example, at the Paris Air Show last June, while diplomats were hung up on a point of protocol, Soviet and American spacemen managed to arrange their own get-together. Astronauts James McDivitt and Edward White, by all reports, had a great time comparing notes with cosmonaut Yuri Gagarin.

Yet [with] the same adventurous cloth, graduates of the same rigorous training, educated by the same meticulous—to go beyond the farthest frontiers of the skies—it is hardly conceivable that such men could not treat each other in fulfillment of a common goal.

Russian and American space scientists, guided by a tradition that scientific research belongs to all men, have been even more eager to co-operate. On a person-to-person basis, they have already exchanged more [illegible] than their governments have officially sanctioned.

Certainly, the great space adventure goes beyond national rivalries. And the men who have shared the experiences, both in the laboratories and on the frontiers of space, have been the first to realize it.

Secrecy should not be an obstacle to a joint space flight. American astronaut have been conditioned to speedy that a Soviet co-pilot could learn little new from a joint flight in one of our space capsules, minimal peril? This could be resolved by inviting the Russians to choose whether the pair ride in a Russian or American capsule.

The only serious objections I can foresee are those dictated by political motives. But again, these should not be insurmountable. It could be made clear from the start that a joint Soviet-American space flight is not a quick path to cure all Soviet-American differences. It would be merely a demonstration that these differences could be left here on earth.

There is no time to lose. We stand on the record's edge of decisions that could open space to peaceful exploration or turn it into a sky full of terror.

Mr. President, most of the people of the world would not look upon a joint space journey as a propaganda stunt. You yourself have invited the Russians to watch a launching at Cape Kennedy. Why not go another important step and invite one of their cosmonauts to join an American astronaut for a friendship flight into space?

Yours sincerely,

Jess Gorkin
EDITOR OF PARADE

On Jan. 9, 1966, Parade suggested that astronaut and cosmonaut "fly together to dramatize that space is for peaceful exploration."

MOSCOW.

Six years ago, on Jan. 9, 1966, Parade's editor Jess Gorkin, in an open letter to the Johnson Administration and in subsequent articles, suggested that the United States and the Soviet Union join forces in the peaceful exploration of outer space.

In furtherance of this idea, Parade recommended that the U.S. invite a Soviet cosmonaut to team up with an American astronaut for a joint space flight.

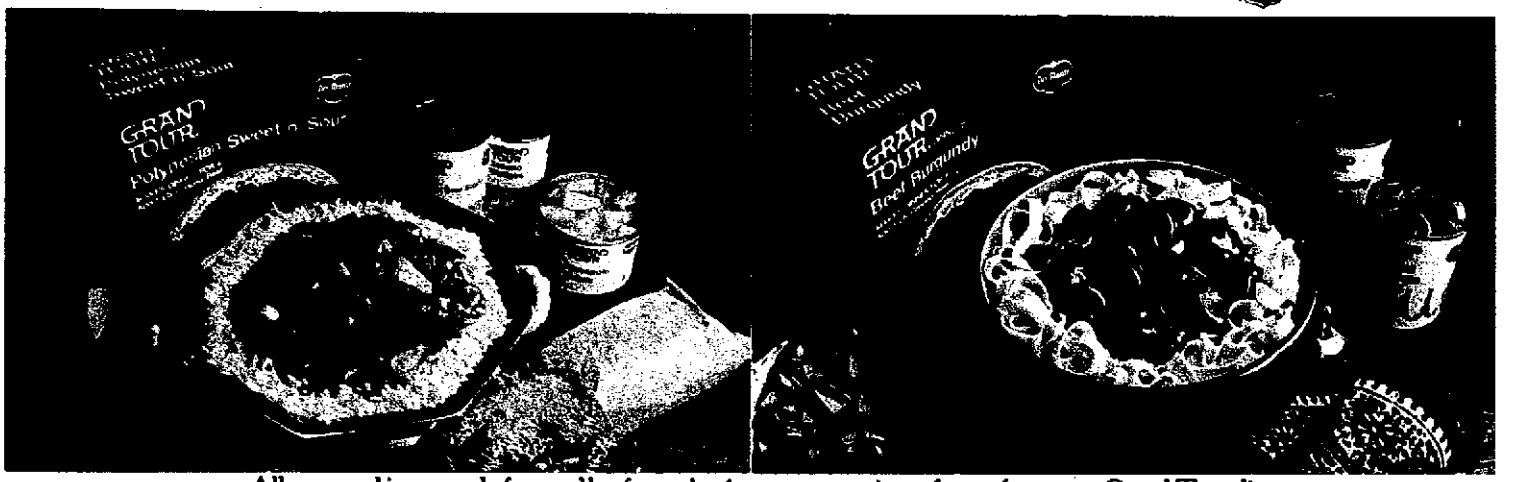

Parade believed then, as it does now, that outer space, the moon, the planets, other galaxies belonged to all mankind and that no nation because of its advanced technical know-how had the right to claim them as their own.

The Johnson Administration gave lip service to the idea but did little to implement it—this in contrast to the adoption by John F. Kennedy and the implementation by Lyndon Johnson of another Parade suggestion: the Washington-Moscow Hot Line, which was established in 1963.

"It is also a vindication of the judgment of many visionaries."

It was the Nixon Administration which really ran with the space ball.

Last month on May 24th, Nixon and Soviet Chairman Alexei Kosygin signed an eight-point agreement here concerning cooperation in the exploration and use of outer space for peaceful purposes, thus bringing to fruition consultations between the U.S.A. and the U.S.S.R. that started quietly back in October, 1970, when working groups from both countries met in Houston and Moscow.

The date is set

The agreement holds that sometime in 1975, U.S. astronauts and Soviet cosmonauts will meet in space in a joint docking rendezvous.

When that test comes to pass and a U.S. Apollo spacecraft with two astronauts aboard physically joins with a Soviet Soyuz spacecraft with two cosmonauts aboard, the whole world will be able to watch and hear the maneuver via television while it takes place 200 miles above the earth.

Thus for the next few years, starting next month, in preparation for that historic experiment, the American people are going to have Soviet spacemen in this country learning English and swapping their know-how while American spacemen undergo the same process in Russia. Project directors for the mission have been designated in both countries. For the U.S. it is Glynn S. Lunney of NASA and for the Soviets it's K. D. Bushuyev of the Soviet Academy.

What does this all mean to the average Soviet citizen? On the day Nixon and Kosygin signed their agreement I stopped half a dozen Muscovites and asked them.

Confused cabbie

Said one cabdriver: "It's an appealing idea but I don't really understand it. Frankly I would rather own a television set."

A Soviet psychologist offered the following opinion: "The agreement embraces all the right ideas because it presupposes working together with the Americans, exchanging ideas and reviewing each other's research programs. This probably signifies that some money will be saved in preventing duplication between the two countries and perhaps such money will be reallocated to other more needy and less abstract fields of our economy."

Cosmonauts Konstantin Fecktistov, Georgiy Beregovoy are shown Houston Space Center by Astronaut Frank Borman.

In Moscow: Cosmonaut Valentina Nikolayeva-Tereshkova presents a souvenir to U.S. Astronaut Neil Armstrong.

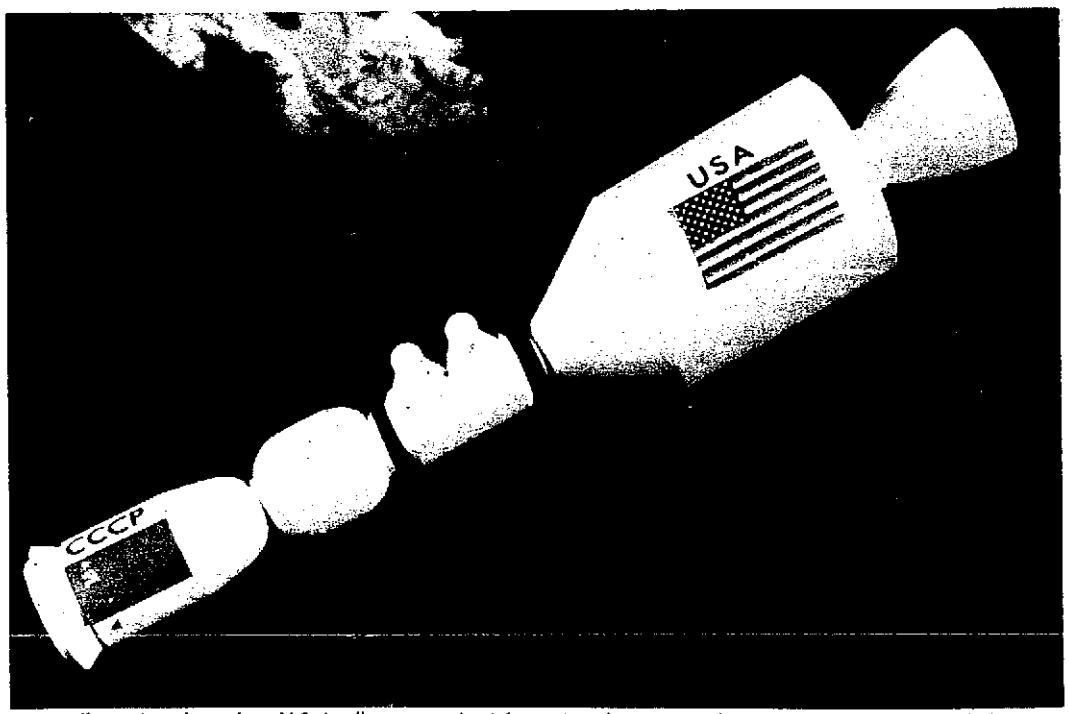

A schoolteacher volunteered: "Anything which brings people together, even in space, is a step in the right direction on earth." That seems to be the majority and typical opinion.

In the United States, Dr. Edward David, President Nixon's science adviser, pointed out that the space and science and technology agreements create "possibilities for cooperation between Soviet and American scientists in such important fields as the discovery of new sources of energy, the practical use of natural resources and high energy physics.

Building a bridge

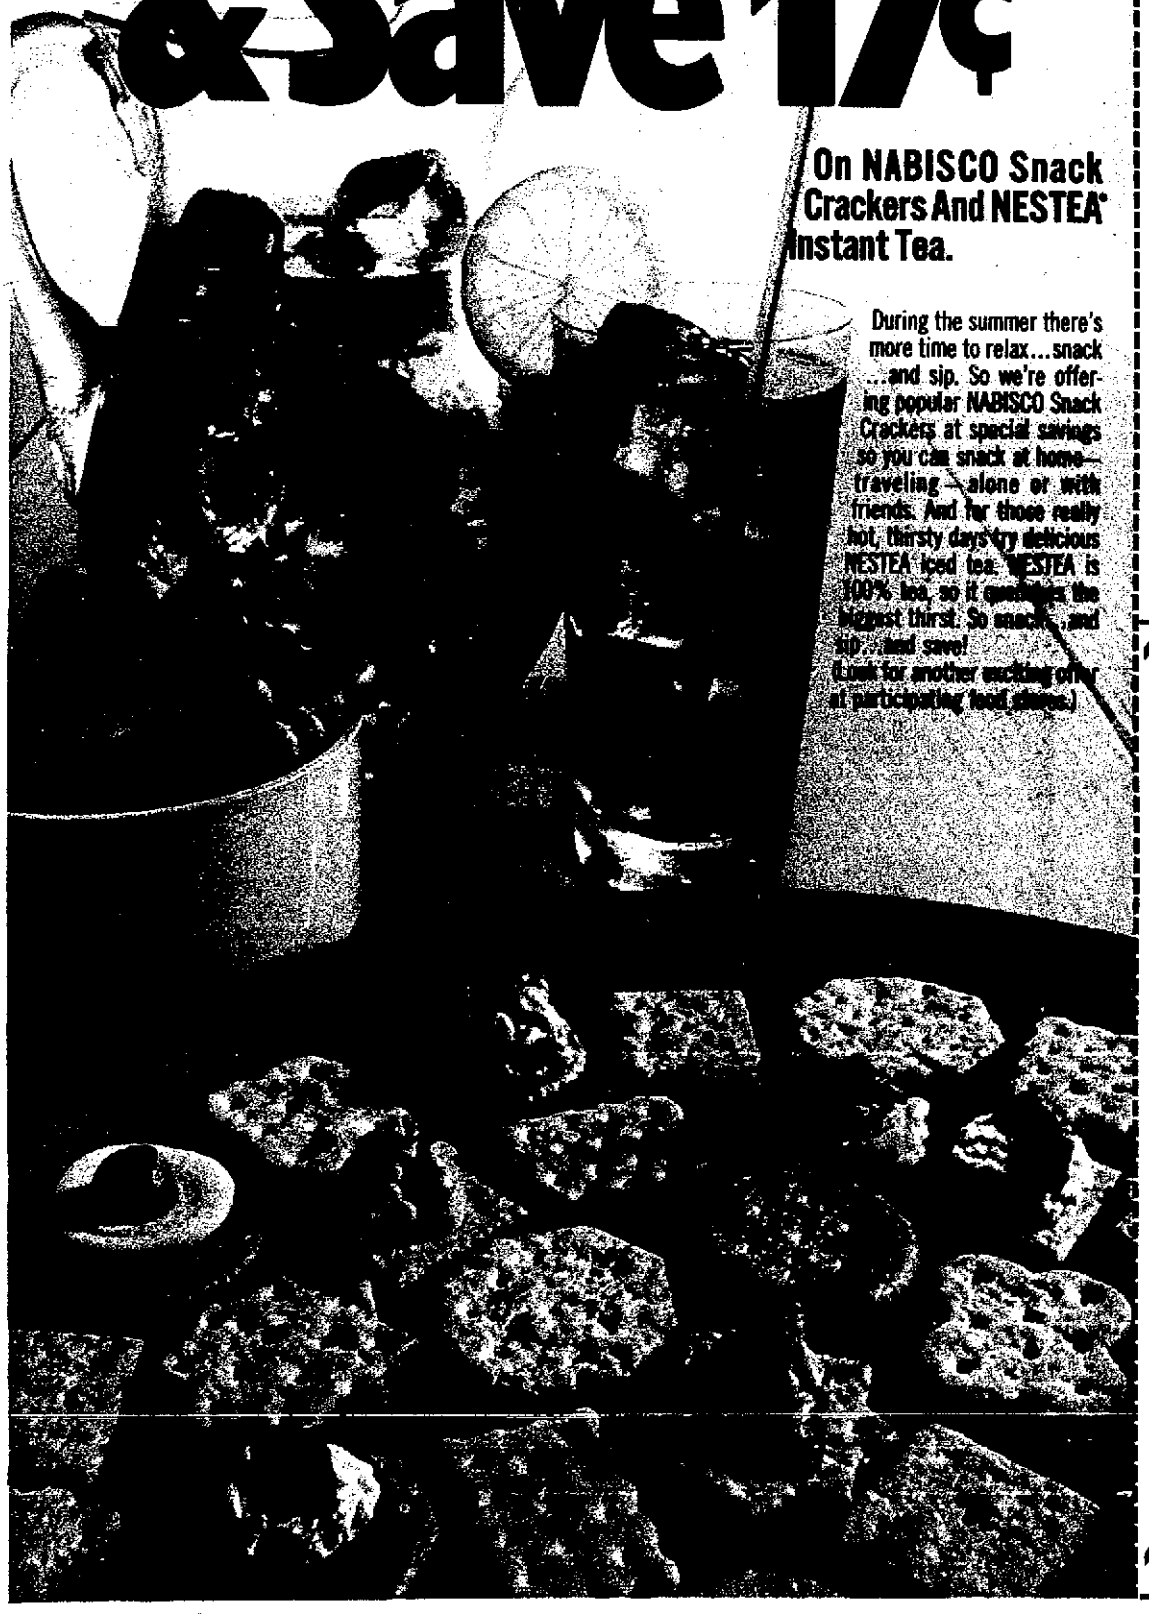

"The President's bold action in undertaking a joint U.S.-Soviet space venture," he continued, "is a significant step in international cooperation. It is also a vindication of the judgment of many visionaries. As they predicted, concrete and cooperative steps in the exploration of space can build a tangible bridge across the disparate thinking and culture of our two societies."

As to what it means to the typical American, it may well be summed up in a letter to Parade from Mrs. D. A. Powell of Portland, Oreg., "Space is an area for peaceful exploration, not a battleground."

NASA illustration shows how U.S Apollo spacecraft (right) and Soviet Soyuz will link up in space under an agreement signed in Moscow last month. A docking module between the two crafts will make the connection possible in 1975.

The Americanization of John and Yoko

John and Yoko have fallen in love with America, particularly New York City. "There's no place like New York for artists," says John. "The city breeds ideas. Like all of America, it's alive."

NEW YORK, N.Y.

John Lennon and Yoko Ono have fallen in love with America. But it is not yet clear whether their affection will be returned. The 31-year-old ex-Beatle and his 38-year-old Japanese wife are engaged in an epic battle to remain in this country.

What they're up against is a U.S. anti-drug immigration law. And John was convicted of marijuana possession in London in 1968. This is not the first time that alien celebrities and U.S. Immigration have clashed. The case of Charlie Chaplin is world-famous. But whereas Chaplin took a if you don't want me, I don't want you attitude, the Lennons are involved in an all-out struggle to remain here.

The highly publicized couple are hardly ragged immigrants leaving the wretched shores of Europe behind. Yet their reasons for desiring to stay here are compelling. They want to be reunited with Yoko's 8-year-old daughter, Kyoko, who is presently being hidden by her father, Anthony Cox, and his second wife, Melinda. And they want to practice their arts in the country where, as John Lennon puts it, "It's all happening.

"When the Roman Empire was at its peak, would you have wanted to live in Rome or in the outlying state, Great Britain?" asks John. "America is the 20th century and it's where Yoko and I want to be."

"I cannot possibly leave New York before I find Kyoko," says Yoko who was awarded legal custody of her daughter by a Texas court in March after school principal Mary Patricia Rives testified that Yoko's ex-husband and his wife had failed to provide adequate schooling for the child. But before the decision could take effect Tony and Melinda Cox disappeared with Kyoko.

"I worry about Kyoko all the time," says her mother. "The Coxes wander from place to place, from commune to commune, each time changing Kyoko's name. John and I have no way to tell her we love her, except on a record we hope she'll hear. I'm so afraid that if we're forced to leave America, Kyoko will be lost to us forever."

The Lennons work in their small Greenwich Village apartment. On the wall behind their bed hangs a large map of Manhattan.

Music is composed on the old piano in their sky-lit bedroom. John's inventiveness fits in well with Yoko's imagination.

U.S. is best

John Lennon insists that even after Kyoko is found, he and Yoko will stay here if they possibly can. "We want Kyoko with us, and the U.S. is the best place for us all to be."

At the moment John and Yoko live in a modest apartment in New York's Greenwich Village. One room triples as a cooking, dining, and office area. The other is a sky-lit bedroom.

The bedroom is dominated by a large antique bed facing a constantly-on color television set. The Lennons are addicted to American television, particularly All in the Family and old movies.

A piano with a needlepoint-covered bench, mirrored dressing table, and a map of Manhattan above the bed complete the room's furnishings. Here in the bedroom, the couple work from noon to dusk, composing songs, and thinking up ideas for poems, films, and illustrations.

John's inventive sense of fun fits in well with Yoko's whimsical imagination. An early action-poem of Yoko's called Beat Piece is complete in one line: "Listen to a heart beat." An avant film they made together, Legs, features 333 pairs of naked legs.

Music recorded

In the evenings the Lennons record their music at a studio, and on the weekends they visit friends or bike-ride around the city.

"We're really a middle-aged couple leading a quiet existence," insists Yoko. "And certainly we're as much against drug abuse as anyone. The government may think we're free-living, free-loading youth, but that's confusing us with our constituency. Our only hobby is work."

John and Yoko find New York a good city to work in. "There's no place like New York for artists," says John. "The city breeds ideas—like all of America it's alive and I feel changed by it. I love malteds. I love the wide-open spaces you can go to on vacations. If we can stay here there are so many places I want to visit: New Orleans, Memphis, and Nashville where all the music was born. I feel American. Even my accent is at home here."

And many Americans have stepped forward to welcome the Lennons' presence here. Three universities have offered them teaching posts. And in a quiet irony, the American Bar Association's Committee on Drug Abuse, financed in part by the Justice Department, has asked them to record anti-drug commercials.

Artists of distinction

Prominent citizens both here and in England have asked Immigration to let them stay. Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York City has termed the deportation proceedings against them an "unusual and harsh action" and stated that "artists of their distinction should be allowed to remain here."

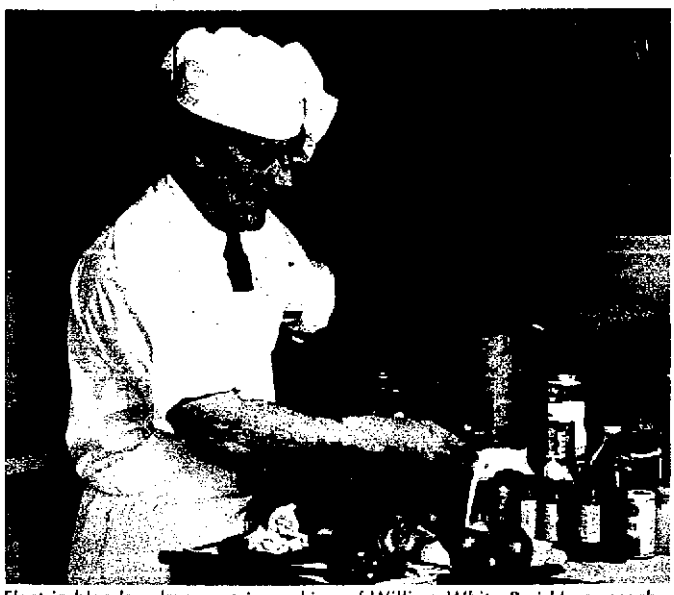

Britain's Lord Harlech, ex-ambassador to the United States and former escort of Jackie Kennedy Onassis, has also testified to Immigration on the Lennons' behalf.

New legislation may also help. Sen. Alan Cranston (D., Calif.) has introduced a bill stipulating that conviction for marijuana possession is not an absolute bar to immigration. "The present rule is cruelly insensitive and inflexible," he says. "Arbitrary laws that provide no leeway for compassion and forgiveness run counter to all democratic principles."

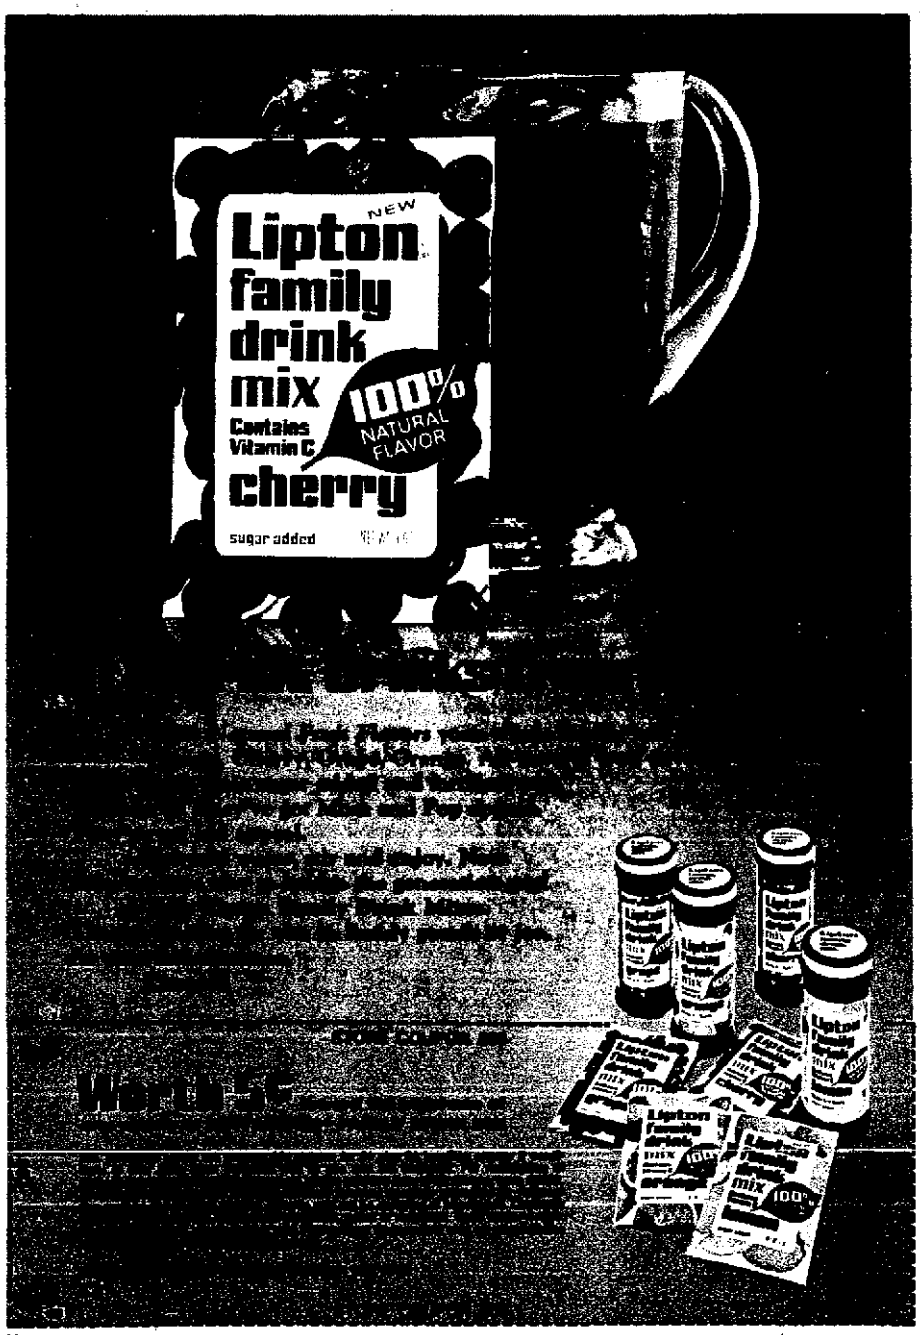

Cranston's bill is not expected to reach a vote until 1973. The Lennons hope for compassion before that. But no matter how long it takes, they will continue to seek a way to make America their home. I. B.

Bike-riding through the city, John stops to buy Yoko a hot dog. He prefers malteds. John Lennon says America has changed him. "I feel American," he tells his friends.

Electric blender plays part in making of William White Parish's gazpacho.

Summer Soup With Spanish Accent

by Beth Merriman

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

BAY HEAD, N.J.

When the heat's on, the herbs are fresh, and summertime living starts to be easy, think of a gazpacho—a cold Spanish soup with a great many variations. The one William White Parish prepares at his summer home for weekending guests requires a blender, a sharp knife, a cutting board, a wide-mouth gallon or half-gallon jar, and a bit of time.

Bill Parish, an ex-New York publishing executive currently working in the photo department of the White House, has been cooking since he was 12 years old—most of his knowledge imparted by his globe-trotting gourmet father. Bill, who claims he could handle chopsticks at the age of 5, has been a cooking luminary in Greenwich Village for years, preparing gourmet dishes for large parties as well as being the master chef for the Amateur Comedy Club. He also has a cookbook on soups, stews and chowders in the works.

There are four "musts" to Bill Parish's gazpacho. 1. Make the soup a day before serving. 2. Keep it bottled in the refrigerator, almost frozen, until just before using, then shake heartily and serve. 3. Chill the soup plates in the freezer. 4. Go out of your way to use fresh ingredients.

Gazpacho

- 6 large tomatoes, peeled and finely chopped
- 1 cucumber, pared and finely chopped
- 1 small green pepper, finely chopped
- 2 celery stalks, finely chopped
- 20 sprigs parsley, snipped
- 10 scallions, finely chopped
- 2 cans (14 oz. each) ready-to-serve chicken broth
- 1 can cold water (use broth can to measure)
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 tablespoon wine vinegar
- 2 garlic cloves, minced
- 1 1/4 teaspoon salt (or to taste)
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper (or to taste)
- 2 drops Tabasco (or to taste)
- 1 lemon, sliced paper thin
- 1/2 teaspoon Ac'cent
- 2 tablespoons fresh dill*
- 1 teaspoon fresh thyme*
- 1 teaspoon fresh chervil*
- 2 sprigs fresh mint (leaves only)*

*or 1/4 this amount dried

Combine all ingredients in a wide-mouthed jar or jug. Stir or shake well. Taste and add more seasoning if desired. Puree half the mixture in an electric blender, about three cups at a time. Empty pureed mixture back into jar. Stir or shake and taste again. Cover. Chill overnight or longer. Shake well. Serve in chilled mugs or soup bowls, garnished with croutons. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

What Else Is Cooking

FORBIDDEN SWEETS: The end of a meal is looked upon with dread by most dedicated dieters, since it's the time when all the day's efforts might be lost in one mouthful of something sinfully sweet. Yet a raging sweet tooth can be foiled, if you take a little time to whip up your own low-calorie version of dessert. A booklet of such recipes is offered free of charge from The Diet Workshop, 594 Merrick Avenue, East Meadow, New York 11554, upon receipt of a large stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Here's a sample recipe for a dessert you won't regret the morning after:

Peppermint Bavarian

1 packet unflavored gelatin
¼ cup cold water
1½ cups skim milk
4 packets artificial sweetener
¼ teaspoon peppermint extract
4 drops red food coloring
⅓ cup water
⅓ cup skim milk powder

Soften gelatin in cold water for 5 minutes. Heat 1½ cups milk and sweetener, stirring constantly, until bubbles form around edges of pan. Add to gelatin and stir until dissolved. Add extract and coloring, then chill until slightly thickened. Pour ⅓ cup water into a 1-quart bowl. Sprinkle ⅓ cup milk over surface and beat until stiff. Fold into gelatin mixture and spoon lightly into sherbert glasses.

CAN CHEESE BE FROZEN? In general, the answer is yes, if it is relatively fresh and stored in the unopened package, properly wrapped and thawed in the refrigerator overnight before using. Of course the freezer temperature should be 0° to 4° and refrigerator temperature 38° to 42°.

Natural cheddar, in all its forms, will maintain excellent quality for 6 weeks; Natural Swiss in chunk or slices for 6 to 8 weeks, process cheese for 4 months; individually wrapped slices of "American singles" and loaf cheeses for 4 months; cream cheese in its original package plus foil overwrap for 2 months. Leftover chunks of natural cheeses, properly wrapped, will keep well for from 4 to 6 weeks. Sour cream dips and neufchatel do not freeze well.

ICEBERG LETTUCE once more in plentiful supply! After months of short supply and high prices, shoppers can look forward to a bonanza in produce departments.

To core a head of iceberg lettuce, hold its core end down and whack it on a counter. Then lift or twist out the core with the fingers. Hold cored end up under a stream of cold tap water. Drain, core end down. Store in tightly closed plastic bag or crisper in the refrigerator.

To shred, cut a head of iceberg lettuce in half with sharp knife. Place cut side down on cutting board and shred finely across the heart. Or make "rafts" by cutting the head in crosswise slices, to be topped with other salad ingredients of your choice.

To save the date:

Early Warning Network Helps Prevent Home Accidents

by Theodore Irwin

In the emergency room of the MacNeal Memorial Hospital in Berwyn, Ill., an intern cleans and sews up wounds of a man whose hand was cut by electric fan blades. Description of the accident and the appliance that caused it is reported immediately.

BERWYN, ILL.

A restless 2-year-old, sniffling with a cold, trips over the extension cord of a steam vaporizer on his toy chest. As the vaporizer top flips off, hot water spills over him, severely burning his back and face.

A housewife, preparing dinner, starts to insert a beater in an electric mixer. Her thumb drops down and inadvertently switches on the machine. Whirling blades fracture two fingers.

As a 10-year-old boy rides his new bike in front of his home, his foot slips off the pedal. He falls hard, breaking his arm.

All these accident victims were rushed to a hospital emergency room for treatment. But their cases did not end there. Through a new, highly sophisticated, coast-to-coast early-warning network, steps were taken to prevent similar mishaps.

Top was loose

The vaporizer, which had a loose-fitting top, was remodeled by the manufacturer so that the top locks on and only a small amount of hot water can spill out. On the mixer, the maker placed the switch where it cannot be turned on accidentally. Also, the motor now goes from "Off" to "Low Speed," rather than directly to "High Speed." As for the bike, the bicycle industry agreed to provide pedals with enough sliding friction to keep a rider's shoe from slipping.

Behind the chain reaction is a remarkable computerized program called NEISS (National Electronic Injury Surveillance System), set up by the Food and Drug Administration's Bureau of Product Safety. Launched last July, it hooks up 119 hospital emergency rooms around the nation to gather a daily profile of injuries related to products used in and around the home, including playgrounds. Of the 20 million such home accidents each year, about two out of five are treated in emergency rooms.

1700 cases reported

Here in Berwyn, a middle-income Chicago suburb, the big, sprawling MacNeal Memorial Hospital has been one of the first links in the reporting network. MacNeal's eight busy emergency examining rooms also serve a dozen surrounding towns with a total population of 350,000. Since last September, the hospital has recorded 1700 cases associated with consumer items. Injuries ranged from contusions to amputation of fingers and legs.

The reporting process begins when a specially trained hospital employee records on a teletypewriter the coded facts on each accident. Perforated tape is then loaded in a special "reader" on the machine. Between midnight and 3 a.m., a switching device on a computer in Washington automatically polls MacNeal and the other 118 hospitals, in effect asking "What's up?" and reading the tapes. Next morning, the Injury Data and Control Center in Washington reviews the cases and decides—largely on the basis of severity or frequency—which should get priority follow-ups.

When one of FDA's 700 field investigators is assigned to a product-injury category, such as vaporizers, he interviews the patients for fuller details. A sample of the product may be obtained, then tested in a laboratory. The report to NEISS headquarters is analyzed for possible action. If remedies are indicated, manufacturers or industry representatives are summoned to Washington to consider NEISS proposals. In some cases, the Bureau can compel compliance through regulations.

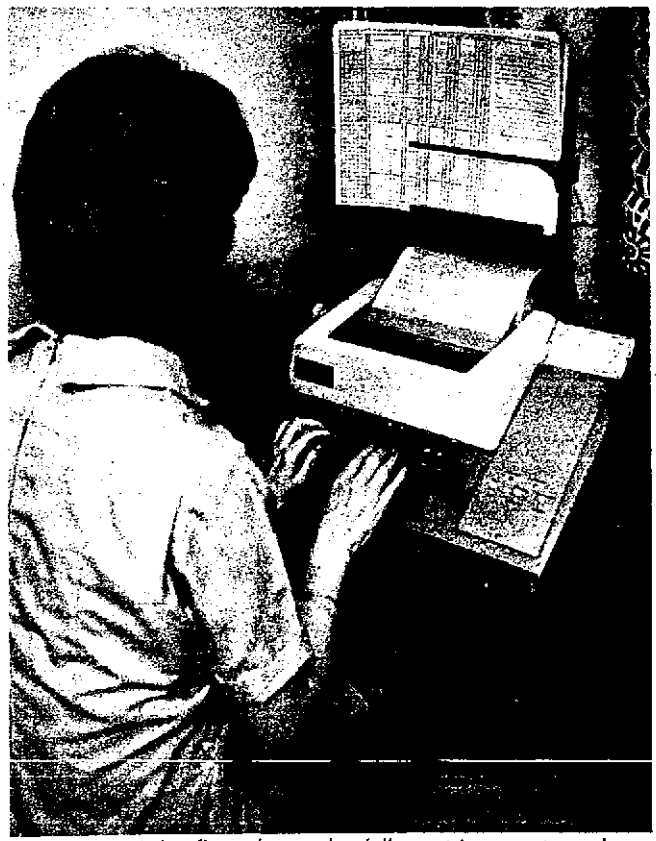

"It's a great idea," says George Heidkamp, MacNeal Hospital's administrator. "We got into NEISS because as a community hospital we regard this a health-related activity. In identifying dangerous products we help pass on to the public information they otherwise would not have."

Malcolm Jensen, director of Washington bureau, checks a computer readout which gives him the facts of an accident being treated in emergency room.

Accident-triggering products run the gamut from faulty household appliances to flimsy juvenile furniture, sports equipment, toys and flammable fabrics. Six children have died when their clothes were caught in playground slide handrails or on a protruding bolt. Toddlers have choked to death when caught in netting-covered playpens. Poorly guarded home workshop table saws and woodworking joiner-planers have severed men's fingers.

Besides detecting injury "epidemics," the Bureau of Product Safety is exploring particular items. Among them are plastic-type shoes which increase the risk of falling, electric blankets which cause fires, and synthetic flammable Christmas trees. Some investigations are set off by requests from Congressmen and even manufacturers.

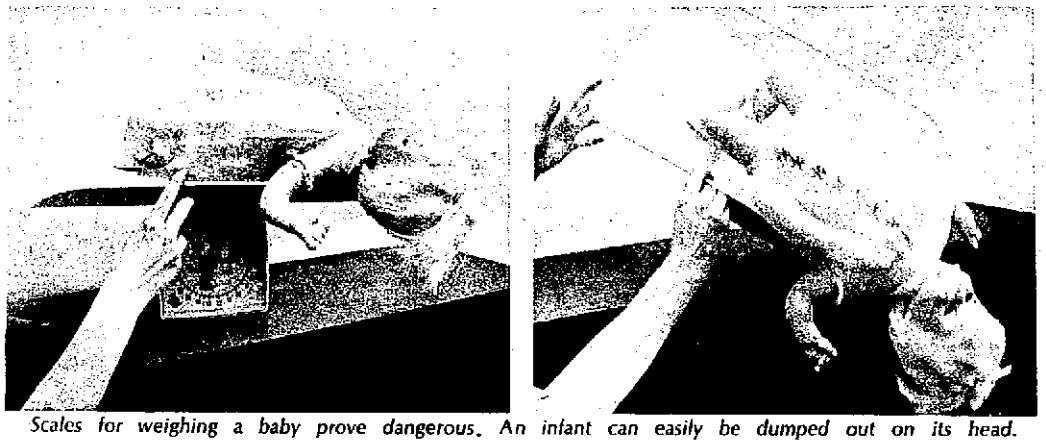

This year, 36,000 reported injuries will be investigated, 22,000 through phone interviews and 14,000 in depth, on the scene. Among children's hazards alone, over 100 different products are tested every month.

To date, the payoffs in life-and-limb-saving action through NEISS have been impressive. Some outstanding examples:

Knob problem

- On certain electric stoves, control knobs are easily turned on by youngsters or by adults who brush up against them. The heating element doesn't turn red, yet it's hot enough to burn an unwary person. After in-depth investigations, manufacturers consented to modify placement of the knobs. Under new standards, a warning light for each burner is to be placed conspicuously on a panel or on the stove itself.
- Wringer washing machines have grabbed the hands of youngsters who touch the rollers, pulling in their arms. The industry is voluntarily installing a mechanism that automatically releases a hand or arm.
- In-depth investigations and analyses of over 400 bicycle injuries and 52 deaths reported through NEISS—out of some million bike accidents a year—revealed major flaws. The government has asked the Bicycle Manufacturers Association to revise its standards to include these safety features: additional light reflectors to make the bike visible in the dark from the side as well as the rear; redesigned and relocated gear shifts, formerly mounted on horizontal bars, to minimize groin injuries; pedals to hold feet more firmly, and lower seat posts to increase the rider's control of the bike.
- In cribs, children have choked when their heads were caught between slats. Regulations will fix the proper distance between bars.

Along the way, NEISS has picked up some weird and lethal products. A "Worm Probe," to collect bait for fishing, consisted of two wood-handled metal rods attached to an electric extension cord. After an area of earth is soaked with water, the rods are inserted, and theoretically the tingling sensation drives up the frantic worms. Sounds great? Sadly, the Probe electrocuted eight people. The Bureau issued a public warning, then ordered a recall of the gadget under the Federal Hazardous Substances Act. Recently, when the Bureau heard that the Probes were shipped to Belgium, it tipped off the Belgian authorities.

Scales for weighing a baby prove dangerous. An infant can easily be dumped out on its head.

New hazards

Trends in potentially dangerous products keep cropping up. Currently, snowmobiles get involved in accidents when they're driven, without adequate lights, across fields where unseen wires or chains can break the rider's neck. In addition, snowmobiles lacking shock absorbers bounce the rider out when he hits a bump. NEISS is studying casualty reports and planning new industry-wide standards. And investigators are looking sharply at water beds, to make sure that they're well insulated against electricity.

How are the nation's manufacturers reacting to the new surveillance system?

"At the outset," says Dr. Robert Verhalen, NEISS's director of Injury Data Management, "some manufacturers were alarmed or resentful, until we explained what we're doing—that we're not on a witchhunt. We want to help them make safer products.

"By and large they're very cooperative when confronted with proof of defects. Clearly, voluntary changes are not made as fast as when the law makes them mandatory. If they use our data as a basis for modifying a product, manufacturers can be just as happy as satisfied consumers. In fact, manufacturers have gone so far as to offer us financial support but, of course, we can't accept such funds."

NEISS's value goes beyond the obvious goal of protecting consumers. Its up-to-date intelligence from all over the nation will be applied by educators in much-needed safety campaigns. Plaintiffs' lawyers can introduce the findings into evidence in injury cases, while manufacturers can design safer products that will keep them from being sued. And legislators will be encouraged to pass laws which will reduce consumer injuries.

Speaking for the nation's hospitals, Dr. Madison B. Brown, head of the American Hospital Association, comments:

"Hospital emergency rooms treat the same accidents over and over. Patching people up, but not correcting the cause of the injury, takes the valuable time of doctors and adds to the consumer's medical costs. NEISS is a cooperative experiment in preventive medicine. Health care no longer means just treating people when they get sick, it means keeping them well."

Expansion foreseen

Looking ahead, Malcolm W. Jensen, director of the Bureau of Product Safety, foresees expansion of NEISS monitoring to private doctors' offices, community clinics, and even the home.

"The average consumer," Jensen points out, "can't tell in advance whether the product he buys is going to be defective or dangerous."

With the NEISS watchdogs pinning down the culprits, we're moving into a new era in product safety, based on hard facts rather than guesswork. Twenty million home injuries a year, too often tragic, should not be tolerated. And now, perhaps, they needn't be.

After several crib accidents, one was brought in for tests. Life-size doll was used to show that bars were so far apart that a baby left in the crib could strangle.

HOMEMADE JAM MADE EASY.

That's right.

To put up a mouth-watering jam, jelly, or preserve you don't have to put up with all the cooking, sealing, and messiness that used to go along with it.

Take Strawberry jam. Now all you need to make it are fresh, ripe strawberries, sugar, lemon juice, and Certo.® (A half bottle will help you make about 5½ cups of jam. Just follow the quick and easy recipe you'll find with many others tucked behind every Certo label.)

And all you do is crush the strawberries, mix everything, and stir for three minutes. You don't even have to cook.

Then put it all in any tight-lidded food container, pint-size or smaller, and let stand till it sets.

Pop it into the refrigerator, and that's that.

As fruity and natural-tasting a homemade jam as ever mellowed a cracker.

And what you don't plan on serving within three weeks, you can freeze.

When it thaws, it'll still have the same fresh-fruit flavor it had the day you made yourself a jam.

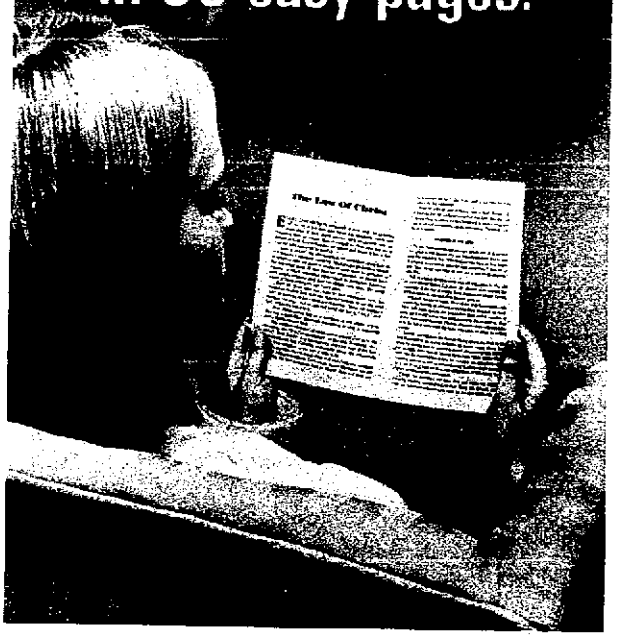

Without jamming up your home.

Now making homemade jam is as simple as mixing fruit, sugar, and Certo.

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

EDITED
by LLOYD SHEARER

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES.

RIGHT- AND LEFT-HAND SUMMITRY Several weeks ago President Nixon, accompanied by 182 reporters, photographers, and TV newsmen, flew to Moscow.

The ostensible reason was to sign a series of agreements with the Soviets in the fields of space, pollution, trade, medicine, and armaments.

The basic reason, however, was to enlist Soviet cooperation in halting the Vietnamese war before the November Presidential election.

The Soviets played along with the show-case reason, but Brezhnev, Kosygin, and Podgorny would do nothing to stop the war.

Lip service aside, quite the contrary.

While they were signing noble-sounding agreements with their right hands, agreements noisily trumpeted by the largest U.S. news corps ever to accompany Nixon overseas, the Russians were moving with their left hands, those closest to their Communist hearts, fresh shipments of sophisticated rockets and other war materiel to North Vietnam.

These were moved across China by rail to help the North Vietnamese beat President Nixon's blockade of their ports.

Vasseli Tolstikov, the Soviet Ambassador to China, returned to Moscow a day before Nixon and his travel troupe arrived. Tolstikov reported to Gromyko and Brezhnev that China had promised "to place no obstacle in the way" of Soviet and other Eastern European aid to North Vietnam. Moreover, he underscored, they had promised to facilitate such shipments from the two main Chinese railway terminals at Chungking and Nanking via lesser known railway spurs and roads into North Vietnam. While some Western diplomats speculated that the Soviets would be reluctant to freight their latest type SAM missiles across China in view of the sensitive state of Sino-Soviet relations, one highly-placed Soviet official confided to Intelligence Report, "We will supply North Vietnam with anything it needs. We cannot afford to do less. Hanoi is pressuring us to forego our ideological quarrels with China and to help us defeat the American blockade.

"By expanding the war, you Americans may have helped us to improve our relationship with China -- something until now we have been unable to do. So we thank you, and we are only too happy to sign with you agreements in the sphere of pollution and other important subjects."

A ROMANTIC RETURN TO YESTERYEAR: PALE YELLOW CHIFFON WITH RUFFLES.

LOOKING BACKWARD Women's fashions have once again taken a look back toward gracious days gone by. Influenced by movies such as "Nicholas and Alexandra," which won an Oscar for its period costumes, there is a new appreciation of the romantic dress that is soft and clinging, and flutters in the breeze.

Designer houses like New York's Junior Theme are showing a number of graceful, garden-party gowns in their latest collections. Fashion experts agree elegance endures--"because it sustains illusion."

WORKING GIRL'S NO. 1 FRIEND Elizabeth Koontz holds perhaps America's most important post of particular concern to women. As head of the Labor Department's Women's Bureau, it is her job to keep the government and nation informed of the economic and social progress of American women.

"Girls still have this Cinderella-Prince Charming image of life," says Mrs. Koontz."Our goal is to share with them the economic realities of life, and to acquaint them with their responsibility to demand certain types of training--like management training--and to tell them what the law requires of employers."

The flow of Women's Bureau energy does not stop at the employment door. Mrs. Koontz testified in Congress on behalf of the Equal Rights Amendment, and is an active behind-the-scenes supporter of legislation for child care centers.

"The fact is that women with small children do work, and the children often have no place to go. Day care is a necessity, but I don't know how quickly we'll have it. What some people forget is that the wealthy have always had child care. The flak comes when we try to provide it for the poor. In order to please women, politicians play lip service to child care services, but one can't be sure what they'll do in the clinch."

Mrs. Koontz also suggests: "There should be Social Security accounts set up for housewives into which husbands can pay. That way, not only is the wife protected but, should she die, a man could hire a housekeeper to help care for the children instead of remarrying quickly for mere convenience, rather than for love."

Anyone who's old enough to smoke is old enough to make up his own mind.

By now, as an adult, you must have read and heard all that's been written and said for and against cigarettes. And come to your own conclusions.

If you don't smoke, we aren't likely to get you to start.

But if you like to smoke and have decided to continue smoking, we'd like to tell you a few facts about a cigarette you might like to continue with.

We refer, of course, to Vantage. Vantage gives you real flavor, like any high 'tar' and nicotine cigarette you ever smoked, without the high 'tar' and nicotine. And since it is the high 'tar' and nicotine that many critics of cigarettes seem most opposed to, even they should have some kind words for Vantage.

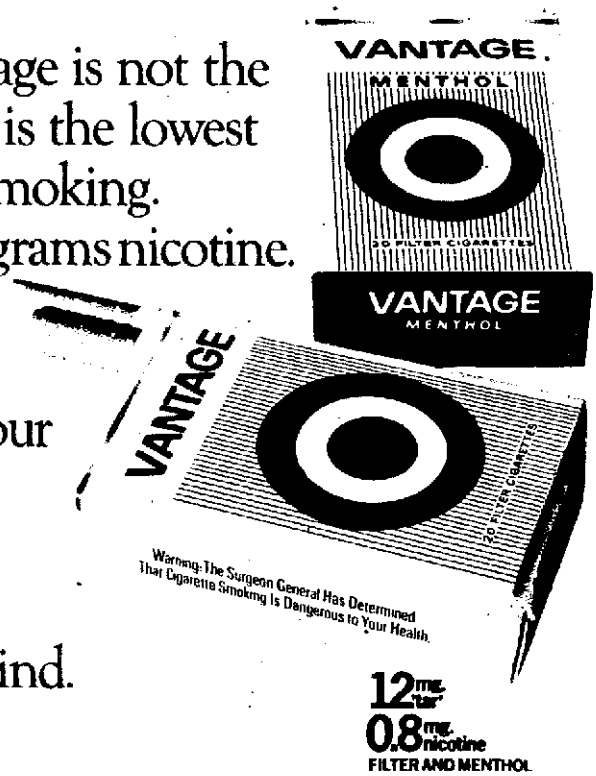

We don't want to mislead you. Vantage is not the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette. But it is the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette you'll enjoy smoking. It has only 12 milligrams 'tar' and 0.8 milligrams nicotine.

With anything lower, you'd have to work so hard getting taste through the filter that you'd end up going back to your old brand.

With Vantage, you won't want to.

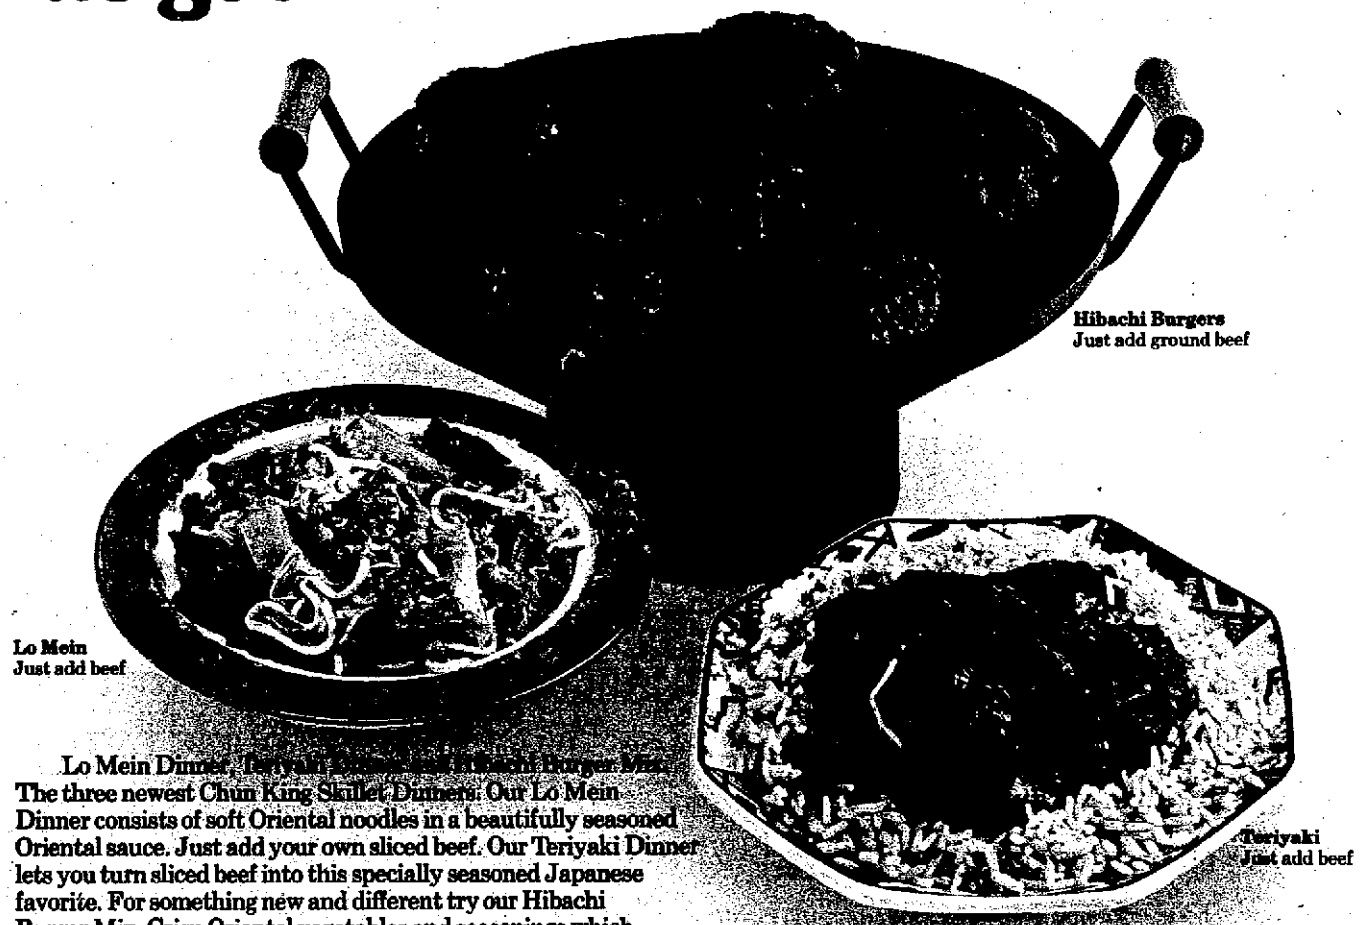

Don't take our word for it.

Buy a pack and make up your own mind.

THE CHILD-BEATERS

Why do people beat their children? Are they insane? Are they pathological? Are they alcoholics?

With the exception of a very small group of parents who are definitely psychotic, child-beaters are normal people who, unable to share their emotions with others, express their frustration in violence.

So declares Dr. Edward Lenoski, director of the Child Evaluation Center at the University of Southern California Medical Center.

"If you hear your neighbor mercilessly beating her child," he advises, "it is usually better not to call the police. If you can, try to engage your neighbor in conversation. Say to her, 'It sounds as if you were having a lot of trouble. Is there something I can do to help you?'

"If that doesn't work," Dr. Lenoski says, "the rights of the child take precedence over everything else, and the neighbor must call in someone in authority." Preferably some authority other than the police.

"In Hawaii," Dr. Lenoski points out, "child-abuse cases are handled by the Welfare Department. A flying squad from the Welfare Department comes to the house where a child-beating is reported. Not only do they handle the immediate emergency, but they bend every effort to solve problems at home."

Child-beaters can be rehabilitated, pediatrician Lenoski claims, but not by jail. Moreover they must be rehabilitated, because the child who is beaten, if he grows up, beats his own children in turn, and the cycle continues indefinitely.

"In Denver, several years ago," Lenoski reports, "64 people who had been convicted of beating children were visited at least once a week by lay workers. These workers came as friends, to help with problems of any kind--washing, ironing, grocery-shopping.

"For a long time, the workers were turned away at the door, but they kept coming back. Finally they were able to make friends with the child-abusers.

"Before the advent of the lay workers, all these parents had been psychiatrically tested. One characteristic was common to all--they were 'isolationists.' They trusted no one and could not share their problems with anyone."

After a year of the visiting program the parents were again tested. They had changed and learned how to share a crisis with friends. Now, some five years later, these parents, once vicious child-abusers, are behaving normally. Their children have been returned to them. No longer are the children beaten. They are leading happy, normal lives.

Apparently child-beaters can be rehabilitated and cured. The problem is to identify them before their children suffer too much harm.

RUBBING IT IN

The spread of "massage parlors" in a number of cities is beginning to rub off on the literary market with the publication of several books offering "instruction" in the art of home-massage.

The books point out -- both in text and illustrations -- the difference between "ordinary" massage and "erotic" massage.

Brisk sales are reported.

BAGGAGE CARRIERS

U.S. Embassy personnel are supposed to look after American interests abroad. But all too often, they are obliged to act as lackeys for traveling VIP's.

Junketing Congressmen, in particular, are pampered. Embassy staffs provide them with information, make their appointments, arrange their accommodations and sometimes carry their luggage. The State Department has gone as far as to publish explicit instructions on the care and feeding of Congressmen.

The 36-page booklet is called "Handbook for Congressional Foreign Travel" and is stamped "For Limited Use Only."

"Baggage should be delivered to the Congressmen's rooms," directs the handbook. "At the earliest possible moment after arrival...get the keys in advance so members can go directly to their rooms... arrange for ice, water and food, if appropriate to be in the rooms of the party upon arrival..."

Not only do the embassies pamper Congressmen, but they occasionally are pressed into taking care of Congressmen's friends, too. Some close friends of Congressman James Kee (D., W. Va.) for example, recently visited Madrid. Kee instructed the State Department to take good care of them. State dutifully cabled Madrid and asked the embassy to extend "all appropriate courtesies."

This included flowers to be placed in their hotel room. The cable directed that the card be inscribed "Welcome Betty Ann and Bart, from Jim Kee."

Kee paid for the flowers, but the taxpayers were stuck for the delivery service.

COED CORRECTION

Reform schools are going coed in Wisconsin. The state's correctional division has announced that some 25 girls are being assigned to a juvenile delinquent school in a rural area where 200 boys already are quartered. The object: to make the environment "more normal" and thus help speed rehabilitation. If this risky experiment works out, some boys may be transferred later to a school for girls near Madison.

Two ways to perk up a cookout.

For your fresh garden salad, use a tangy dressing made with pure, natural Heinz Cider Vinegar.

For real barbecue flavor, nothing glorifies your hamburgers like tomato-rich Heinz Barbecue Sauce.

Two ways to save a nickel.

Off to a Fast Start in Life

by Eleanor Moore

Best known of all the Atoms is Cheryl Toussaint, here edging Russian champion Nadeadha Kolesnikova in the 800 meters.

BROOKLYN, N.Y.

If this year's American women's track and field team runs off with more Olympic medals than ever before, it will be due primarily to the efforts of a 38-year-old lawyer and his team of gritty, dedicated, and dashing girls.

Fred Thompson, an American Broadcasting Company lawyer, has parlayed a 12-year concern for his native Brooklyn ghetto neighborhood into an internationally renowned girls track team—the Atoms. And the 50-member Atoms Club stands a good chance of landing as many as 12 women on the team that will compete at the Olympic Games in Munich, Germany, in late August.

College is goal

The fact that a few of the Atoms might win Olympic medals doesn't excite the founder-coach as much as the probability that more Atoms than ever before will be attending college in the fall. Thompson is not an ordinary coach, and his mission is not merely meters and hurdles.

Thompson, who started the Atoms in 1960 as a youth reclamation program, knows firsthand that if one is black, and growing older in the ghetto known as Bed-Stuy, the way out is difficult. For hundreds of Bed-Stuy girls, Thompson, on his own money and energy, has provided the outlet.

The Atoms' Cheryl Toussaint, Pat Hawkins and Gail Fitzgerald have all become national and world record holders. But Thompson still assesses his team's formidable reputation matter-of-factly: "Everyone seems to know the Atoms because of their athletic achievements, but I'm really more proud of them because of their education—even if they just get out of high school with higher averages. We have 11 girls in col lege now—not on athletic scholarships because that doesn't exist for girls—but we've found ways of piecing it all together."

Training is grueling. One observer sensed the pain and fatigue watching the girls run at the Boys' High School athletic field on a recent early evening.

Thompson is tough, striding around with stopwatches in hand, barking out orders. "Come on, butt that turn . . . Just a carry-through, no lift . . . good girl . . . Keep your form, Shelley . . . good."

Pat Hawkins, one of the world's speediest women and national 200-meter champion, tried to explain how it is with Thompson: "It's hard to describe the total relationship you feel with Freddy, but you just want to please him. You want to get good marks in school, to run well, and act right. In other words, to be a total person."

Pat is one of Thompson's "salvage" projects. When she joined the team in her junior year of high school she was fast on her feet, but lacking foresight or thought of her future. "I wasn't thinking of going to college," she says. "School isn't for everybody and I didn't like it. If I hadn't joined the Atoms and become involved, I would have finished high school, maybe, and be married with two kids."

Instead, Pat Hawkins started absorbing the Atoms academic discipline and improved her studies over the next two years—enough to win an academic scholarship to Long Island University, where she's now a junior.

The Atoms' regimen has carried Cheryl Toussaint from the streets of Bed-Stuy to competition across the U.S., to Colombia's Pan-Am Games, and international competition in London, Paris, Stuttgart, Rumania, and Russia as one of this country's leading middle-distance runners.

Cheryl probably personifies Fred's dream more than any of her sisters. On the track, Cheryl holds the national half-mile record and the world's 600-yard indoor record. Off the track, she's a dean's list math major at New York University on a Martin Luther King Scholarship.

An early start

Cheryl and fellow NYU Atoms, Denise Hooks and Shelley Marshall, are picked up by Thompson at 7 a.m. every day to run with the rest of the team in Brooklyn's Prospect Park for an hour and a half. After a day of classes and studying, the team reassembles at 6 p.m. for two and a half more hours of running.

That Fred Thompson's girls now run around the world has taken more than just his dedication. It's taken a great deal of his money. Until 1969, all funding came out of his own pocket. He is still paying, but gets some assistance from New York Mayor Lindsay's Program on Youth and Physical Fitness.

The Atoms also have a fashion-plate track reputation to uphold. "At the indoor nationals when we won the championship," Thompson recalls, "we had a small feminine-cut blue top. What a psychological lift that provided. You give anyone, especially women, something new and bright to wear, and it helps."

Atoms Coach Thompson is the heart and soul of Brooklyn-based track club.

The Atoms share common lives and common goals. In many ways, they are a family unit with Father Freddy presiding at the head of the table. Many of the original girls are still running, and the team ranges in age from baby Atoms of 8 to Carmen Brown, a 27-year-old Atom who will run in her third Olympics for her homeland of Jamaica.

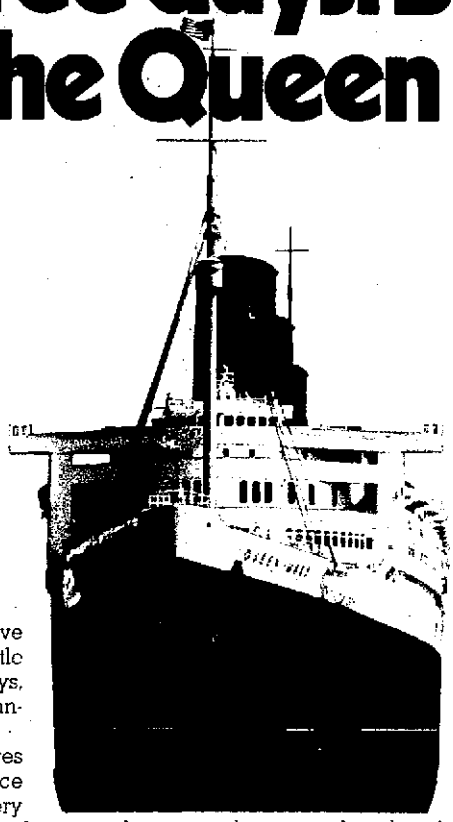

Trials just ahead

With the Olympic Trials scheduled for July 7 and 8 in Frederick, Md., Thompson has taken a four-month leave of absence from ABC to devote all his time to the Atoms.

But to the Atoms, winning isn't everything. Sprinter Pat Hawkins says, "We're here to run and to help the younger girls run, but most important of all, we want to set the right kind of example for them."

Traditionally, athletics has been one of the few avenues of escape open to the black man of the urban ghetto. Fred Thompson is seeing to it that hundreds of women follow this route—but the way leads to college, and dignity.

Warm, carefree days. Balmy nights. And the Queen Mary.

We are Long Beach, hub of Southern California. Five and a half miles of barefoot white sandy beaches. Gentle surf for gentle swims. One of California's finest natural bays, with protected lagoons for small boating. 300 days of sunshine a year.

Your choice of shopping, from huge department stores to small specialty shops. Hotels all the way from nice and expensive, to just nice. Restaurants of virtually every nationality; you could eat your way around the world without ever leaving the city.

So quite naturally, we bought the Queen Mary. To give you one more place to go and sight to see. She was once the fastest luxury liner on the North Atlantic; now she's restored to her former glory as our most unusual landmark. Relive an important part of history aboard the Queen; spend an educational afternoon in Jacques Cousteau's Living Sea. After sightseeing there's plenty of shopping and dining, too.

There's lots to do here. After all, Long Beach is more than just a long beach. For our free full-color brochure, write the Long Beach Convention & News Bureau, 555 E. Ocean Blvd., Long Beach, Ca. 90802.

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

INNER TUBES HELP GIRLS COMPETE WITH STRONGER BOY SWIMMERS.

Sister's a Quarterback

Ever heard of a female quarterback? They have them at the University of California's Davis campus, where boys and girls join in traditionally all-male physical contact sports.

Touch football, soccer, rugby, water polo are completely integrated. Basketball and volleyball competition is so keen, gymnasium lights burn regularly until after midnight.

According to Dr. Dean Ryan who heads the physical education department, the university is one of a few in the nation where physical education is not mandatory. Although students are not required to participate, more than 6000 do; while another 3000 applicants were turned away for lack of facilities.

Two years ago, Davis had nine coed water polo squads; today it has 64; last year's four "integrated" football teams have grown to 22.

Gary Colberg, supervisor of intramural athletics, cites two outstanding girl quarterbacks who have become campus celebrities: "And these girls aren't tomboy types. They're just as cute as they can be."

The only body contact sports banned between the sexes are boxing and wrestling.

JoAnn Blackwell, a junior and physical education major, says, "Girls who used to go to football games, didn't know what was happening. Now girl players like myself watch games on TV and even enjoy calling the plays."

Child-development major Patti Hanson never liked "cutthroat" sports and left her all-girl softball team for the less competitive coed team. "Now, I don't worry about making a mistake," she says. "That takes a lot of tension off the game."

But all students don't agree that coed athletics lacks competition. Some of the girls are real "jocks" says Tom Webb, a graduate student who played on a water polo team with his wife.

"She'd never had a chance to express herself athletically and went out there to win. I'd never seen her that way before, she was really cool."

Pessimistic

Pessimism is the burgeoning mood on U.S. campuses today.

The radical fringe declined from 14 percent of college students in 1970 to 11 percent in 1971. At the same time, however, pessimism became so pervasive that today 30 percent of college students declare they would rather live in a country other than the U.S.

This is the conclusion of a survey, "The Changing Values on Campus," conducted last year by Daniel Yankelovich for the John D. Rockefeller III Fund.

"Only a handful [of students] believe our national policies will lead to peace or economic well-being," Yankelovich reports. Most agree that the U.S. is a "sick society"—as evidenced by Vietnam, pollution, poverty, and prejudice—and needs "drastic reform" of its political, economic, military and penal systems. But, frustrated and pessimistic about the prospects for reform, they are retreating from the activism of the late '60's into more personal concerns.

In their private lives, young people are increasingly hostile to authority in all forms. For example, 64 percent objected to "being bossed around on the job," compared to only 44 percent in 1968.

Students are also increasingly opposed to war. Fifty percent declared that the only justification for war was to counteract aggression—down from 64 percent in 1968.

Only one in ten students believes that we will be out of Vietnam by the November elections, the study reveals, but 90 percent expect to exercise their voting franchise. The outcome of the election will undoubtedly go a long way either to confirm or alleviate their pessimism about this country's resolve to change.

New Day Off

The French government has approved a law granting schoolchildren a day off on Wednesday instead of Thursday each week. They will continue, however, to attend classes on Saturday morning.

The new rule will undoubtedly cause a considerable change in French family life since the Thursday day off has been a French tradition for more than a century, and families planned their activities around it.

Many parents wanted the government to abolish Saturday classes, thus making the entire weekend free, but the authorities decided that it would be better to split the school week into two more or less equal portions.

Bilingual Schools

Massachusetts is the first state in the nation to require bilingual instruction for students with limited English ability.

Starting next September, any Massachusetts school system with at least 20 linguistically handicapped students will have to provide bilingual instruction until the children reach sufficiency in English. The state will foot the additional costs.

An estimated 40,000 children living in the state, most of them Puerto Rican or Portuguese, will benefit from the new law.

You're paid 1/30 of your monthly benefits for each day of confinement from the 1st day.

19. Can Premiums Be Changed or My Policy Cancelled?

Your policy can never be singled out for change or cancellation because of claims or poor health. Rate schedule changes or cancellation could only occur for all policies like yours in your class and State upon proper notice; nothing of the sort is foreseen. You're Safe with Extra Cash/Plus!

20. When Do New Benefit Periods Start?

Each eligible hospital stay for a new sickness or injury starts a new 25-month benefit period. Same or related causes are covered for 25 months; if you're not confined for that ailment for 12 months, a new benefit period begins.

21. What About "Pre-Existing" Conditions?

Even these are covered when hospitalization begins 2 years or more after protection starts.

22. What Few Exclusions Are There?

Only a few—to help keep your premiums low: conditions resulting from declared or undeclared war or act of war; psychotic or psychoneurotic disorder; confinement in a hospital or convalescent facility contracted for or operated by the U.S. Government for treatment of members or ex-members of the Armed Forces. Even maternity is covered when both husband and wife are insured.

My Favorite Jokes

by Joan Rivers

EDITOR'S NOTE: There was that time back in 1965, three days before she was married, when Joan Rivers told her audience, "I'm glad I finally did get engaged. It proved something. Every Sunday my mother used to look at the society pages of The New York Times, crossing out pictures with a big, black crayon. 'You see,' mother would say, 'another homely girl got married.' "

Ever since her marriage to producer Edgar Rosenberg, and the birth of a daughter Melissa, the subjects of her comedy have broadened to include the problems of marriage and motherhood—for Joan Rivers has always taken current experiences as the basis of her comedy material—and she presents the phases in her life in a most personal and immediate comedy style. For instance, a few years after her marriage she confided to an audience that she still had wedding presents she hadn't used—a toaster and an iron.

Since her famous first appearance in 1965 on Johnny Carson's show, Joan has been back as Tonight Show hostess at least 35 times; has played in top clubs and become one of the country's best known comediennes. She recently decided to divide her time between New York and California, and appears almost nightly at Ye Little Club in Beverly Hills (also dubbed the Joan Rivers' Workshop). Here are some of Miss Rivers' most recent comments on her life, past and present:

My mother was so happy when I got married she wore a cheerleading outfit.

How can you feel secure when your husband signs the marriage license in chalk?

Salesgirls can be vicious. I bought a sexy negligee and they gift-wrapped it.

I told Edgar I was going out with another man and he asked me to bring back a pack of cigarettes.

I'm not a homemaker. I just figured out that wash 'n' wear doesn't mean at the same time.

I know a man who thought so little of his wife that when they got divorced he took her to small claims court.

We go out on our New York terrace and breathe in the air. Well, actually you don't breathe in the air in New York—you chew it.

But lately we've had a lot of luck. We just bought a second-hand car that had only been used by a doctor for house calls.

To a New Yorker a long distance call is walking 12 blocks to find a pay phone that works.

Sometimes I'm really unlucky. The last time I ate Chinese food I found a summons in my fortune cookie.

I try to stay young. Last week Edgar told me to act my age. I did and he called an ambulance.

Policemen sure are getting younger and younger. I saw one recently with a cork hanging from his gun.

A few months back some friends of ours who live in New Jersey bought a new car. Well, one day shortly after they bought it they went outside of their house to where it was parked, and it was gone. Naturally they were very upset, but late that evening they were absolutely joyous. The car had been returned with an apologetic note and two tickets to a Broadway show. They went to the show and returned to a house that had been cleaned out.

A friend of mine's apartment is so fancy—even the refrigerator bulb has a shade.

I love to read so much—we go camping in a bookmobile.

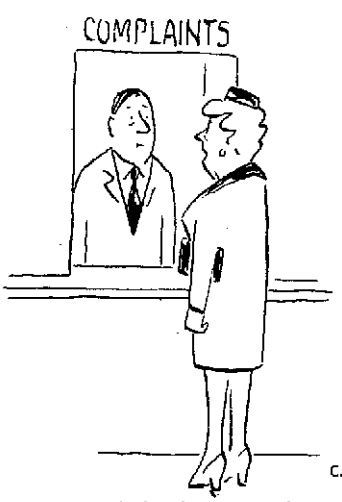

It's to Laugh

"Well, yes and no, but don't quote me."

"So then Hogan slams one out to center field."

"I thought it might brighten your day to know that I'm happy about everything."

Today's sounds add zing to any gathering, and can make best friends of strangers.

We're Having a Record Party

"Come on over to my house, we're having a record party."

That's the thing with today's youngsters, and thanks to modern musical marvels—tapes, cassettes, battery-operated mini-players—you can hear your rock, folk-songs, jazz or whatever, wherever you go—beach, backyard or poolside, as well as in your own living room or basement playroom. And somehow it's more fun to listen to this music with others, than by yourself. So, if you plan to host a record party during the summer months, here are a few suggestions that should help make your affair a success—the kind that will make your friends talk about the great time they had, and want to come back for more:

1. Plan ahead. Figure out the best place to hold the party, make sure there's plenty of room, plus sufficient chairs or other sitting space. Try to make the surroundings festive by hanging up things like posters of performers. Nowadays these often come folded into LP albums, or you can pick them up inexpensively. If you don't have posters, the record jackets themselves make colorful and lively decorations when taped to the wall.

2. You probably can get a pretty good group just by phoning people at the last minute. But you'll inject a little personality and flair into the situation by mailing out invitations, especially the kind that display your own artistic ability and originality.

Festival at home

3. Be a good host. That means trying to arrange a program with some order to it—perhaps a mixture of various musical styles. Make believe you're running one of those big summer pop or rock festivals. Then play the music in a sequence that builds up to an exciting climax. If your friends want to bring some of their own records to play, let them. You might even start up a lively musical discussion or two—such as the comparative virtues of hard-rock and folk-rock.

4. About dancing. More and more youngsters are dancing again—in fact, there are reports of a revival of interest even in such Pleistocene pastimes as jitterbugging. The probability is, especially at indoor parties, that if you don't start dancing yourself, someone else will. That's something to keep in mind when you're planning your space arrangements.

5. You can sing, too. Most of today's songs depend for their punch on words as much as their music. Often the words are printed on the record jackets. You may know them by heart yourself from repeated hearings but it's a good idea to make copies of the words for your guests. That way there's likely to be a lot of singing, and closer attention paid to the music.

Keep noise down

6. Be considerate. Remember that you may want to give another party in the same place some time. Remember that your neighbors may not be as appreciative of rock as you are. Try not to let your party run too long past midnight. If you're holding it in a backyard or on a patio, direct the loudspeakers so that they play for you, not for the whole block. Indoors, keep the sound at a reasonable level.

Serve food, too

7. Music may be soul-food, but that's all. You'll need refreshments and they should be both plentiful and imaginative. In these pages you'll find some ideas for party tidbits you can whip up and serve up, multiplying the ingredients to fit your guest list. Remember that food and drink can turn a good party into a great one.

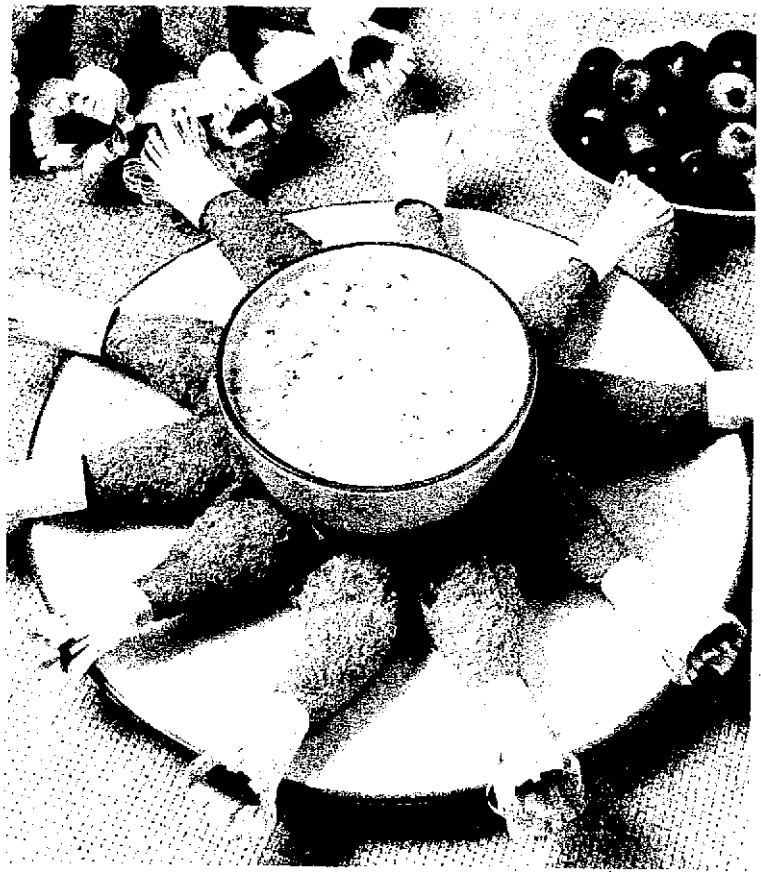

First on your list of refreshments should be a cool, bubbly punch guaranteed to quench the thirst of your most vigorous dancers. The ingredients can be multiplied to serve as many music lovers as you invite.

Orange-Cranberry Sipper

2 cups cranberry juice cocktail
1 can frozen Florida orange juice (6 ounces) concentrate, reconstituted
1 quart sparkling water
Florida orange slices

Mix cranberry juice and reconstituted orange concentrate in pitcher. Chill. When ready to serve, add sparkling water. Garnish with orange slices. Yield: 9 cups.

vorites that just go with good music, good times—and a good dip. Here's one that's bound to win approval.

Tuna Walnut Dip

- 3/4 cup mayonnaise
- 3/4 cup sour cream
- 1/2 cup chopped walnuts
- 1/4 teaspoon each salt and dried leaf thyme
- 2 teaspoons lemon juice
- 2 cans (6 1/2 or 7 ounces each) tuna in vegetable oil

Mix all ingredients. Chill. Turn into bowl and garnish with walnut halves. Serve with potato chips, crisp crackers or celery sticks. Yield: 3 1/2 cups.

If you'd like to serve something a bit more substantial—and you will if you've still got a lot of listening to do—use this special method of oven-frying chicken drumsticks. Figure on having two drumsticks for each guest.

Oven-Fried Chicken Drumsticks Parmesan

- 1/2 cup butter or margarine
- 12 chicken drumsticks
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt, divided
- 1/2 teaspoon Ac'cent
- 3/4 cup flour
- 3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
- 1/2 teaspoon paprika
- 1/2 teaspoon dried leaf oregano
- 1/3 cup buttermilk

Place butter in foil-lined 10 x 15-inch baking pan; put in 425°F. oven until butter melts, about 5 minutes. Sprinkle drumsticks on both sides with 3/4 teaspoon salt and Ac'cent. Mix flour, remaining salt, grated cheese, paprika, and oregano. Dip drumsticks in buttermilk; then roll in flour mixture. Place drumsticks in pan; bake in 425°F. oven 30 minutes; turn and bake another 25 minutes. Serves 6.

Of course, there always comes a time when the music has to stop, but before you send your guests home, it might be a nice idea to treat their sweet tooth to a surprise. Lay in a stock of your favorite ice cream flavor and spoon on this delicious topping that has an added bonus—it's good for you!

Praline Sundae Sauce

- 1/2 cup Grandma's Unsulphured Molasses
- 1/2 cup honey
- 1/16 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla
- Pecans

Blend together molasses and honey. Stir in salt and vanilla. Spoon over ice cream; top with pecans. Yield: 1 cup.

After the last good sounds have died away, you'll have the satisfaction of knowing that your friends have had an unforgettable time without expensive preparations or an elaborate backdrop—just music and plenty of it.

AND THE PIRATES

JENNIE-JO VIEWS A RENEWAL OF SPUR'S OLD PRIVATE WAR WITH ALARM.

SPUR, THIS IS RIDICULOUS! YOUR WAR'S BEEN OVER FOR A LONG TIME.

JAPAN AND THE STATES HAVE BEEN FRIENDS FOR AGES NOW, CHANTRY, DEAR! REMEMBER? YOU HURT A HAIR OF THAT MAN'S HEAD AND YOU'RE A COMMON CRIMINAL!

AND STARTING THAT NONSENSE OVER AGAIN IS PLAIN STUPID. ALL YOU WANT IS FOR HIM TO BACK UP YOUR STORY OF WHAT REALLY HAPPENED ON THIS ISLAND—IN EXCHANGE FOR THE SWORD.

BLAST IT, JENNIE JO, NEVER HAD A CHANCE TO EXPLAIN THAT! LI'L OL' DEVIL JUST YELLED "BANZAI" AN' DISAPPEARED. HE WAS WARNIN' ME TO PUT UP MY DUKES, Y'HEAR?

AND YOU PROMPTLY FORGOT ABOUT GETTING TO THE SENATE—YOU ALSO FORGOT THAT YOU'RE NOW A MIDDLE-AGED ELECTRONICS MANUFACTURER WHOSE COMBAT READINESS SLIPPED AWAY SOME BUSINESS LUNCHES BACK!

YEAH? WELL I'LL JUST BET I'M IN BETTER SHAPE THAN THAT OL' JAPANESE FLYBOY RIGHT NOW.

AND I INTEND TO MAKE SURE THAT NEITHER OF YOU BRING ON A SMALL CORONARY FROM OVEREXERTION.

FYFFE, KEEP THE JUNGLE FIGHTER OUT OF MISCHIEF. I'M GOING TO TALK SOME SENSE TO THE KAMIKAZE KID.

THEN:

THIS OUTFIT WILL BE A TOTAL MESS... I'M SURE THERE MUST BE SNAKES...

OH, MISTER PILOT SAN!

MAY I BE OF SERVICE, MRS. CHANTRY?

YIKE!...GOODNESS! I HOPE YOU'RE MORE REASONABLE THAN YOU LOOK!

ANNIE HAS COME "HOME" TO UNCLE WENDELL'S TREETOP HIDEAWAY—

SO FAR THE ONLY FRIENDS O' YOURS I MET, UNCLE WENDELL — ARE A TIMBER WOLF AN' A SMART LITTLE MONKEY! YA GOT ANY HUMAN NEIGHBORS?

BESIDES LOBO AND DARWIN HERE, THERE ARE WHAT YOU CALL "HUMAN BEINGS", ANNIE! THOSE WHO LIVE HERE IN THE HEART OF THE FOREST FEEL THE SAME WAY ABOUT NATURE I DO!

BUT WHEELER-DEALER B. (FOR BENEDICT) SMIRCH IS A "NEIGHBOR" OF A DIFFERENT STRIPE ....

WENDELL WARBUCKS IS A MERE PAWN IN A CHESS GAME I PLAY WITH THE POWERS THAT BE! HIS UNTIMELY DEATH AT THE CLAWS OF A SAVAGE BEAST WILL BE MY OPENING GAMBIT...

THIS JUNGLE ASSASSIN HAS BEEN TRAINED TO KILL! ONCE WE RELEASE HIM TO WANDER THE FOREST, WENDELL WARBUCKS' DAYS ARE NUMBERED!

BUT SUPPOSE HE MEETS SOMEONE ELSE FIRST... LIKE THAT KID WHO'S VISITING WARBUCKS?

THAT WOULD INDEED BE A TERRIBLE TRAGEDY! BUT THERE'S NO TRAGEDY THAT CAN'T BE TURNED INTO AN ASSET BY BENEDICT SMIRCH!

ME, SANDY, LOBO AN' DARWIN ARE TAKIN' A WALK, UNCLE WENDELL! ANYTHING YA WANT DONE WHILE WE'RE OUT?

NOTHING, ANNIE! JUST KEEP YOUR EYES AND EARS OPEN — AND — WATCH FOR ANYTHING UNUSUAL!
